Several weeks ago we "went" into the subject of California raisins extensively, showing up then the statistical position of the fruit, and dwelt at some length upon the prospects for the sale and the probable course of prices. The statement of the situation at that time has been fully confirmed by subsequent facts, and the market to-day is in better position than has been observed at any time since the harvesting and curing of the crop. At the date of that writing the stock on the Pacific Coast in the hands of packers was placed at several hundred cars, and there appeared to be a stand-off between buyers and sellers, the former hoping to obtain some concession from the views entertained by holders, and the latter maintaining a bold front, and determined to get out of the fruit all that was possible. A prominent Western operator just previous to that time had made a hurried trip to this market, and taking in the situation fully, returned to the "Windy City" bent upon a scheme to engineer a big deal, and he was not long in laying his wires to accomplish the transfer of the goods that were awaiting the coming of just such a man. Communication was opened with those who were carrying the goods, and by quiet labor some big operations were successfully "put through" without arousing any very great attention that a movement was on. Purchases were made for Western account of two-crown, in bags, at 3 to 3¼c., and three-crown at 3¼c. Subsequently a representative of a leading house here started out for the purpose of securing some additional stock, and was well provided with liberal limits should he come across really desirable quality. After a careful canvass of the Riverside and Fresno districts he wired his principals that the bulk of the best stock had been taken up, and that the available quantity of all kinds had been reduced to less than one hundred cars, and that holders' ideas had materially appreciated. The lowest quotations he found for goods of a decent character were 3½c. for two-crown, in bags, and 4c. for three-crown. Upon this basis some additional business was completed, when the market took another turn for the better, and from that time on has continued to show a hardening tendency, until to-day the quotations received from there show an appreciation to 3¾c. and 4¾c. for the two varieties f.o.b., or say the equivalent of 5.15c. and 6.15c. laid down in this market. The stock there is now reduced to so small a quantity that holders are indifferent sellers, the majority having adopted the policy of "take 'em or leave 'em." While the movement was going on at primary sources there was no effort made here to boom the situation, the desire being to quietly absorb the stock there without disturbing the various markets. A rise here meant another enhancement of holders' limits on the Coast, hence it was found necessary to make a show of low prices from the hands of the trade to consumers. The principal holder here quoted prices at a point below the actual cost on the Coast, but at the same time he was careful not to offer quantities in excess of jobbing, the object being to discourage large operations until dealings with the packers had progressed up to a reasonable limit. The point has now been reached where the market can take care of itself. During the past few days the demand has shown a steady gradual increase, and with the improved inquiry the market has been permitted to rise to 5c. for two-crown, in bags, and 6c. for three. As the season progresses, and the requirements of the country come to the fore buyers will be expected to meet a further advance, the full appreciation being dependent entirely upon the necessities of the trade. The stock of California in the country to-day is estimated by competent authorities as between two hundred and fifty to three hundred cars, or say the equivalent of two hundred and fifty to three hundred thousand boxes, all of which is in speculators' hands. When it is considered that fully seven months must elapse before the next crop can be placed upon the market, the available quantity is regarded as small. There is no considerable quantity of foreign fruit to come into competition during that time, the stock to-day being lighter than usual at this period, and primary sources about bare. The indications certainly look favorable for the future but only time and the balancing of accounts will prove the full success of the speculative deal.—N. Y. Commercial Bulletin.

QUALITY OF FLORIDA ORANGES.

As the season advances for Florida oranges the quality of the fruit received usually improves, and at this date commission merchants are generally getting the finest fruit of the season. The reason of this is because the late shipments are from the more southerly sections of Florida, points where frost is seldom felt, and rarely with sufficient force to cause any damage, and orange growers are able to leave their fruit stay on the trees and thoroughly mature, reaching a state of perfect ripeness before shipment, while their more northern neighbors are in danger of frost and have to ship as soon as the fruit ripens sufficiently, often getting it in a little green and not as sweet as it would have been with a little more growth. And so it is usually the case that the best fruit comes latter part of the season. This year, however, seems to be an exception. The quality of the fruit now arriving is much below the standard; in fact the market is glutted with common oranges, many not even good enough to bring expenses. Known marks of fruit from points along the Indian river which are nearly always fancy and salable at a premium, seem to lack quality this year, while from other sections stock is very poor. Receivers believe the fruit has been touched by the frost, and while not very much, sufficiently to cause it to lose its keeping qualities, and while the stock is often apparently good when shipped, by the time it reaches here it has commenced to deteriorate and the ripest is in very bad shape. The rainy season is prevailing in Florida, which also tends to weaken the quality. The recent cold weather damaged so much fruit that growers have been inclined to hold back shipments as long as practicable so that the damaged fruit could be disposed of; and again. Northern markets have not been favorable to induce liberal shipments, and with a much larger yield of California oranges, there has been a disposition to ship the finest stock to more westerly markets, where it would come in direct competition with the California fruit. Formerly a large preparation of the fruit for Western markets came here and was then distributed, but now most markets are supplied direct from Florida, closing a channel where a good many very fine oranges came from, as receivers here could pick out the cream of the stock before re-shipping West. California growers thought the damage to Florida fruit by frost would greatly benefit them, but they now claim that so many poor oranges have found their way into consumption that the people are becoming prejudiced, and that their crop has been damaged instead of benefited, as large quantities have been shipped from Florida to markets which are an outlet for California oranges.—W. Y. Bulletin.

CANADIAN SALT INDUSTRY.

The Goderich Signal recently had this to say regarding the salt industry:

At present the salt trade is in a depressed condition, and some of the works are idle, owing to there being such a number engaged in the manufacture of salt, and having been discovered in so many districts the production has far exceeded the demand. Other towns, unfamiliar with the manufacture or history of salt think when salt is discovered in their limits a gold mine is at hand and rush madly into an overcrowded business. There are now 13 towns in which salt factories are established, and as many more being allowed to stand idle, while others are building and preparing to manufacture. Eight pans such as are used for the manufacture at Goderich would make all the salt that could be sold in Canada. There are today 24 manufactories in the following places: Goderich, Clinton, Seaforth, Kincardine, Blythe, Wingham, Brussels, Courtright, Exeter, Hensall, Sarnia and Port Frank. The total consumption of salt in Canada is about 900,000 barrels. The total sales of Canadian salt is 300,000, just leaving about one-third for Canadian producers, the balance, or two-thirds, is imported from England and the United States. The output of Goderich salt in 1892 was 80,000 barrels, leaving only 220,000 barrels for the other twelve towns, or an average of 18,000 barrels each.

CRITIQUES ON MARCH 3 ISSUE.

It is astonishing the difference in the fish trade of late years. I can easily remember the large lots of white fish, trout, and No. 1 Labrador herring, which were wont to be handled by the larger grocery retailers. Now-a-days they hardly handle the goods. The reasons for this change are many, and good, the principal one perhaps, being that fish handling, not being conducive to the well-being of the flavor of other goods, it had to go.

Another change suggested to my memory by that clip anent "canned goods consumption," is in the direction indicated. A dozen years ago canned lobsters, and salmon, and sardines, completed a general stock, and "Otwell's tomatoes" at about $1.50 doz. were entering the field. Now behold! what the average grocer would decorate with, if his pyramids of cans were abolished I know not. Eventually you will buy a good complete meal in a handy combination can. That yarn of cuffs anent snow is all right if you remember that he is about five feet high.

* * *

I am not a chocolate authority, but would hazard the criticism that the genius who writes in the Philadelphia Record is away off. We certainly get lots of pure chocolate here and plenty of adulterated; but to say that "pure" cannot be sold for 40 or 50 cents per lb. even if "Caracas," is overdoing a so-called "personal experience."

* * *

Is it not perfectly astonishing, that a uniform 200 lb. full weight barrel and 100 lb. bag does not obtain a place as a standard for flour and oatmeal throughout Canada. As it is now roguery has full play, and many stones of rolled oats carry only twelve lbs. instead of the regulation fourteen lbs.

* * *

I would like a little more light on profit sharing. Some one start a post-card symposium.

* * *

Those California people have made a dreadful mux of their dried fruits this year. Not a decent package reached here that saw daylight where it could be snapped up. How they expect to keep trade without regular supplies at reasonable prices, is a matter for query.

* * *

What a pessimistic beggar that English writer on adulterations is. He buys cheap goods probably.

What a treasure a good salesman is: One of these jerky nervous men who are always neat, lively and talkative. When a shop is crowded he keeps his eye open and tends to two or three at once, never failing to freeze closely when a good order is on the stocks. Pushing, hurrying and all the time selling, a good live man can make his wages on a calm, comfortable and busy Saturday alone. They are scarce, and getting scarcer; the trouble being, that being appreciated they become endued with the idea that they ought to start a store themselves, and being "not" appreciated they drift off elsewhere. The best man I ever saw so drifted about five years ago and he is missed yet.

STRAIGHT MOYUNE.

OUR FLOUR IN THE WEST.

Some time ago THE GROCER drew attention to the fact that Canadian flour was not receiving the reception it deserved from our brother colonists in the British West Indies. A well known business man Mr. Jas. E. Riley, of St. John street, Montreal, who has just returned from a business trip down there gives some interesting facts, the result of his investigations which are worthy of publication. Although we cannot agree entirely with his findings they are worthy of attention by Canadian millers. The chief difficulty to the West Indian about Canadian flour is that it turns out too white a bread. This is just what we pointed out some time ago and it is evident that it will take some time to educate our cousins down south to a proper appreciation of the superior advantages of our fine spring wheat flours, but no doubt our millers are prepared to do so. In the matter of packages however it will be seen from the appended that there is a serious complaint and if it is true our millers and flour shippers ought to rectify it without delay. Mr. Riley, after remarking that the West Indians wanted a flour which made a dark loaf because they look upon color as a sign of strength, goes on to say that our barrels are flimsily made of elm with flat hoop, and cannot stand the rough handling they receive in the West Indian trade. They have to be slung from the ships into lighters, dumped on the beach and then carted in bullock waggons over very rough roads to the interior. The result is a broken barrel and a trail of flour, with considerable loss to the purchasers. The American packages, it is asserted, on the contrary are made of ash or oak, and strongly bound with round hoops, and many of them will hold water, and can be sold when empty for 25 to 30 cents for packing cocoa, etc., while the Canadian one is only fit for firewood. This should be a matter easily remedied and there is no doubt that after the Canadian flour men have had the same experience as their American competitors in the trade they will satisfy their West Indian customers quite as well if not better than the latter. About the question of color we repeat that when the West Indians have acquired a taste for a fine white loaf which has quite as much body as the darker one they will have no use for the latter. The following letters which are on file in the Montreal Board of Trade rooms are interesting in connection with the matter:

Your favor of the 19th September came duly to hand, also sample of flour. In reply

I beg to say that I am not a commission merchant, but an importer of British, American, etc., goods, having several stores here and one at Dominica. I do not object to selling goods on commission, if they are likely to be saleable, however. Commission charged for selling here is five per cent. Canadian flour like your sample will bring only $5.28, duty and other expenses paid, some having been recently sold at that price. Flour is sold for cash and on credit, 30 days or more. Duty is 84c. per barrel, and an additional tax of 96c. on every 10 barrels, 94c. per barrel, say: Government bonding warehouse charge for storing is 10c. per barrel for first month, and 5 cents per barrel per month afterwards. Portage is a small charge, 12 cents per five barrels. I regret to say that Canadian flour is in disrepute among bakers here, owing to its making too white bread, the masses being accustomed to a darker bread made from American flour, which brings a higher price (now $6 to $6.24.) It is also complained, I learn, by buyers of Canadian flour that barrels are not as closely made as American and contents escape. If, after information I give you, you can see your way to ship flour here, I will do my best to dispose of it, but I would not advise you to send more than thirty to fifty barrels.

DELOS J. MARTIN.

Autigua, W. I.

Your valued favor has duly come to hand contents of which have had our care.

We are in good position to handle your consignments of flour; are already agents for several Canadian shippers, but up to now their goods have not given satisfaction. What we require here is something similar to New York city mills flours, principally the brands called Hungarian O.O. and St. Lawrence, which are manufactured by Messrs. Jones & Co. If you could ship us similar goods, no doubt we could work up a good business for you. We advise you to ship one hundred barrels as a trial, and to ship round hoop barrels in preference to the flat hoop ones, which are not liked here; in fact, the former are preferred for packing coffee, cocoa, etc., for shipment to France, whilst the others cannot be sold for same purposes.

We do not buy for our account; we receive consignments. We can give you the best references. Flour is sold in notes payable at four months; we discount them at 6 per annum, and remit net proceeds of account sales in 90 days. Guadeloupe bank bills on Paris at a cost of 2½ per cent. premium. No exchange on London or New York.

Just now the article is in full supply and selling at 30 and 31 francs per barrel. We look for an improvement very shortly.

The equivalent value of a dollar is 5f. 25c. that is 5 francs and 25 centimes. Enclosed please find a pro forma account sale, which will fully post you up as to charges.

We remain, dear sirs,

CHATS WITH BUSINESS MEN.

The enhanced price has qualified the coffee bean for use for personal adornment. At least M. George Stanway is responsible for the statement that it is to be used as a setting for scarf pins to be worn by the wealthy, and Mr. George Musson endorses him.

* * *

Mr. George Musson showed me an interesting map a few days ago. Its purpose is to show the coffee zone of Brazil, and on it are depicted the old coffee lands, new lands not bearing, untouched lands, and lands not fully bearing. "You will observe," said Mr. Musson, as he ran his fingers over the map, "that the new coffee lands are getting further away from the shipping ports, and this, our advices state, is one of the things that is tending to keep up prices. You know that the coffee is largely brought down to the coast on pack mules, and of course when they have to bring it so far the cost of transportation is greater. Then being longer on the journey the liability to damage en route is greater, and this to some extent is the cause of the difficulty in getting good grades of coffee. They tell me that the sufferings of these pack mules is terrible. Not only the hair, but even the skin itself is rubbed off the backs of the poor brutes," added Mr. Musson, as, with a sympathetic shudder, he laid down the map and turned his attention to his business.

"It is surprising to me," remarked a broker to me Tuesday, "that notwithstanding that the price of syrup is now about 50 per cent. lower than it was some years ago, the consumption has not only not increased but it has actually fallen off, and that considerably. That is an instance for you that low prices do not always stimulate consumption."

* * *

"A feature of the dried fish trade this season," remarked Mr. Lockhart Watt the other day as he paused in the operation of testing teas in H. P. Eckhardt & Co.'s, "is that cases of whole codfish, with bone and skin taken off, have completely superseded the old style fish that came to us with skin and bone all attached. In appearance the boneless and skinless article is much more attractive, being so much cleaner. Another advantage is that it is more easily handled than the old style of fish.

I understand that an effort is being made to persuade the retail trade to sell mottled soap at an uniform price. The manufacturers are the originators of the movement.

A GROCER WHO WORE DIAMONDS.

The place that knew A. E. Saunders knows him no more, and his creditors are afraid that it will know him no more for ever. Last Monday week he quietly sold out his business at 245 Broadview avenue to Langford Bros., and in Bradstreet's of Friday last is a notice of a bill of sale for $375 given by A. E. Saunders to John J. Langford. Among the creditors he has left behind to mourn the loss of sums of money ranging from small amounts up to $1,700 are the Toronto Biscuit Co., J. W. Lang & Co., S. K. Moyer, Sloan & Crowther. Mr. Saunders was a man who shone both in the social and in the sporting world. At least he essayed to do so. He wore diamonds that would have vied in brilliancy with those of Boss Tweed's. Masked balls was his delight, where he usually represented an Italian count. In sporting circles he was known as the driver of a fast horse. In the social sphere he generally shined in company with Mrs. Saunders. His present address is supposed to be somewhere in the United States, but exactly where his creditors would like to find out.

SPRAY YOUR TREES AND VINES.

In the general practice of spraying lies, more than anything else, the prosperity of the horticulturalists of this country. Every worthy consideration appeals for the increase of the production of fruits; the public health and happiness would be promoted, and prosperity and good citizenship would be increased, by such an advance in fruit growing as spraying may secure, by such an abundant fruitfulness of our orchards and vineyards as would follow the destruction of insect pests and fungus diseases. More and better fruit means better men and women. The harvest of the tree and of the vine betters the character of him and makes possible that harvest, as well as of him that of it eats. More fruit and less meat would usher in a higher civilization. Will it pay? is naturally the first question that presents itself for answer in any consideration of spraying. This question is the universal touchstone nowadays. If it pays to spray, we want to know it, that we may adopt this method of fighting insects and fungi, and get our share of the financial reward. If it does not pay to spray we want to know it, that we may not be led into an unprofitable undertaking. We may be in the business of fruit growing for our health, but we are also in it for the profit that may be made. It has been fully demonstrated without any reasonable doubt that spraying is the only satisfactory remedy to prevent the depredations of insect pests and fungus diseases affecting fruits and garden crops, that the spraying outfit has now become as necessary an implement on a fruit farm or vegetable garden as a cultivator or plow. Spraying fruit trees, plants and vines for the prevention of the ravages of insects and fungus diseases is no longer an experiment, but a necessity, in order to get large crops of perfect fruit. For full information on this subject, address William Stahl, manufacturer of Excelsior Spraying Outfits, Quincy, Ill., who will send, free, a full and complete treatise on this subject.

DEATH OF MR W. J. MASON.

One of the most highly respected citizens of Peterborough passed away Monday morning in the person of Mr. Wm. J. Mason. Mr. Mason had been in poor health for some time, but was able to be about until last week, when he was taken very ill, and rapidly sank until death came.

Mr. Mason was the eldest son of the late Francis Mason, who was a native of Sligo and came to Canada in 1827, settling in Cobourg, where Mr. Mason was born in 1834. Six years later the family came to Peterborough, and Mr. Mason resided there until the time of his death. In 1856 he entered the mercantile establishment of Mr. Thos. Bradburn, and subsequently became a partner in the business, which was carried on for a number of years under the firm name of Mason & Bradburn, with a branch store in Lindsay. The partnership was dissolved about 1878, Mr. Mason having been altogether twenty-two years connected with the business. In 1880 Mr. Mason entered the grocery business which he carried on continuously, the firm for nearly two years past being W. J. Mason & Sons.

Mr. Mason was a zealous and consistent member of the George st. Methodist church, and an active member of the official boards. For many years, and up to the time of his death, he was Secretary of the Trustee Board and a Steward, and for a number of years he was Superintendent of the Sunday school. He will be greatly missed in the church, where his counsel was always looked for in important matters.

As an advocate of temperance principles Mr. Mason was identified with the organization, when a young man, of the junior Lodge of Sons of Temperance. Many of Peterboro's citizens were members of the lodge and will remember his untiring efforts, in connection with late Thos. White, to advance the interests of the cause. Subsequently in all efforts made to further the cause of temperance he took part and rendered valuable assistance.

He did not take much part in municipal affairs, but was for a number of years an active member of the Board of Trade.

Mr. Mason was married in July, 1863, to Miss Victoria Morrow, daughter of the late Alexander Morrow, who survives him. He also leaves five children to mourn his death, one son, Rupert, having died two years ago, on March 7th, 1891. The surviving children are Mr. W. A. Mason, Capt. Earnest F. Mason, and Walter Mason, and Misses Bertha V. and Edith M. Mason. Mr. Mason was a man who was respected in every sphere of life. In his home he was kind and loving, in business a man of integrity, and he was a good citizen who always gave sympathy and a helping hand to every effort made to advance the material or moral interests of the town—a citizen whose departure is a loss and whose place will be hard to fill. The funeral took place on Wednesday afternoon.

DRY GOODS.

Trade during the past week has seemed much brisker than usual on account of the large number of visiting milliners and merchants. The millinery houses were all busy and report a satisfactory trade in all respects. The volume of millinery sold fully equals that of previous years, and some dealers claim that it surpasses last year. The weather was certainly cold for warm weather goods, but the exhibits of the spring novelties seemed to have driven away any chilly ideas, and orders were freely placed. The dry goods houses got a fair share of the trade, but dealers complain that the milliner prevents the merchant staying in the house long enough to place a large order; as she demands his presence continually, to aid her in the purchase of millinery materials.

All buyers were not in the city last week; not more than one half of those expected were present. This week has seen a large number of merchants present, who were not present at the millinery openings. Many merchants are not expected until the warm weather causes the clay in the farmer's fields to appear above the snow.

Letter orders are brisker than at any time since the new year began. Many small dealers are ordering prints in this way; but general goods are in good demand in post orders. Road orders are few as most travellers are in the houses.

There has been quite a furore among the trade concerning the spring edition of THE DRY GOODS REVIEW. Merchants have passed complimentary remarks without stint, and many claim that it is the finest thing of the kind ever produced in Canada. Copies of it have been in great demand, on account of the intrinsic merit of the articles, the brilliancy of the advertising and the artistic appearance of the journal.

NOTES.

A job line of garter webs is being shown by John Macdonald & Co. These goods are perfect in every respect and good patterns. They also have the Hygienic garter web which is new on this market. A fresh importation of ladies' dress shields, in which are some new and popular numbers, is to hand. In place of the 3-yard length Amazon skirt binding, they are now importing it in 18-yard lengths, thus saving remnants. In the rug department they show three numbers in lined loin cloths. These are new goods on this market and are taking with the general trade.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling have opened up about 120 packages of American novelties, including new designs in challies, Llamas, Bedford Cords, Indigoes, Turkey Reds, art draperies and art plushes. These goods are very fine in point of patterns and colorings; in fact they are the newest things in the American market. They have passed into stock a beautiful range of fast black sateens in regular and Henrietta finish.

John McDonald & Co. are issuing circular No. 4, which will deal exclusively with the men's furnishing and haberdashery departments. The idea is to enable men who are not in the market to order goods from this circular and have them filled with despatch and accuracy.

Linens in tablings and other general lines are in full range in the staple department of Wyld, Grasett & Darling. They have done a huge trade in these goods during the past week, their exhibit seeming to please visiting buyers.

Fennis flannel for blouses is being shown in a new assortment by W. R. Brock & Co. It is shown in spots principally and in all colors, though navy and white and black and white lead slightly. Their quality retails at 50 cts., and is good value at this price.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. have cleared a manufacturer's stock of gauntlet kid gloves in black, tan and assorted browns, which they quote at $6.50 and $9.50 per dozen—prices considerably under value.

W. R. Brock & Co. are selling a very large quantity of new trouserings in almost endless variety of neat small patterns, including Diagonals, Whip cords, Bedford Cords and Stripes in wool and worsted. The leading shades are blues, blue-greys and blue-drabs.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. have this week received and passed into stock repeats of their famous indigo prints. There is a scarcity of these goods in the market.

W. R. Brock & Co. are opening up another shipment of Hermsdorf's hosiery. Embroideries and repeat orders of art draperies are also to hand. A repeat order of their celebrated lines of flannelette shirts, F. 20 and Hector, has been passed into stock; these can be retailed at 30 and 40 cents respectively. A Canadian line of stainless black and seamless hosiery called Leader is of extra weight, and can be retailed two pairs for 25 cents.

Gordon, MacKay & Co.'s special numbers in Victoria lawns are again fully represented in their stock; their 45 inch lines at 8½, 10 and 13½ cents are worthy the attention of all keen buyers.

A line of domestic cashmere hosiery in ladies' and children's is being shown by Caldecott, Burton & Spence. The ladies' sizes retail at 25 cents, and they claim that on account of the weight and the merino heels and toes they cannot be beaten for a leader at this popular price.

Gordon, MacKay & Co. show a range of novelties in spring wraps. The color effects are striking and attractive. The price, $9 and $12.50 per dozen, makes them popular and rapid sellers.

About 75 cases of parasols have been opened up this week by Caldecott, Burton & Spence. The goods show up even better than sample and customers who have placed orders will undoubtedly be well pleased. Their stock will be well assorted, especially in fancies, and visitors should see their extra large exhibit. Fancies are generally in good demand at this time, and the first buyers are best served. German fabric gloves and stainless hosiery are being received in large quantities, but are also being re-shipped very fast.

John Macdonald & Co. have received a further instalment of art silks for decorative purposes. Some very new and choice designs are shown. Laces are in extra strong demand, and they are making special efforts to keep their stock well assorted by constant and numerous additions. Their stock of ribbons is still very complete despite the heavy demand for these goods during the past week.

Alexander & Anderson are showing a good range of crocodile cloth in all colors; light greens and fawns are especially taking. This French fabric is a taking novelty in medium priced dress goods. Plaid surah silks are shown in variety sufficiently large to meet the huge demand for this class of goods. Their customers will not lack for range in these goods. They exhibit a nice line of French printed challies in black and tinted grounds. These goods are still popular. Their cable repeats of prints will be to hand in a short time.

"Are these the French sardines that you are giving me?" "Now, as to that I couldn't say, for they were pasht shpaking whin we opened the box."—Inter-Ocean.

"Have you any more of those genuine antiques?" asked Mrs. De Porkue. "No'm," replied the dealer. "These strikes has kep' us away behind with our orders."—Washington Star.

[This department is made up largely of items from travellers and retailers throughout the Dominion. It contains much interesting information regarding the movements of those in the trade. The editor will thank contributors to mail copy to reach the head office Tuesday.]

The rice crop in the south this year is estimated to be 215,000,000 pounds.

Mrs. P. P. Steele, of Lemondville, was touring the wholesale houses Tuesday.

Nearly thirty-three million pounds of maple sugar were manufactured in the United States last year.

Friday is a suitable day to serve Burnham's Clam Bouillon, it will take the place of fish and prove an acceptable change.

The total outturn of tea from the Assam Valley during 1892 has been 44,617,676lbs., against 49,467,373lbs. in 1891, or a decrease of 4,849,697lbs.

Mr. Crae, of MacEldevry & Crae, Cuelph, was in Toronto, this week. He reports business in the country very fair for the season with prospects good.

The butter and cheese makers of Iowa are exercised over the fraudulent sale of oleomargarine and butterine which is threatening to destroy the dairy industry of the country.

A. G. Marmion, who has done a flourishing business on the south east corner of Gerrard and Parliament Sts., is removing to more convenient and spacious premises a few doors north of Gerrard on the same side of the street.

There are made in San Francisco every month from 7,000,000 to 9,000,000 cigars, from 1,250,000 to 2,000,000 cigarettes and 30,000 to 40,000 pounds of manufactured tobacco. The tobacco leaf used is all brought from the East.

According to reports from England the orders to be sent out this month for direct shipments of the new season's teas from Hankow to Odessa will be considerably less than those of last year, which were smaller than the previous year.

Bracebridge boasts of several fine general stores among whom is J. P. Humphries, now the "pioneer establishment" of the town. He carries in stock, a splendid assortment of fancy groceries. Humphries' blended tea at 40c. per lb. is known from one end of the district to the other.

In THE GROCER of Feb. 17 was inadvertently published an item in which it was inferred that the Inglis Woolen Mills at Wingham had been a detriment to the town. We have since learned that the statement was not warranted by the facts, and its publication is regretted. The item was clipped from a western paper.

It is announced that the Moncton, B. C. sugar refinery will enter the combine and that legislation will be sought to amend its charter with that end in view.

W. R. Riddle, who bought out John Foster a few years ago and who has been doing business on the N. W. corner of Gerrard and Parliament St. has sold out and retired from the business a poorer but a wiser man. His experience is that the credit system is rotten and that there is much room for improvement in this line in Toronto.

D. Perkins of the firm of Perkins & McCracken, who was in business in the premises previously occupied by Mr. Clarke of the Old Tea Company fame, King street east, has sold out his share in the business to Mr. McCracken who will continue to run it if he can get a renewal of the lease. It is a good stand, and a good business man should be successful.

In consequence of the imposition of a duty on Venezuelan coffee, very little Maracaibo and Laguayra coffee comes into the United States, Europe taking the bulk of the supply. Never were stocks of those grades in first hands in this market so light as at present, and as they are very desirable sorts the market feels the shortage, prices for similar kinds being higher than they would otherwise be.

FIRST SALE OF CALIFORNIA ORANGES.

The first carload of California oranges that ever came to Montreal were on view Tuesday morning at the Montreal Fruit Exchange, 185 McGill street, and were sold at 2.30 the same afternoon. It will be followed regularly by many others. The "Earl Fruit Company," whose delicious pears, peaches, grapes, nectarines, prunes, etc., delighted Montrealers all last summer, are the shippers. They will send large consignments of the richest products of the far famed Sacramento valley weekly, tri-weekly and, perhaps, daily to their agents there, the Montreal Fruit Exchange. As the fruit goes there in special cars in quick succession, in perfect condition, grocers and fruit dealers will always have a full supply. These fruits are unsurpassed and perhaps unequalled in the world. The Fruit Exchange will hold regular trade sales, conducted by Mr. Potter, auctioneer, whose success with cargo sales of fruit and teas is well known. They will also deal in Mediterranean oranges and lemons, Florida oranges and fruits of all kinds. The coming spring and summer promises to be exceedingly active in this line. The prices at the sale referred to were as follows: Seedlings—126 size, 2½; 150 size, 2¾; 176 size, 2¾; 200 size, 3½; 216 size, 3½; 250 size, 3½. Navels—3¾ to 4½, sizes, 112's to 176.

GIFT GIVING GROCERS.

The cheap cash groceries which distribute crockery as gifts to purchasers, seem to be on the increase. One wholesaler in this city has between thirty and forty such stores, and while he condemns the system, claims that he is forced into it and finds it a profitable but unpleasant method of trade. We find in one of our contemporaries the following bit of rhyme bearing on the stores as follows:

BRIBING BUYERS.

Says madam, with a fiery eye,
"Your fine mixed tea you made me try;
And poorer stuff I never bought,
Pay back my cash you surely ought."
"Not quite so fast," the grocer said,
"Pray don't by partial view be led;
Forget not, when you bought that tea,
A China set you got from me.
"Put both together, madam, dear,
And I am sure you'd think it queer,
Were both as good as one should be;—
You paid for more than the mixed tea.
"And more you got at the one price
Which would be right, were the tea nice;
Don't grumble that you cannot set
For price of tea, both tea and set."

In passing along Myrtle Avenue, Brooklyn, on our way from the Food Exposition, we stopped to view one of these hybrid stores. It was located on a corner where one-third of the walk was encumbered with dirty baskets of cheap and flashy looking crockery and glassware, intermingled with cheap and unattractive articles of food. The windows were filled with gaudily painted ware and well covered with signs—"Famous Coffee, 20 cents per pound"; "Our Famous Teas, 35 cents, no presents"; "Jelly, 3 cents per pound."

Barnum found that he could make a fortune humbugging the people, and the gift-giving grocers have discovered they can do the same, and they do it. The gift-giving stores flourish only in certain neighborhoods, such as are made up of the working classes and a large foreign population. They cannot be regarded as competitors by first-class grocers, for their stock, as well as their methods, are vulgar or cheap, and their patrons are of the sort that do not mind being swindled as to quality of food, so long as the eye is gratified by some bit of crockery and glassware received as compensation.—New England Grocer.

MATCHES.

If the worthy gentlemen who control a monopoly of the trade in matches in the United States will give ear to reason they will improve the quality of their product, even if in so doing they have to sacrifice a tithe of their present profits. Some of the matches now sold are a nuisance because of their unreliability, while others are a constant source of danger to property, if not to life, even in the hands of careful people. A portion of these latter drop a portion of the inflammable composition invariably, and if it happens to light on combustible material a fire is pretty sure to result. Much clothing has been ruined in this way, and no end of profanity provoked. Another class of dangerous matches is the kind so highly charged with explosives that when struck a part of it flies through the air to a considerable distance, and is likely to do harm to whatever it happens to reach in its flight. At least one instance is known where the sight of eyes was lost through material from one of these percussion matches, to say nothing of less serious hurts and annoyances following their use.—Insurance World.

BUYER AND SELLER.

The Journal of Commerce of a recent issue answers the following question: "Is there any way to compel a man to sell what he offers for sale in plain figures, or has he the option to refuse the sale of goods so offered?" The gist of the answer given by our contemporary is contained in the sentence: "The customer may choose the store at which he will trade, but the storekeeper has the same power of choice as to his customers."

If the man finds that what is offered him in the store is not equal to the sample shown in the window, while he is at liberty not to buy, the storekeeper is also free to choose whether or not he will remove his sample from his window and sell it for his customer's accommodation, sell him something exactly like it at the price given, or decline to sell him at all. The province of the law is not to interfere between buyer and seller, but to leave both free to act as they please, regarding both parties as competent to judge what is their convenience or other advantage in the matter. The folly of a retailer offering an article at a certain price and then trying to work off an inferior article at the same price, is apt to bring its own punishment, as fair dealing is pretty sure to bring its proper reward. The law cannot undertake to make a man deal fairly, and is reluctant to interfere with a transaction completed, presuming that, as a general thing, people who trade are competent to attend to their own business, without the intervention of a third party. And this principle commends itself to the common sense and experience of mankind.—Commercial Enquirer.

WONDERFUL INTEREST.

The Boston Retail Grocers' Association has hit upon a novel but effective plan for securing a good attendance at their regular monthly meetings. On each meeting day one or two agents for some of the numerous food products are given the privilege of furnishing a practical illustration of the merits of their respective articles disguised in various edibles which go to make up a toothsome and appetizing collation. The interest which the membership take in the meetings under the new system is said to be simply wonderful.—Business World, Toledo, O.

PAPER BARRELS.

Among the many uses to which paper has been put in later years none seem more curious than the vessels made to hold fluids. And just as one as grown accustomed to paper pails and basins, a new industry started up, in the construction of paper barrels. By means of ingenious machinery the pulp is carried along on an endless blanket which allows the water to drain off. As it thus goes on its way the pulp is deposited upon cylinders. In about four minutes there is enough collected upon one cylinder to make one barrel, upon which being the case, the cylinder is removed and the barrel body set away in a drying room, where it remains for one day. It is then dampened again, and, under hydraulic pressure, is shaped into the regular form. Again it is dried and receives the finishing touches.—Ex.

TOTAL COFFEE PRODUCTION.

Concerning the great and valuable staple, coffee, an authority has been doing some figuring, the result of which he furnishes the Commercial Enquirer. Brazil produces over 5,000,000 bags of 130 pounds each, annually, representing a value of $100,000,000. Jamaica produces 60,000 bags, valued at an average of $22 each; Java (Sumatra) Padang, etc, 225,000 mats of 65 pounds each, at 25 cents per pound; Java, Old Government, 335,000 mats at 25 cents; Guatemala, 150,000 bags of 150 pounds each; Central America, Costa Rica, Salvador, etc., 500,000 bags, Mexico, 250,000 quintals, 100 pounds each; Aden (Mocha), 75,000 bags; and Venezuela, etc, 300,000 bags. Thus the total crops of the world amount to about $140,000,000 annually.

The present market is high, and planters are making fortunes. A period of from four to five years must intervene between the planting of coffee trees and the production of a profitable yield. In the meantime the place must be cared for and kept up, and loss of interest placed to debit side of the ledger. After the lapse of this period, with fair prices, every year should yield very handsome returns, provided the plantation is honestly and properly managed. The superintendency is almost invariably placed in the hands of stewards, as the owner rarely lives on the estate.

The Best Grocers Make
a point of Keeping it always in Stock.

[As there is often inequality in the prices of the various sellers on this market, owing to differences in buying conditions and other circumstances, and as prices are modified by both quantity and quality, the quotations given below and in our Prices Current necessarily take a wide range.]

TORONTO MARKETS.

TORONTO, March 9, 1893.
GROCERIES.

There has been no material change in the situation since a week ago. Trade is fairly good and if anything rather more satisfactory. Coffees continue quiet but firm. In spices the feature is the advancing tendency of ginger. Sugars remain just about the same, quiet and firm. Syrups are beginning to move and stocks are getting easier. Molasses are unchanged here, but they are firmer outside. The situation in teas continues much about the same, the demand fair and prices firm.

COFFEES.

Coffees are moving regularly but not in any great quantity. Market continues bare of good grades. Indeed, some houses are out of fine coffees and it will be some time before new stock can arrive. Prices remain unchanged. Rios are quoted at from 21 to 22c. for the good article. Some Rios may be obtained as low as 20c., but they are said to be full of black beans.

Latest advices received by Musson & Co. regarding Rio coffees read: "Our market is firm. There has been a big advance in currency prices since we last wrote, and owing to the comparatively small quantity of coffee now on the market, it is almost impossible to get holders to make any concessions in quotations. Good coffees are exceedingly scarce and under very high premiums, in fact, coffees grading type 5 or better can hardly be bought, and it is difficult to get a good lot of type 6 together."

DRIED FRUIT.

Except probably for a little more movement in currants the volume of business remains much about the same as a week ago. Currants are in a strong position. They are dearer for importation by direct steamer and there has been an advance in the United States market. The only effect the outside situation has had on this market, is to make holders feel a little stiffer. The local demand for currants is good and from now on it may be expected to assume still greater proportions. The prices ruling are, 5½ to 6¼c. for half barrels, 6 to 6¼c. for cases. Patras sell at from 7 to 7½c. according to package and quality, and Vostizzas at 7½ to 10c. Valencia raisins have advanced a full ¼c. in New York. Demand here continues only moderate, at prices ranging all the way from 4¼ to 7½c., outside figures being for layers. Prunes continue to gather strength, although the movement is light; prices range from 7¼ to 9c. Dates quiet and unchanged and the ruling price is 5½c.

RICE AND SPICES.

Ginger is still advancing. One house on the street a few days ago tried to repeat an order at a price given three weeks before and an advance of nearly 3c. a pound was asked. Rice remains quiet and unchanged.

SUGAR.

The market remains in much the same condition as a week ago. The movement is only moderate and prices are firm. The refiners are just as firm as ever in their views. They refuse to shade prices and seem to be perfectly indifferent in regard to accepting orders, and say that at the present price granulated shows no profit. One house on the street offered to accept an offer for a nice little lot of sugar provided it was given two weeks, but it was not entertained.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

There is still a scarcity of bright syrups, and some that have been held here for some time are beginning to move; prices unchanged. New Orleans molasses advanced 1c. a gallon in the States and advices indicate higher prices. On this market an offer made at an old figure was not attended.

TEAS.

There is not much that is new to note. There has been a good enquiry for low grade Japans, of which the wholesale trade here possess very small stocks, and all are asking for low grades. When what is held here and in Montreal is exhausted it is expected that higher prices will have to be paid for more. The local demand is good for Indian and Ceylon teas. In England prices for these teas have so advanced as to cause a check in the importation, and the houses here are simply selling from stock they have on hand. Fine Darjeelings are commencing to be offered. Low grade Young Hysons are reported to be a little easier in England.

MARKET NOTES.

[Importers, wholesale merchants and manufacturers should send any items intended for this department so that they may reach the head office not later than Wednesday morning. The editor will always welcome such information.]

Chicago canned meats are higher.

Warren Bros. & Boomer are offering a pure sugar syrup as bright as the corn product.

Clemes Bros. received a car of nice bananas this week, and they report a ready sale for them.

Sloan & Crowther are just receiving some extra good value in Japan teas from 20 to 25c. a pound.

There has been an advance in some of the chocolates. J. W. Cowan & Co.'s "diamond" is 1½c. and plain rock 5c. dearer.

Warren Bros. & Boomer are putting a new and very attractive 5-lb. tin package of their extra choice blend of tea on the market.

"Orient" tea is fast becoming a household word. The sale of this tea is reported by the agents of Eby, Blain & Co. as far surpassing their most sanguine expectations.

Mail advices from London, England, to W. J. A. Lamb & Co., regarding teas, say: "Market still very firm for common grades. China's under 7d. and Indian and Ceylons under 10d. are really not worth attention. Medium grades, at from 11d. to 1s. 2d. show better grades."

Warren Bros. & Boomer report that they have arriving the finest Ceylon tea seen here this season. The price is high, but the tea is a beauty.

"Royal Arms" cheese, the highest grade packed, is securing a good hold on the market. Eby, Blain & Co. are manufacturers' representatives in this section for these high grade goods. See their advertisement in this week's issue.

We draw your attention this week to several cuts in this paper with a moral (use the "Pittsburgh"), all people who use lamps will quickly perceive what is meant, and those who have their own interests at heart, will do well to call on Gowans, Kent & Co., Toronto or Winnipeg, who are sole agents in Canada for this celebrated lamp, the "Pittsburgh."

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

The feeling is rather easier in butter, although there have been no material changes in prices. The disposition to sell seems better. The market is not overstocked, but holders seem more inclined to make concessions in order to make sales. Pound rolls and prints are selling at from 20 to 23c.; large rolls at 18 to 20c.; fine dairy tubs 20 to 21c. Bakers' butter is still scarce, and it demands firm prices. There is no great quantity of creamery butter selling. Quite a lot of old stock is still held, only an odd tub of it going out now and then, but none of it is sold under 20c. Good creamery tub sells at 23 to 25c., and pound prints at 27c., but the movement is light.

There is no material change in cheese. Stocks here are light, offerings small and demand good. We quote 12 to 12½c., and for Stilton 13 to 14c.

PETROLEUM.

The Petrolia Advertiser in its weekly report says: "Crude remains about the same figure, $1.18½, with not very much business doing. As the spring and warmer weather approaches the drill will be at work, we are informed, perforating some of our oldest territory, and, as late developments have shown, the property owners have good reasons to warrant this policy. Drillers have very large contracts awaiting the advent of spring, and a very busy time is expected."

Following are the quotations here:—Canada refined oil, 13½ to 14c.; carbon safety, 17½ to 18c.; Canada water white, 19c.; American water white, 21 to 22c.; photogene, 25c.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—Market remains in about the same position. Offerings limited, and $1.40 to $1.50 would be paid for a good sample.

DRIED APPLES—Quiet and unchanged, at 5¼c. to 5½c.

EVAPORATED APPLES—There is a good enquiry for round lots at 9c., but there does not appear to be any offering. Old stock could be got at 7½ to 8c., but new stock would probably fetch 7½ to 10c.

EGGS—The feeling is easier. Receipts are fairly liberal, although no great stocks are on hand. Demand is merely of a hand to mouth character, and prices range from 20 to 22c., and are easy at those figures. Pickled eggs seem to be out of the market.

MARKETS—Continued

HONEY—Market continues about the same—dull and easy, with offerings light. Dark is quoted at 9c. in sections, and white at 15c. The latter is still scarce while the former is plentiful.

DRESSED POULTRY—Continues scarce and prices unchanged. Chickens are quoted at 65 to 75c. per pair, ducks 85c. to $1 per pair, turkeys at 14c. per pound, and geese at 9 to 10c. per pound.

POTATOES—The market is if anything a little steadier and farmers' deliveries are light on account of the impassable condition of the roads. Carloads here changed hands on track at 80 to 82c. and store lots sell at 95c. to $1 a bag.

ONIONS—Dull and unchanged, at $2 to $2.25 per barrel.

HOGS—Market quiet and easy at 16½ to 17c. for '92's.

HOGS AND PROVISIONS.

The weakness in the dressed hog market noted a week ago has continued, and it has been particularly marked during the last few days. Packers are willing to pay $8.25 for car lots, but holders are standing out for more. It seems that quite a few are being held, but they will necessarily be driven out if the present mild weather continues. The range of prices is from $8.25 to $8.30. All hog products are in good demand at firm and unchanged prices.

BACON—Long clear 10½ to 11c. Smoked backs are 12½ to 13c., bellies 13½c., rolls 10c.

HAMS—In good demand and firm at 13 to 13½c.

LARD—Pure Canadian is 13c. in tubs, and 13½c. in pails. Compound 10½ to 11c.

BARREL PORK—U. S. heavy mess is $22.50. Canadian short cut $22. Canadian heavy mess $20 to $21.

DRESSED MEATS—Beef forees are 4½ to 5½c., hindquarters 7 to 8¼c., veal 6½ to 8c., mutton 7 to 8c., lamb 8c. to 8½c.

GREEN FRUIT.

Trade in green fruits has developed no strikingly new features during the week. Business is healthy and is being stimulated by the favorable weather. Oranges are in good demand at firm and unchanged prices. Floridas are the most sought after. Receipts are fair. In lemons there is a good demand at firm prices for all desirable stock. Cranberries are out of the market. We quote as follows:—Valencia oranges at $4.50 to $4.75 per case, Jamaicas $2.50 to $2.75 per box, Floridas $3 to $3.50 per box, Palermos $2.50 per box; lemons $3 to $3.50 for choice and $3.75 to $4 for fancy; bananas $1.75 to $2.50; pineapples 20 to 30c., Malaga grapes $8 to $9, fancy cranberries $10 per barrel, common $1 per basket; apples, $1.25 to $1.75 for market stock and $2.50 to $3 per barrel for fancy.

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.

The brisk demand noted for the last few weeks, consequent upon the advance in prices seems to have slackened off a little, although the movement is still good. An easing off in the demand was only to be expected. When the trade realized that the market was firming up it purchased heavily. At the moment it is fairly well supplied, but the demand is likely to continue brisk from this out. There have been no changes in prices and the position of the market is still strong. Tomatoes are probably the strongest article on the list. The demand is principally of a small sorting up character, and it is brisk. There is no special feature about the market except it be that stocks of tomatoes are gradually becoming depleted, making it probable that higher prices will prevail later on. Prices range from 90c. to $1. Corn is in active demand at from 90c. to $1 for good, and at $1.25 for extra brands. There are still a few second class brands to be had at 85c. It is likely that the supply of corn will be absorbed before the end of the season. Peas are in steady demand at from 90c. to $1, up and to $1.25 for choice brands. As to tomatoes, some second class brands are procurable at 85c. Stocks of peas are probably lighter than either those of corn or tomatoes, but on account of the shorter season there is for them, there will likely be a sufficiency. There is a good demand for beans at from 95 to $1. Stocks are light and demand is better than ever before. Canned fruit is in fairly active demand, without any special features. Salmon is said to be in fair demand for the season and prices are firm at from $1.50 to $1.80 according to brand and quality. Stocks of the better brands are very light and prices for them will likely go much higher when the salmon season proper sets in. Lobster is in good demand, especially the better brands. The poor brands are neglected. Canned meats are high and are likely to remain so.

MONTREAL.

A new feature in the market, this week, here, has been the dreaded weakness in tomatoes. Packers and other large holders have apparently lost hopes of finding an outlet in the West, and have started to unload here, sales being made of round lots as low as 80c. The wholesale grocers and jobbing houses generally have been pretty free purchasers at the decline, and are now using tomatoes as leaders to induce a demand in other lines. Jobbers quotations on the vegetable now are 90 or 65c. Other lines are quiet and generally neglected.

FISH AND OYSTERS.

The Lenton demand continues active for all kinds of fish and receipts are fairly good. Black bass are coming in pretty lively and demand is correspondingly brisk at 11 to 12½c. a pound. There are also a few ciscoes, but the price is so high that they are only taken by those who have regular customers for them. Finnan haddie and B. C. salmon are at the moment out of the market. Dried fish have met with a very ready sale this season, in fact more so than usual. The trade however, is running more and more to the cheaper kinds of fish, which is an unsatisfactory feature of the business. Oysters are inactive and easier. We quote as follows: 7 to 7½c. for trout and ordinary whitefish, 7½c. for Manitoba whitefish, 4½c. per lb. or $3 per hundred for frozen Lake herring, 10c. for mackerel, 13c. for B.C. frozen salmon, and 17c. for fresh ditto, 5 to 7c. for smelts, 5 to 5½c. for haddock, 4 to 4½c. for market cod, 7c. for steak cod, 5c. for flounders, 6½c. for skinned and boned codfish, $3 per half bbl. for Labrador herring, $2.75 per half bbl. for shore herring, 11 to 12½c. for Digby herring, 4c. for boneless fish, 7 to 8c. for boneless cod, 7c. for pike, 7c. for pickerel; ciscoes $1.50 to $1.75 a hundred, black bass 11 to 12½c. a pound; oysters, $1.50 for stds., and $2 selects.

HIDES, SKINS, WOOL, TALLOW.

HIDES—There is a good local demand for hides at from 40 to 60c. free of grubs, but a good many of those coming in are grubby and are of much less value than those taken off some weeks ago. We look for a decline of ½c. on this class of hides. Cured hides are quoted at 5 to 5½c. and No. 1 cows' at 4½c.

SKINS—Sheepskins are in good demand but dealers claim that the prices paid to butchers are from 15 to 20c. more than their value. In consequence of this there is a disposition to put them down by that amount; $1.25 to $1.40 is the ruling price. Calfskins are just beginning to come in and demand is brisk, and prices firm at 5 to 7c.

WOOL—The market has been cleaned out of combing fleece for the United States markets, and all white wools that can be sold at less than 20c., meet with a ready sale. South down is quoted at 28c. and selected clothing at 25 to 26c. In pulled wools, supers are quoted at 22 to 23c., extras at 26 to 27c. and No. 1 and black at 20 to 21c. There has been an active demand from the local mills for all medium-priced wools.

TALLOW—The price of rendered tallow is exceptionally high. It has however gone down in Chicago, and in the Western markets, fully ½c. a pound, and dealers are under the impression that there will be a further decline. Dealers here are paying from 7½ to 7¾c. for first-class, and are selling at 8 to 8½c. Rough tallow is readily taken up by soap makers, and the price is maintained at 3c. a pound. Caul and reeds are in good demand for making lard compound, and while the demand is maintained for this purpose prices will be kept up.

SEEDS

It is between seasons. Deliveries have been light during the last few days and the anticipated movement has not materialized. Dealers are paying $8.50 to $9 for scattered lots of red clover that are offering. In alsike the market remains unchanged, prices still ranging from $5.50 to $6.60. Some interior lots are selling below these figures, while fancy seed brings a little more. For the few lots of timothy offering $1.50 to $2.50 is being paid, while for an occasional lot of flail threshed 25c. extra is paid. From present outlook the crop of seed, especially red clover and alsike, is about marketed.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

MONTREAL, March 9, 1893.

GROCERIES.

Generally speaking the grocery trade has been quiet during the week just past, but for all that there has been some decidedly interesting features in some lines. It cannot be denied however that the movement of business is somewhat backward, and that although operations between importers and jobbers in the way of turnovers from first hands has furnished something of interest. The movement towards country dealers' hands has been moderate. City trade in this respect, however, has been fair. Values generally are steady, but there have been some exceptions, which are noted in the more detailed reports appended below. The movement in tea is limited, and this is all the more conspicuous owing to the activity that Japan stock has been showing recently. Coffee and spices, however, have continued in good enquiry, and values show a decidedly upward tendency. Owing to the light supplies, however, the actual volume of trade has been rather small. Sugar has experienced no particular stir, and refiners do not seem to manifest any particular anxiety about their spring supplies of the raw product. Advices on Barbadoes molasses are firm, and with light supplies on spot there is little to note in the way of business here. Dried fruit has been absolutely stagnant. Fish continues brisk and firm, while on canned goods a new feature is the weakness of tomatoes, due to the fact that holders have got tired of waiting for an outlet elsewhere and are unloading here. Pretty low prices have ruled in consequence, and jobbing houses who have bought pretty freely are commencing to use vegetable as a leader in the way of inducing demand for other lines of goods. Payments furnish some complaint but are not exactly unfavorable.

SUGARS.

There is no change in the sugar market. The demand for refined continues very fair at 4½c. for granulated and 3½ to 3¾c. for yellows. With regard to the raw product refiners appear to be in a hurry to buy, as they have ample stocks, and consequently very little is to report in the matter of cost and freight business. Recent advices report a weakening in the tone of the English market, though beet is reported steady.

SYRUPS, ETC.

Syrups continue to move out fairly well in a jobbing way, but very little business in the way of ordering further supplies is reported by the refiners, but the latter claim also to have very light stocks to meet what demand that there is to note. The refiners quote about 22c. per gallon as the idea from first hands for domestic stock. American syrups have been selling fairly well at 18 to 19c. according to quality, in which latter respect some of it shows up very fair. In molasses there is a small jobbing trade doing on spot from the moderate stocks here, and 34 to 35c. appears to be the idea, but offers of stock to arrive via the United States have been made at 33½c. As to business for spring delivery, values are unsettled as yet for a basis laid down here, but advices from the Islands report the market firm. So far no contracts via the St. Lawrence can be heard of, but it is understood that offers of 32c. laid down have been made. At primary markets the first cost is quoted firm at 14 to 14½c.

TEAS.

The tea market has been very quiet during the week, there being a complete pause in the movement of Japan stock, which is all the more noticeable, owing to the activity which has previously characterized it. Blacks and greens are steady but neglected at last week's figures, and prices for Japans are precisely the same, viz; low grades 12½ to 14c.; medium to good 16 to 18c., and fine at 19 to 21c., with finest 25 to 31c.

COFFEE AND SPICES.

Coffee continues in fair demand, while the supply is still in small compass and prices denote an upward tendency if anything. Prices for straight wholesale business are unchanged as follows: Jamaica, 19 to 20c.; Maracaibo, 21 to 22c.; Rio, 19 to 21c.; Java, 25 to 27c., and Mocha, 25 to 28c. Jobbing lots necessitate a proportionate advance on the above basis.

Spices continue strong all round and values rule firm and unchanged as noted last week. Straight lots of black pepper have changed hands at 8 to 9c., Pimento 6½c., and nutmegs 50 to 52c.

DRIED FRUIT.

It has been a week of stagnation in the dried fruit market and in the absence of business, prices for wholesale business from first hands remain nominally the same, at 4½ to 4¾c. for off stock Valencia raisins according to quality, with layers 6 to 6¾c. The jobbers don't report much stir either, except in the way of a small call for immediate wants, which is hardly worth mentioning. For business of this sort an advance of ½ to 1c. is necessitated on the above basis for wholesale business.

Currants rule very dull and beyond the movement of an occasional lot at the former basis of 5 to 5¾c., there is nothing to note.

NUTS.

There is no change in this line and business is small and unimportant. We quote Pecans 11 to 12½c., Terragona almonds, 10½c., Grenoble walnuts 13½ to 14½c., filberts 10 to 10½c., Ivica 14½c., Brazil 15c., marbots 12½c., cocoa nuts $3.50 to $4.50 per bag of 100 for old, new $5 to $5.50.

RICE.

The rice market is dull at the moment and quotations are unchanged for business from first hands in a wholesale way. The quotations are: Standard $3.85; choice, $4; Japans, $4.25; Louisiana, $5.25, and Carolina $7.50.

FISH.

The fish market generally continues in very good shape. Stocks of all kinds of fish are very small, and all receipts of fresh stock are moving out freely at quotations. We quote as follows: Haddock, 4 to 4½c., cod 4c., lake trout 7c., white fish 7 to 7½c., pickerel or dore 8c.; dried cod, $5.50; No. 1 green cod, $7; Labrador salmon, $13 to $14; No. 2 mackerel, $12 per bbl.; do. $7 per half bbl.; C.B. and N. S. herring, $4.75 to $5 per bbl.; tommy cods,

FLOUR AND FEED.

TORONTO.

The flour market continues to rule quiet. Offerings are plentiful but demand is poor. Stocks in the east are heavy, and in consequence buyers are not inclined to make further purchases until stocks are reduced, or until they see how the spring is going to turn out. There has been no material change in feed. Meal is in fair demand.

FLOUR.—City millers' and dealers' prices are: Manitoba patents, $4.35 to $4.50; strong bakers' $3.85 to $4.10; white wheat patents, $3.50 to $3.75; straight roller, $3.15 to $3.30, low grades, per bag, $1.00 to $1.25; Ontario family $3.35 to $3.85.

Car prices are: Toronto freights—Manitoba patents, $4.40 to $4.50; Manitoba strong bakers' $3.90 to $4.10; Ontario patents, $3.25 to $3.50; straight roller, $3.15 to $3.20; extra, $3.10; low grades, per bag, $1.10 to $1.25.

MEAL.—Oatmeal is $4.00. to $4.20. Cornmeal is $3.25 to $3.50.

FEED.—Bran (ton lots) $17, ditto (on track) $15.50 to $16., shorts (ton lots) $18; mixed feed $20 to $22, feeding corn 57 to 58c., oats 33 to 34c.

HAY.—Baled timothy, demand is good and supply fair at $9.25 to $9.50.

STRAW.—Plentiful and demand limited, at $5.50 to $6.

MONTREAL.

The past week has been a quiet one, buyers showing little disposition to anticipate wants as they appear to have lost faith in the stability of prices, and confine their purchases as much as possible to caring for immediate wants. We quote:—Winter wheat $4.00 to $4.25; spring patents $4.25 to $4.35; straight rollers $3.50 to $3.75; extra $3.10 to $3.25; superfine $2.60 to $2.90; city strong bakers' $4.15; strong bakers' $3.90 to $4.00.

ASHES.

A good trade is reported in ashes, notably pots, and outside figures are being obtained in some instances. We quote first pots $4.50 to $4.55, seconds $3.85 to $3.90, and pearls $5.30 to $5.40.

HOPS.

The market is quiet and easy, and we quote 18 to 20c. as to quality for lots.

BEANS.

There is no change in prices, while business rules extremely quiet. Picked stock moves at $1.35 to $1.50, with good ordinary $1 to $1.20.

HONEY.

Honey is quiet and unchanged. Sales of dark buckwheat extracted have been made at 6 to 7c., and fine to choice 7 to 9c. Bright comb has sold up to 13c. and we quote 10 to 13c. as to quality.

POTATOES.

The potato market is steady at from 95c. to $1 in car lots. Jobbing prices run all the way from $1.50 to $2.25 per back.

ONIONS.

There has been a fair demand for onions, good Spanish in crates selling at 90c. to $1.00, while red and yellow in barrels being $2.50 to $2.75.

EGGS.

The receipts of eggs continue liberal and have been so throughout the week. The material result has been a steady decline in price and now figures are fully 5 to 7c. below the basis of last week. In order to keep stocks cleaned up dealers had to accept 23c. for lots and job to grocers at 25c.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

Butter is steady under a fair jobbing enquiry, but there is not much doing outside of this. Supplies, however, are in small compass, and holders seem satisfied that all they have will be wanted. Prices rule firm at the following for straight lots: Choice fall creamery, 23 to 24c.; creamery seconds, 21 to 22c.; Townships dairy, 21 to 23c.; Morrisburg and Brockville, 20 to 22c.; Kamouraska stock, 19 to 20c.; Western rolls, 18½ to 20c.

Cheese is nominally the same and there is nothing of interest to note. We quote 11½ to 11¾ for an idea.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market does not show much change. Business is quiet on the whole, but prices hold firm, especially for pork. We quote: Canadian short cut pork, per brl. $23 to $24; Canada mess pork, per brl. $23 to $24.00; Hams, city cured, per lb. 13c. to 14c.; Lard, Canadian in pails, 12½ to 13½c.; Bacon, per lb., 12 to 13c.; Lard, com. refined, per lb., 10½ to 12c.

MONTREAL TRADE NOTES.

Offers of Barbadoes molasses to arrive via St. Lawrence have been made at 32½c., but no contracts are noted in this connection.

One cargo as it is understood has been contracted for to come via the United States at 33½c. however.

Chaput, Fils & Co. report a fairly satisfactory business in syrups for the week.

London advices to brokers here report India and Ceylon teas steady at the recent decline.

Caverhill, Rose, Hughes & Co. are doing a good Lenten trade on city account in their lines of fish.

There have been further American enquiries for Japan tea during the week, but no business has so far resulted.

There are complaints here about cutting in starch by western people, and it is alleged that even lower prices have been offered.

It is getting close to the period for fresh maple products, and the Sherbrooke Maple Product Co. are prepared to attend to this business.

Lightbound, Ralston & Co. are offering special lines of syrups, canned goods and other lines which are opportune for Lenten wants.

Mr. J. H. Dobbin says that advertising in THE GROCER brings a tangible return. He is receiving enquiries from all over the country about fish enquiries, in fact that he cannot fill.

GINGER CLIMBING UP.

The ginger situation propounds an all-absorbing question at present. Prices are advancing almost daily. The crops for the last five years have brought only about three cents per pound to growers. Ginger is not grown on plantations, but in a crude way by the natives in the hill countries of Western Africa and Southern India. They sell their small packages—rarely exceeding 100 pounds each—to traders, who, in turn, dispose of the root to the merchants on the coast. The aborigines being as shrewd, on the average, as white men in matters affecting their pockets, have seen that the collection of ginger did not pay them. Accordingly they have turned their attention to the collection of cocoanut oil, indiarubber and gum. The consequence is, that the crop season is at hand, with no ginger grown, cultivated or gathered, and no possibility of a fresh supply before next December or January. It is the opinion of an extensive operator in spices that, "with no ginger here, no ginger on the water or on the coast, there cannot but be a doubling up in price, and buyers of the article who want it should purchase liberally, as the prospects are that it will prove a better investment than government bonds." A word to the wise, etc.—N. Y. Commercial Enquirer.

THE STORY OF TEA.

The following interesting article is from the pen of Ram Lal, of Calcutta. It was issued in small book form and was profusely illustrated.

There can be little doubt that the tea plant must have existed, its virtues unknown, or at least unrecognized, from the earliest times of vegetation, but as a cultivated production its history can only be authentically traced back in China for about 1,000 years. Various mythical accounts may be read describing the discovery of the wonderful properties in its leaves, and the application of the same to domestic use, but Chinese history, although preserved in records dating back more than 4,000 years, does not tell how this came about. We know that when early visitors from western civilization set foot on the soil of the Flowery Land they found tea-drinking an established custom of the people, and brought back with them to England some of the cured leaves, which were the means of gradually introducing the habit amongst English people, who rapidly became second only to the Chinese as consumers. Wherever the Anglo-Saxon race has spread the custom of tea-drinking has gone with it, and, though the teas consumed have been many and various, the fact of consumption has always been in evidence from its continuous increase.

The production of tea is now a vast industry, giving employment to much capital and many workers. Formerly China was considered the original home of the tea plant, and, although its suitability for cultivation in many other places was demonstrated, where that was attempted, China plants were in the earlier stages introduced.

In India, where the industry has been worked on the largest scale, and where it has been most successful, it was found upon clearing away the jungle to form tea plantations, that a variety of tea was actually growing wild, and that is what is now termed the indigenous Indian variety, or Thea Assamensis.

There is no evidence of an indigenous China variety, all the tea in China being in a state of cultivation. As it was upon the hills which extend from India into China that the indigenous tea was discovered, it is considered probable that the tea seed was conveyed by land from the former to the latter country, and there cultivated. In appearance the Indian and China varieties are very different, the latter having degenerated greatly from the original type, doubtless because of the poor soil on the sides of the hills it is grown upon.

It is customary to speak of a tea bush, because in its cultivated form the height is kept down by constant pruning, but in a state of nature Indian tea is a tree growing to a height of 30 or 40 feet. It thrives best in a warm, damp climate—one with a high temperature—and requires an abundant rainfall. In China hill-sides and sloping lands are the favorite places, and the earlier gardens in India were planted in similar situations. However, it was found that the violent tropical rains washed the soil away, and now flat hill lands are chosen, and are the most successful localities.

The work of preparing to grow tea is a serious undertaking, and a description of how it is carried out in India may be interesting.

A suitable portion of land having been selected, the jungle is cleared by cutting down and burning, the ashes forming a fertilizer of the ground. In modern planting, a wide area is covered at once—say 400 or 500 acres. The young tea bushes are raised from seed in nurseries, and at about six months from the time of sowing they have reached a height of nine to eighteen inches. They are then planted out in the garden in long, parallel rows, each bush being placed about 4 1-2 feet apart in each direction from its fellows. Except for cultivation of the soil around them, the bushes are allowed to grow untouched for the first year. They are then heavily pruned down about the middle of December, and are thereafter pruned each year about the same date. The object of the pruning is to keep the plants of a suitable height for the pluckers, and to cause them to produce leaves instead of flowers. Towards the month of April—earlier or later according to the weather—the young shoots or flushes begin to appear. Now is the plucking season, and once a week the entire estate is overtaken, and all the tender, succulent young shoots snipped off below the third leaflet.

The lower leaves on the young shoots are too old and hard to manufacture into tea. The plucking is done by women and children, and is now almost the only part of the work where the tea is touched by hand. The plucking season continues till December, and, as a rule, the pluckers go over the entire garden in the course of each week, taking off all the young shoots which are ready.

As they are plucked the green leaves are thrown into baskets, and twice daily the leaves are taken into the factory. They are then spread out thinly on bamboo trays, under cover, for some eighteen hours, to wither, after which they are in a soft flaccid condition ready for the rolling machine. The object of the rolling is to crush the leaf and break its cells, so as to liberate the juices of the leaf. The leaves are passed repeatedly through a rolling machine, driven by steam power, the operation occupying about an hour. The next process is familiarly termed fermentation, but is really an oxidation of the leaves, and in it lies the chief difference between the manufacture of black and green tea, all of the former being fermented. Many people cherish an antiquated belief that black and green teas are grown upon different varieties of tea-plant, which is quite a mistake, the difference being merely one of preparation. After being rolled, the leaves are spread out in layers of 3 or 4 inches thick in a cool house, and left to undergo the chemical action resulting from their condition. This process is checked after from one to two hours, according to climatic changes, by the first firing, which is effected by subjecting the leaves to the gradual action of hot air. Various applications of the same system are in use, but the most popular is to place the leaves on trays of wire network in a high temperature for about 20 minutes, after which they are firm and crisp.

Up to this point in the manufacture the leaf has been on the stalk, the three leaves and a bud being unseparated. They are now broken apart and sorted by machinery into the various grades or qualities, which are described as Orange Pekoe, Pekoe, Pekoe Souchong, and Souchong, each of which names roughly represents the leaf-bud and the three lower leaves. In addition to these four classes, out of each are sifted all the smaller fragments of leaf broken in the process of manufacture, which are termed Broken Orange Pekoe, etc. These broken grades are frequently objected to by the consumer, under the impression that they are inferior in quality, but in the opinion of experts, the more the leaf is broken up the better is the liquor upon infusion.

Upon completion of the sifting, the tea is again fired, and, while warm, it is packed tightly into lead-lined chests, and the lead covers completely soldered over it, so that it may be kept perfectly airtight until required for use.

From the gardens in India there is a long and difficult journey by country cart, river-boat, steamer or rail, according to district (or in some cases by all four conveyances) down to Calcutta, from which port the tea is all despatched.

In the earlier days of the industry, the methods of the Chinese were followed, and hand-labor largely used; but now every process of the manufacture is effected by machinery driven by steam. The Chinese, with the conservatism of their race, continue to follow the laborious, expensive, and frequently uncleanly methods of their ancestors. The rolling, for instance, is done by the feet and hands.

In India there are five principal districts, viz., Assam, Cachar, Sylhet, the Dooars and Darjeeling, each of which produces a distinctive character of tea, and in many cases individual gardens have characteristics by which experts can at once distinguish their produce. The nature of the tea from any one district or garden varies, at times considerably, according to weather and local influences. It is this variation in quality that renders it so difficult to obtain uniform tea for domestic use, and here the art of the trained taster and scientific blender comes into play, in making such combinations as shall preserve uniformity. Frequently, several teas, which are in themselves undesirable, make in a mixture an exceedingly good tea, and by judicious blending the proper degrees of flavor, strength and pungency can be arrived at.

The great variation in water used, some being soft and others hard, renders certain teas much more suitable for use in one locality than in another, and, indeed, some of the tea produced in India is quite unsuited, because of its extreme pungency, for use in many places.

One of the great recommendations of Indian tea is its perfect purity and freedom from adulteration. It is grown practically entirely by Europeans, and all the processes of production are conducted under European supervision. There is no temptation to adulteration, as far as the producer is concerned, because, as all tea is sold by the name of the garden, the constant effort is to attain the highest level of quality, and, therefore, of price. The passage through Great Britain of so great a proportion of the crop is also a safeguard, as every parcel of tea has to be passed as pure and genuine by an official representing Her Majesty's Customs, and it may be relied upon that every chest or packet of tea, which has been packed in, or has passed through, London in course of transhipment, is genuine according to the description upon it, as otherwise its re-export would be stopped by the authorities.

There is in point of fact no necessity for this strictness of inspection so far as Indian tea is concerned, but the practice was adopted to stop the importation of adulterated China tea.

"For ways that are dark,
And tricks that are vain,
The heathen Chinese is peculiar."

and the Englishman's digestion was at one time in a fair way to be ruined by Chinese cheap labor.

Tea in China is not grown wholesale on specially planted gardens, but is raised in a retail fashion by thousands and thousands of cotters, who pluck the leaves themselves, partially dry them in the sun, and sell the product to traveling collectors, who convey it to the point of shipment, where "all sorts and conditions" of leaf are mixed together, finally fired and packed. As tea is an article of large daily consumption in China there is a plentiful supply of the exhausted leaves which have been brewed always available. These are collected and dried, then faced up with some black coloring matter, rolled to give the leaf a twist, mixed with a proportion of good tea, and then sent into the market. Such adulteration with Indian tea is practically impossible, because the native of India is not a tea drinker, the local consumption is merely nominal, and used tea leaves are unobtainable.

"Nothing succeeds like success," and Indian tea (including Ceylon) has clearly been successful in Great Britain in almost entirely supplanting China tea in popular use. In 1864 its consumption was only 2,796,000 pounds, or about 3 per cent. of the total. In 1891 it was over 150,000,000 pounds, or 74 per cent. of the total, while in the earlier portion of 1892 the percentage had increased to 83. Purity, quality, and general goodness have won the day there, and they are gradually gaining support in the United States and Canada.

The modern system of putting up tea in small leaden or tin packets of convenient size for domestic use enables it to be kept air tight and free from the risk of contamination until required. No article is more sensitive or liable to contract foreign flavors if lying exposed among other goods in open tea chests in a general store, and once the lead has been cut, the freshness and bouquet will leave the tea, if it is not promptly used.

Indian tea has never been a cheap tea, and the remarkable fact about its rapid progress in England is that the price has always been higher than that of China tea. But the price of tea per pound is not a proper criterion of value, because one pound of good tea when properly used in the household will make as many cups of good drinking tea as two or three pounds of an inferior and nominally cheaper quality.

What a lover of tea should always look to is not price but quality, and it is to be regretted that many people look for mere nominal cheapness of price in tea, who would be ashamed to place upon their tables, or have in their houses, other articles of food or of general use, which were merely cheap in price, and not of the choicest quality money could buy. The better tea is in quality, the purer and more healthy it is likely to prove as a beverage. The comparative healthiness is a point of importance, and a gentleman, well qualified to speak with authority regarding tea, wrote recently in reference to the widespread dyspepsia in the United States: "I believe it to be true that the consumption in America of good Indian black tea instead of green teas, Japans, Oologs, coffees, etc., it would strengthen the digestions of the people and ensure healthy meals."

This is only in keeping with the experience of the people who have been the largest consumers, since its introduction, of Indian tea, viz., the Irish. For 20 years scarcely any tea but Indian has been used in Ireland and the land has become noted by tourists for the goodness of its teas, yet dyspepsia as a disease is almost unknown there.

This is partly explained by the fact that the Irish know both what good tea is and how to use it. The best of tea can be made injurious by improper preparation and injudicious use.

A BIT OF CHEWING GUM HISTORY.

Little acts and seemingly unimportant discoveries often lead to great results. This is so well known to everyone that it is only necessary to refer to one instance here as an illustration; and that instance is in regard to the Adams' chewing gums.

Mr. Thomas Adams, the senior partner of the firm was a resident in the Southern part of the United States between the years 1848-55. His business was of such a nature that he frequently went to Mexico, and while there collected many specimens—products of the soil of that wonderful country. These articles were retained more as curiosities or souvenirs than anything else, and were carefully laid away.

In 1857, Mr. Thomas Adams, Sr., commenced to experiment with these different specimens, among which was the gum Chicle—the crude article from which the firm's gums are made; and, noticing the similarity in characteristics of this gum with that of rubber, both belonging to the Coucha family of gums, and Chicle being entirely unknown to the market, and consequently much cheaper than rubber, experiments with a view to the cheaper production of hard rubber goods were commenced. Success seemed certain, and about 25,000 pounds of the Chicle were collected and brought to New York, but, after expending considerable money and time, the project was finally abandoned, as it could not be successfully vulcanized, and hence the gum was useless for that purpose. It now became necessary to find some use to which the article could be put, in order to realize on the gum that had been purchased. Many different experiments were tried, such as adapting to cable purposes, making glue, etc., all of which proved unsuccessful. An effort was then made to get some sort of an offer for the Chicle, but as the article was entirely unknown and possessed no recognized value, an offer could not be obtained. In the meantime the goods lay in the storehouse in New York. Storage continually increasing the cost, the advisability of throwing the whole thing into the North River was several times seriously considered; all hope of ever being able to dispose of the article had long since departed. Being in a small confectioner's one afternoon for the purpose of purchasing some candy, Mr. Thomas Adams, Sr., noticed a little girl who called for a penny's worth of mastic chewing gum. It then occurred to him that a chewing gum might be made from Chicle. Experiments were made, and Adams' New York Chewing Gum is the result. When the manipulation of the Chicle was so far developed as to produce a beautiful white substance, a patent was applied for and was granted. Adams' New York Chewing Gum soon became the popular gum, as it possessed all the requisite qualifications, being tasteless and elastic. The subsequent history of this gum is well known to the trade. It has increased year by year in favor, Chewing Gum became recognized, it won popularity.

Not content to rest with the progress made, and stimulated by the success achieved in the manufacture of the plain Chicle Chewing Gum, the firm began experiments with a determination, if possible, of producing a sweet gum, and after long and patient labor the desideratum was obtained. Business grew rapidly from the time the first box of the fruit flavored gum was put on the market, and it was ultimately found necessary to erect in New York the large building, a cut of which is given in this issue.

The Toronto factory is at Nos. 11 and 13 Jarvis street, and was opened in July, 1891. It is a three-story building and is furnished with all the latest improved and original machinery for the manufacture of all the high-class brands so well-known to the Canadian trade. Here the Tutti Frutti and Pepsin Tutti Frutti are manufactured according to the original formula, and as and is now a very important item in the stock of every jobbing confectioner, grocer and druggist, and is handled extensively by the notion trade.

The fruit of the tree from which the Chicle exudes is called Sapodilla. It is about the size of an apple, is delicious in flavor, and is largely used by the natives as an article of diet. The gum is collected by Indians and brought to market on pack mules, each mule carrying about twelve arrobas, or 300 pounds. When the Indians or natives of Mexico start out upon a long journey across the country, by wagon or mounted, it is customary to supply themselves with Chicle in order to allay the pangs of thirst, as in all tropical countries water is more or less scarce in some sections.

Parafine and Spruce Chewing Gums were at the period of the introduction of the Adams gum the articles principally known and used. As rapidly, however, as Chicle Adams' & Sons Co. are the originators of Chicle Chewing Gum, every improvement during the experience of twenty-five years has been added both to the quality and to the manner in which these goods are put up.

At one time chewing gums were looked upon as useless and were placed on a par with tobacco, etc. A peculiar feature about Adams' chewing gums is that they have revolutionized this idea, at least so far as the product of that firm is concerned, the Pepsin Tutti Frutti being recognized as a cure for dyspepsia, while Tutti Frutti is used extensively by athletes to prevent dryness and thirst.

The production of sugar in Bengal being insufficient to meet the consumption, foreign sugars (chiefly beetroot) have to be imported in considerable quantities. Germany supplies more than one-third of the imports, England and Austria following. Mauritius sends cane sugar, and ranks next to England in importance. In 1887-88 France supplied 100,000 rupees worth of sugar, but has supplied nothing since that date.

THE COUNTRY STORE.

Some of the passengers at the depot were telling stories the other day, and a travelling man was relating his experience in a country store in a small town in Jefferson county, Missouri, says an exchange. He said he was there nearly the entire forenoon, and had occasion to note the peculiarities of the storekeeper, who carried a general stock, but a pretty small one. Every little while a customer would come into the store and inquire for some article that the merchant did not happen to have in stock. For instance: "Have you any dried beef, Mr. Cashdrawer?" "No, we have no dried beef today, but we have some excellent codfish. Monie, show this lady the codfish." "Do you keep any such things as wicks for those big, round lamp-burners?" "We generally do, but happen to be out just now. We have some fine cotton clothes-line." "My gals want me to bring home confectioner's sugar; have you got any of it, Cashdrawer?" "Sold the last ounce about an hour ago, Henry. We've got an excellent quality of toilet soap, though. Monie, show Mr. Adams the soap." "Do you keep ready-made flannel shirts?" "Have had them all winter, and sold three to a lady yesterday, which cleaned the stock out. But we have a large supply of overalls. Monie, show this lady the overalls."

HINT TO BEE KEEPERS.

The keeping of bees is found both profitable and pleasant work in many parts of our Province, but each year we hear of novices in the art who are disheartened by their last year's experience. The trouble is, that they fail to recognize that bee-keeping is an art, and a fine one, requiring experience, skill and energy. In the first place the bee stock should be carefully selected, on the same principle that the farmer selects good strains of blood to breed his stock from. The experienced honey-raiser does not trust to random stock from country hives, but obtains the famous Italian bees, secure in the knowledge that he is reaping the experience of centuries of bee-keepers. Another error of the amateur is in ignoring the needs of the little insects during the winter season. Too often the slightly built hives which have done good service in sunny weather are the only protection for the bees in the cold winter months. Thick walls and double windows in their hives are needed for the bees in our Province, else they will too often continue their chilled season of hibernation into the sleep of death. Many hives in which the question of warmth has been considered, are yet found to be full of dead bees in the spring. The cause of the destruction is that the bees are too far-removed from the honey, owing to the faulty construction of the hive. After our present severe winter many of our bee-keepers will have reason to be discouraged, but a little careful study of the cause of their failures will be greatly to the advantage of their next year's experimenting. —Halifax Critic.

COLD STORAGE.

This is a problem that will not down. It is discussed unfailingly year after year, and yet it is doubtful whether any new points have lately been developed. For apples and some varieties of pears, for instance the Bartlett, cold storage has been found profitable. Further than this, says Mr. Hale, he would not recommend it for fruits. It is a failure with grapes, on account of the heavy shrinkage. Fruit that has been stored in houses where ice is used to keep the temperature down keep only for a little while when taken out. A novel method of keeping apples has been tried with excellent success in New York City. The fruit is stored in barges. The water about the boat prevents the apples from freezing, yet keeps them near the freezing point all the while. In Buffalo, as was stated by Hon. E. B. Fenner, storage rooms in large buildings, cooled by artificial means, are rented at quite a reasonable price to grocers, commission men and producers for the successful storage of meat, eggs and all kinds of fruits. Mr. Hale told how he had placed a lot of peaches, which arrived in market too late for the day's sales, in cold storage for only 12 hours, and received about $100 more for them than he could have done otherwise. Reference was also made to the old and still valuable plan of cooling a fruit house by an underground current of air conducted in a large pipe from a distance of several hundred feet to the cellar. The proper place for cold storage houses generally, it was thought, is in the large cities. Dampness must be avoided in all storage houses.—Rural New Yorker.

"A Record; not a Prospectus," is the title of an interesting little brochure just issued by the Bradstreet's Company. It deals with the business failures of 1892, and a perusal of its contents is rewarded in the large amount of useful information conveyed. Small as is the book referred to, it containing only some 17 pages, the work of compiling it must have been enormous. For instance, it involved taking cognizance of more than 1,331,246 names of individuals, firms and corporations holding a place in the business world in 1892, of which 1,129,808 were in business at the close of that year. The total number of failures in Canada and the United States last year is shown to have been 11,952, of which 1,682 were in this country. The total number in each of the two countries the previous year was 1,846 and 12,394 respectively, a decrease in each instance. In 1892 there were 33,543 more places of business in the United States than the previous year, and in Canada the increase was 271.

It is when one begins to dive into an analysis of the figures adduced that the interest becomes more awakened. In the process of this, one of the first things to strike one is the value of consulting reputable agency records in order to ascertain the standing of those with whom you are doing business; for 93 per cent. of the concerns that failed in the United States and Canada had either no credit rating, or their credit was designated as only very moderate. On the other hand only 5.9 per cent. of those rated "good" failed, while of those styled "very good" or higher only 1.09 became bankrupt. The proportion of those failing who possessed $5,000 capital or less was somewhat larger than the previous year, being 90.5 per cent. It is evident from this that ample capital is becoming more and more essential to success in business. But as the total of those failing with insufficient capital as the prime cause of failure was only 43 per cent. of the aggregate which failed with $5,000 capital or less, it may be concluded that even among concerns of limited capital general reputation and record for fair dealing have more to do in determining a credit rating than capital employed. The proportion who failed while credited with from $5,000 to $50,000 capital each was 8.4 per cent.; in the class rated from $50,000 to $500,000 it was only 1.1 per cent. There was only one firm in the United States and Canada last year which failed while credited with capital of $500,000 or more, against 21 in 1891, 13 in 1890 and 1889, 7 in 1888, and 11 in 1887.

Regarding the causes of failure, lack of capital is still the most prolific source, it heading the list with 32 per cent in the United States and 65 per cent. in Canada. In this country and in the United States disaster was the next largest cause, with 11.3 and 19.2 per cent. respectively. Incompetence ranks next, although in this particular Canada shows an improvement of over 1 per cent. compared with 1891. Fraudulent disposition ranks fourth, the percentages being 5.2 and 10.3 for Canada and the United States respectively. This is an increase in both instances, particularly in the United States, where this cause of failure was 3.3 per cent. larger than in 1891. In the matter of unwise credits, Canada exhibits a much more favorable condition than do our neighbors across the line, the percentage of failures from this cause being 0.8 in this country, and 4.0 in the United States. In Canada the decrease in this particular was nearly 1 per cent. compared with 1891, and over 2 per cent. compared with 1890. Outside speculation is also responsible for more failures in the United States than in Canada, and in the matter of extravagance the difference is exactly 1 per cent. in favor of Canada, the figures being 0.4 and 1.4 respectively. Canadians are also shown to be less negligent of business, and undue competition has caused 0.7 less failures here than across the border. In regard to proportion of assets to liabilities, the honors are with the United States, the percentage being 50 against Canada's 42. A grain of comfort can be taken by us on this side of the line the fact that while the percentage was 3 lower in the United States than it was in 1891 this country was 1 higher. The failures in New York city were not included in those of the United States in regard to percentage of assets to liabilities. In that city the proportion was much less than in any State in the Union, it being only 34, although that was a gain of four over the previous year.

There was another little brush in the House last week regarding sugar. It was over a bill to incorporate the Manufacturing Co., Ltd., and Mr. Lister was the bold knight who undertook to drive the lance of his rhetoric through it. The sum and substance of his attack was that the bill was merely a cover for establishing, with a capital of $4,000,000, one of the largest combines the country had known, it being the purpose to pool the three sugar refineries in the Maritime provinces, viz., the Halifax refinery, the Moncton refinery, and the Dartmouth refinery. Mr. Kenny, who is president of the Halifax Sugar Refining Company, championed the cause of the bill. He explained that the old company at Halifax having failed, a new company was organized and put in $150,000 in cash. After having two prosperous years, instead of paying dividends they gave $150,000 worth of stock to the shareholders, and, in addition to that, paid off a mortgage for $200,000. Under these conditions he held it would be admittedly impossible to form a combine. Others took a hand in the debate, and then Mr. Stairs, who fathered the bill, agreed to the elimination of the objectionable clauses, when it was advanced a stage. Sugar may be sweet, but it is the cause of a good deal of bitterness this session.

The article re profit-sharing published in a recent issue of THE GROCER has awakened a good deal of interest in the trade. Some of those who read the article have gone to the trouble to send communications on the subject. "In my opinion profit-sharing is the only reasonable outcome of the small sales the average salesman makes when he has ample opportunities to do better," writes "R. A. D." "Give him greater inducements to do better and he will do it. Even 5 per cent. on new outside business is not too much. A small yearly percentage will also help." "Why such a thing has not been thought of before is surprising," writes Mr. Thomas Carlyle. "I say give a small percentage on the showing of each check-book. This will increase personal effort."

The subject of profit-sharing as a solution of the labor problem is receiving probably more attention than any other of the many remedies that are being suggested. To the mechanical and manufacturing branches of trade the application of profit-sharing has been long suggested, and in some instances where it has been put into practice has proved at least fairly satisfactory. But the idea of extending it to salesmen and clerks is of more recent growth. Anything that has a tendency to make more satisfactory the relations between the employee and employer, and that will tend to create more interest in the former in the latter is worthy of consideration. THE GROCER is pleased to see that some interest has been awakened in the trade regarding the matter, and further short, sharp, and pointed correspondence is solicited on this most important subject.

The butcher, the baker, the candle maker, and even the undertaker is being affected by the advance in the price of hog products. The undertaker's pockets are touched through the advance in candles, which has been marked of late. It was only a couple of weeks ago that the price of the imported article appreciated 20 per cent. at a bound.

Appearance in the person and in the store play an important part in the grocery trade. Where the store is untidy and the proprietor and clerks "seedy," business is usually found at a low ebb. People appreciate brightness and cleanliness. They like to see the stock well arranged and natty, and attentive clerks. It is neatness they demand, not "loudness," and where they find these things they bestow their patronage. Under no condition can there be an excuse for either "seedy" grocers or stores. It is just as cheap to keep yourself and your store in an attractive as in an unattractive condition, for cleanliness costs comparatively nothing. What is more attractive in a grocery store than a clean white coat and apron! Nothing. And yet, notwithstanding the cheapness of these, how often does one see the one of the other marked by its absence. The successful grocers to-day are those whose stores and persons are inviting, and where snap and push are present.

The Dominion Grocer was caught red handed appropriating an article from this journal without giving credit as is customary with reputable papers. In its last issue it acknowledges its guilt, and then assumes the cap of the jester in the hope that by acting the fool its character as a newspaper kleptomaniac will be lost sight of.

Passiveness regarding matters affecting their own immediate interests is a peculiarity of the people of to-day. Grocers come under its ban as well as any other class. Anomalies without number exist in the trade. To remove these associations have been formed. A good many members seem to think that after organization has been completed their duties are finished. They reason something like this: "Well, I have done my duty, so I guess the association can get along without me. I will keep my membership fee paid up, but there are plenty of men who know how to run it better than I, and, anyhow, I won't be missed." As a result the attendance at the regular meetings is confined to a faithful few, who not only transact the business of the association but fight the battles for probably three, four, or more hundred members. This is not right. It is not just. In a word it is cowardly to unload upon the shoulders of the few the burdens of the many. Here is the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association for instance. The benefits that have accrued to the retail trade since its inception some years ago are marked. Not only have many anomalies been removed, but schemes for self-protection have been devised and carried out. There is the "dead beat" list for example, that is sent out monthly to its members. If the association had accomplished nothing else it has in this particular done what should entitle it to the hearty support of the trade. True, the membership is a good one; but the trouble is the same as with all other associations—the attendance at the regular meetings is not what it should be.

The question of sugar in bags has become a burning one in the United States, and it seems to be getting gradually warmer. The agitation began some months ago when the manufacturers began to ship refined sugar for table use in bags of 100 pounds instead of the conventional 350 pound barrel. A scarcity of barrels is understood to be the reason advanced by the trust for the innovation. The departure is proving unpopular, particularly with retailers. They claim that granulated sugars so packed and shipped are in danger of serious contamination from absorbing odors from other goods and also germs of diseases, and to become damp, hard, and unfit for table use. Another objection is that a loss of revenue is entailed to the retailer by the fact that whereas a customer could be found for the empty barrels, the empty bags prove unsaleable. Even the wholesalers are not pleased, as is evidenced by a number of interviews published recently in the Boston Daily Globe.

THE RETAIL PRICE OF SOAP.

Last week's GROCER announced that a movement was on foot to try and induce the retail trade to adopt a uniform price for "mottled" soap. In pursuance of this the following letter has been addressed to President Clarke of the Retail Grocers' Association, by John Taylor & Co.:

Dear Sir,—Now that it has been necessary to advance the price of soaps on account of the advance in the price of raw materials, it occurred to us that it would be only a matter of good business policy for your association to impress upon its members the advisability of observing a uniform price for our specialty, "Morse's Mottled" soap. At 7c. a bar, or three bars for 20c., the consumer is getting good value and the grocer is getting a fair profit. Of course it does not so much concern us where or how the goods are sold but it does materially affect the grocery trade whether they work for nothing or not, and surely, after having had so many lessons on this point of cutting, they should, where an opportunity offers itself, as in the present instance, adopt some uniform price, and avoid the needless waste of what just profits they are entitled to.

CANNED GOODS GOSSIP.

Gunn Bros., of the Strathroy canning factory, lately shipped $10,000 worth of canned goods. They are now unloading several thousand cans for the trade of the coming season, which they expect will largely exceed that of last year.

According to the Vancouver News-Advertiser, the Anglo-British Columbia Packing Company, Limited, are making arrangements for a heavy season's work, this year being the "fat" one in the salmon canning industry. They intend building a large warehouse next to the Britannia cannery to store salmon in, so as to load the ship at that cannery. They will probably load three vessels with salmon this year.

The first salmon fishing boats of the season were seen putting out their nets in the Fraser a few days ago. The floating ice is reported to considerably interfere with the nets, and renders the manipulation of the boats a work of much difficulty. A big run of spring salmon is expected by the old fishermen.

Latest reports from Baltimore indicate a soft spot in the market for canned string beans. In any event one or two offers have been made at 70c. there during the past few days.—N.Y. Bulletin.

A London report having date of February 28th, says: "Canned lobsters of good merchantable quality being exceedingly difficult to meet with, are taken off on the basis of former high quotations, whilst anything of an inferior or undesirable character can be realized at remarkably reduced figures. Another ship, the Drum Rock, with 38,298 cases salmon, from San Francisco, has arrived at Liverpool since our last report, but it has made no difference to the market here, which remains quiet, and only retail parcels as they chance to be required have been sold at the full prices named by holders who profess to believe in a rising market. Californian fruits have engaged more attention, apricots at 6s. to 6s. 6d. for standards, as before, and 'gallon' apples at 8s. per dozen tins. Apple rings are of ready sale, mostly at from 44s. to 52s. per cwt., the supplies to offer and in stock being nearly all exhausted."

The N.Y. Bulletin says that orders have been placed for coming season's pack of French peas at about the same prices that ruled at the opening of the advance order season last year.

The canning factory which was started last year at Belleville did so large and so profitable a business that the output will be doubled this year.

SOMETHING ABOUT CURED MEATS.

Cured meat is a staple article of food in all countries. Canadians consume their share, but at the same time we are fastidious in our tastes regarding the quality we eat. We demand good meat well cured. W. A. McClean & Co., the Owen Sound pork packers realize this, and the quality of the meat products they place on the market have a wide constituency. Their "Diamond A" hams are particularly well-known. Integrity and the use of first-class material in the preparation of their meats are the factors to which are due the success of this firm.

DELETERIOUS ADULTERANTS.

The Medical World, in an article on adulteration, says: Simple adulteration is not likely to be quite as harmful as is the employment of powerful antiseptic agents for the purpose of preventing certain foods from decomposition. The problem has not yet been solved of finding a harmless preservative agent, excepting common salt, wood smoke, and the action of heat. Prominent among the powerful preservative chemicals, and the one most commonly used, is salicylic acid. It is extensively used to keep certain malt liquors, cider, and artificial drinks. It is also used to preserve a large variety of canned foods, especially vegetables. These articles can all be preserved without its use, but the processes are somewhat expensive and difficult; hence the resort to the cheaper and easier method. It is occasionally used in certain dietary preparations in quantities sufficient to preserve them. So severe is salicylic acid's action upon the coat of the stomach, producing great irritation and finally gastric catarrh, that it is now seldom prescribed at all.

The Druggist's Circular also writes on the same subject. In reference to adulterated sugar it says renewed attention is called to the almost universal practice on the part of manufacturers of tinting refined sugar with ultramarine, or other blue pigments or dyes. This fraudulent practice, well known to students of adulteration, enables the refiner to supply at moderate cost, a demand, real or fancied, for extremely white sugar. The masses of the public are too apt to judge of the value of even food stuffs by the appearance only, and make no effort to ascertain how the result they desire is attained.

The pigment generally used for this purpose, as already mentioned, is the artificial mineral substance known as ultramarine, a sulphur compound, the precise nature of which is not fully understood. That it has some medicinal action may readily be inferred from the presence in it of sulphur, an element more active perhaps than it is popularly supposed to be. So far as we can learn, this inference has not been disproved, and even if a scientific commission should decide that it was harmless, individuals might still object to being dosed with blue paint when they demanded only sugar. Aniline dyes are also said to be used for the same purpose, and some of these at least are dangerous.

SUGAR AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.

Excellent exhibits of Louisiana cotton and rice for the Chicago Fair are now assured, and steps are also being taken to prepare a suitable sugar exhibit. Some time ago the Sugar Exchange appointed a committee to consider the question of making a sugar exhibit. This committee has, it appears, secured the co-operation of the Sugar Planters' Association, and the president of that association has made an appeal to the planters of the state, at least so it is announced in the last number of The Louisiana Planter. Sugar rivals cotton for the first place among the most important agricultural products of Louisiana, and an exhibit of that industry at the fair would prove doubly interesting from the fact that Louisiana is the only State in the Union which grows sugar cane and makes sugar in considerable quantities. A Louisiana exhibit without a display of the sugar industry would be most incomplete, and would indicate a lack of enterprise that would be far from creditable to the people of the State. In order to insure the sugar display proving creditable, it will be necessary to push the work with energy, as no time is now to be lost. With proper energy, a very creditable showing can be made.—New Orleans Picayune.

CRITIQUES ON MARCH 10 ISSUE.

That article on canned fruits contains a great deal of truth. No more sickening line has been on the shelves for the last three years. Verily they stick closer than brothers.

I suppose the next effort of our esteemed fellow-townsmen, Mr. Callahan, will be a study in dull brown by means of imitation French.

Association gossip makes me think of a good scheme they have somewhere. A blackboard in a prominent place in the secretary's office contains space whereon any member of the association may offer surplus stock. If one only knew it, many a good storekeeper is just wanting the surplus stock which we are sick of seeing lying around.

Alas, how often have we had perforce to supply coffee and chicory instead of the simon-pure! Geo. McConkey says people who must have coffee of the finest grade, must have eggs, cream and lots of coffee. Anyway, you may rest assured that fine coffee makes one of the most expensive and delightful of beverages.

That extract from Ram Lal's essay on the tea bush and its product is more than interesting. Such extracts as these repay perusal, and increase the value of the paper publishing them. There is a marked bias against China products which can be discounted if thought excessive, but otherwise the article betrays a knowledge of tea that is rare and worthy of preserving.

That small squib anent not having the thing the customer wants, and striving to poke something else off is well timed. A good storekeeper will sell a coffin if need be, and even if not handy will have a man out getting it while he talks about or sells something else. Take an order for anything wanted, if you possibly can.

It would be a good practice, if not injurious to the GROCER, to go over the advertisements once in a while and criticize some of the statements made. From cover to cover there are displayed in relentless confusion the merits and excellencies of everything the heart could desire. Yet we know that some of these "merits" do not exist save in imagination. We know that some of the "quick-selling" goods do not sell quickly. We are convinced that some people can do better than those who do "positively the best." We know that everyone's package tea is really "best of them all" and also pays the best profit, but which really is the tea; who knows? We know that the thing which "pleases everybody" really is not known to the majority. And so on. "Delicious things" are not so very nice. "The finest goods on the market" are perhaps a good second; "famous" goods bring famous prices, if not all that the "ad." says; "most attractive" goods are not so. Now some of our good friends will wonder what adjectives are for, if not for use. Yes, they are for use, but not excessive use. You kill a good thing by not using it carefully. The most effective advertisement is that which is striking, without being striking in its subject matter. The printer does his work well in the GROCER, but some of the "ads." are worded as per contra to facts, as known to grocers generally.

STRAIGHT MOYUNE.

THEIR EXPERIENCE WAS EXCITING

Mr. J. A. Milne, representative of Eby, Blain & Co., has just returned from a trip along the north shore and Manitoulin Islands. Mr. Milne reports having had a successful trip, though the hardships of a winter journey to the islands take a good deal of the romance out of it. The journey across from the mainland to the island was a hard and trying one, the ice in some places being covered with three feet of water, and he and his companion, Mr. Munroe, of the Pure Gold Mfg. Co., had a narrow escape from driving into an air hole. The advent of the two hardy Torontonians was the occasion of much jubilation by the Islanders, as during the winter months, when they are virtually cut off from the mainland by the ice and deep snow, very few travellers visit the towns. Telegraphic communication, however, having been established between Little Current and the mainland during the past summer, the Islanders are not quite so out of the world as they formerly were. Mr. Milne states that the novelty of a winter trip, despite its hard experiences, is worth more than the volume of business done.

EVAPORATED APPLES.

The demand for evaporated apples has been unusually moderate for some time, and during the past week or 10 days the weakness has developed into a positive decline, with the position leaning more and more in buyers' favor. The crop of apples last season was light, particularly in the sections where most stock is evaporated, and early in the season, after the first decline was checked, great confidence was shown, with prices gradually working up to a pretty high standard; but the demand has been disappointing, the consumption being particularly light and European wants have been below expectations and supplied mainly direct from interior points, with a great many going from Canada almost throughout the entire season. The fruit was shipped from Canada here in bond for Europe.

The Canadian supply is now about exhausted, and there have been no important shipments of late. Some holders are still showing considerable confidence, and are not inclined to urge business except for small lots, but trade is so limited that buyers have little trouble in supplying their wants at figures below those insisted upon a week ago. Of late there have been a great many old apples, which have been held at primary points, placed on the market, and there has been some disposition by holders to market new fruit, they seeming to have less confidence than previously, and coupled with the dullness, it has resulted in a shading of prices and a lower market, although the decline has not stimulated any increased movement. The quantity of old fruit still in the interior, it is thought, must be pretty nearly reduced, although there are some good sized blocks left, as a lot of 10,000 pounds was recently offered both here and at other points. This old fruit, while not particularly urged for sale, has been obtainable all the season, holders working it out gradually all over the country; and as it has been offered in Philadelphia, Boston, St. Louis, Chicago, and nearly all the markets, it has interfered with trade here, as samples have often been returned, the buyers taking apples of the season of 1891, which have kept exceedingly well, in many cases it being difficult to pick it out from the new goods, as the quality this year is unusually poor, the fruit being of much smaller size as a rule, and often the color is not up to the standard, while the fruit evaporated last year was unusually large and fine. This has also had a depressing effect upon the market throughout the season, and prices would have ruled very low had holders attempted to force the old fruit out, and they have been wise to work it out gradually. The market opened here at 10c. when first arrivals of new came in the latter part of September, weakened to 9 to 9 1-2c. early in October, and by the middle and latter part of October had fallen to 8 to 8 1-2c., and during November 8c. was current on prime; but the market gradually worked up until 10c. was touched in February, and at the close has fallen back to about 9 1-2c. per pound. A peculiar feature, due to the yield of apples in the different States this and last season, is that to a great extent the States that were producers last year are consumers this year, and drawing their supply from the States that they supplied last season. Many in the trade are inclined to believe that the depression is only temporary, and that this old stock will be pretty well exhausted shortly, and, with the increased demand naturally expected when spring fairly opens, the market will improve, as they claim stocks are not large and outlook is favorable from a statistical point of view.—N. Y. Commercial Bulletin.

THE HERRING FISHERY.

In his report of his visit to Labrador last year, Mr. Nielson, superintendent of Newfoundland fisheries, states that from some unknown cause the herring fishery has been rapidly declining for some years, and last year it proved to be almost a total failure. In some places enough herring for baiting purposes could not be obtained; in others only a small quantity of herrings were barreled after the necessary bait was furnished. Not only has the quantity diminished, but the quality has also fallen off, so that the fine quality of herrings taken there a few years ago is no longer met with. This is almost invariably the case in all countries when a fishery begins to fall in quantity obtained, a deterioration in the quality of what is taken quickly follows. In a few localities about Hamilton Inlet, and further north, about Turnavick and Winsor harbor, herrings large and of fine quality were reported to be abundant in the month of September, but the people in these places were unprovided with the means of taking them.

This is a very serious matter for our fishermen and capitalists. In former years the Labrador herrings were unsurpassed in quality, and the fishery as a whole was of great value. Should the present state of matters continue, the loss will be very considerable. The principal seat of the herring fishery of late was Southern Labrador, as far down the coast as Domino Run. Few people north of this point are even now provided with herring seines. Some idea may be formed of the decline of the fishery of late years from a fact mentioned in Mr. Nielson's report, namely, that at Battle harbor, one of the most important herring centres on the coast, there were shipped in 1885 12,000 barrels, while the whole shipment during the seven years that have elapsed since that date has not reached that quantity.

Mr. Nielson found that it was a prevailing idea among the fishermen that the herring were there, but at some distance outside the coast, and, it was reported that they were seen in large shoals by the fishing vessels going north and south. To verify this theory, Mr. Nielson in the Albert went to a distance of 40 miles from the coast, keeping a close look-out for herrings. He also took observations on the physical and biological conditions of the waters, but he found no herrings, and his food was found to be scarce, indicating that no considerable shoals of herring resorted to the waters through which he passed. The search was, of course, too brief and imperfect to settle the question in regard to the presence of herrings off the coast. Had it been possible to spend longer time in the investigation of this matter, and had the necessary appliances been at hand, it is quite possible that the herrings might have been found. The movements of the herrings are largely dependent on the movements of the creatures on which they subsist. When the food sinks down to certain depths below the surface and remains, the herrings will also resort to the same depths, and thus the observation of the fishermen, although they may be very plentiful. When they go beyond certain depths, the usual signs of their presence are not seen on the surface, such as oil or air bubbles. As a rule, abundance of crustaceous food in the sea is a good sign that herrings of a fine quality will be found in that locality. Mr. Nielsen is of opinion that if herrings resorted to the waters outside the coast they would be found chiefly in the upper regions of the sea, and not at a greater depth than from 20 to 52 fathoms.

To determine what had become of the herrings which formerly visited the Labrador coast would require lengthened observations, carried on possibly for a number of years. It is not impossible that, as the fishermen believe, they are off the coast in the deep waters, but at present there is no satisfactory proof that such is the case. There is no doubt that physical changes in the sea, from causes not yet understood, take place from year to year, and affect the movements and resorts of the various food upon which the herrings subsist, and also the movements of the herrings themselves. In this way it is possible the herrings, of late years, have been migrating further and further north, or well into the large bays, where the people, as a rule, do not look for them. "My study," says Mr. Nielsen, "of the nature and habits of pelagic fishes leads me more and more to believe that the herrings are periodical fishes, and that the true knowledge of the course of their regular and anomalous movements can only be arrived at by a long and continuous practical and scientific investigation of their habits in the waters where they are to be found, around the coasts of various countries."

There is but one inspector of pickled fish, appointed by Government, on Labrador, and inspection is not compulsory. Mr. Nielsen strongly urges that, in order to secure an improvement of the cure and create a greater demand for Labrador herring and salmon, certain convenient shipping places must be selected on the coast, where the pickled fish can be brought for inspection before being shipped for foreign markets, and that inspection be made compulsory. The present system is unsatisfactory, and of little benefit to the trade. When a good herring fishery occurs one inspector is unable to inspect properly even ten per cent. of the pack, and when the fishery is poor much will escape his notice, as when he is in one place people in the other districts, not knowing whether he will make his appearance, are often obliged to ship off their herring and salmon uninspected. The stretch of coast is too extensive to allow of the work being done by one man without the assistance of government officials appointed for the purpose. No doubt it would cause some trouble and expense to bring herrings for inspection to certain fishing places; but if in this way a better cure, an enlarged demand and higher prices be secured—as undoubtedly would be the case—the gain would be very great.

In order to secure a proper inspection, Mr. Nielsen considers that the entire coast should be divided into four districts, with a competent inspector for each. The same remarks apply to Newfoundland. In each port from which pickled fish is shipped for foreign markets there should be a capable inspector appointed by government, or, still better, the whole work should be placed under the charge of the fisheries commission, and then it would receive that attention which its importance demands. The profit to the trade would be far beyond the cost of such inspection, as a much better article would be sent to the foreign market, and the value would be enhanced.

In the last report of the Chamber of Commerce it was broadly stated that the enforcement of the Bait Act had been practically abandoned by the Newfoundland Government. Beyond all doubt, the enforcement last year was very imperfectly maintained. The great defect in this service has hitherto been that the preventative officials were not on the cruising grounds at a sufficiently early date; so that the vigilant body of smugglers saw their opportunity, and before the appearance of the steamship Fiona, having on board the protective police, they managed to secure a large quantity of herrings for the first baiting. A portion of the press of Newfoundland is now urging the Government to remedy this defect this season, and to place the steamer early on the cruising grounds. It remains to be seen whether they will show more earnestness this year than last in the management of this service. The Bait Act is by far the most effective weapon we have yet wielded in our contest with the bounty-sustained fishermen of France. The French have a special antipathy to it, which is a pretty conclusive proof of its efficiency. To throw away such a weapon in the unequal combat would be a suicidal policy. The government that fails to enforce the Bait Act is recreant to its trust.

A short time ago the St. John's correspondent of The Montreal Gazette referred to the manufacture of boneless codfish, especially to the industry carried on by G. Munn & Co., of Harbor Grace, in this department. A correspondent of The Harbor Grace Standard refers to Munn's establishment in the following terms: "Fish factories, in the old world especially are not considered the most cleanly or savory establishments; but Mr. Golder (manager) has a factory which for cleanliness and neatness might be placed alongside a Devonshire dairy. This boneless fish industry is yet in its infancy; and if the Home Government were approached officially by that of Newfoundland it would most likely result in the use of this neatly put up fishery product in the army and navy hospitals, prisons and other public institutions." There can be no doubt that if this industry is pushed forward and the article is put on the market in neat and attractive packages, and in artistic shape, the Newfoundland codfish will make its way into many places where it is at present unknown. The preparation of boneless codfish is a most important step in advance.

ADULTERATION IN FOOD.

To elevate the standard of food products, to put a premium on quality v. quantity, has been the object of the concerted efforts of many of our leading houses. To succeed in this meritorious work, they must have the co-operation of their customers; for what will it avail them to handle high-grade goods if there is no demand for them? If the consumer would be well served, he must lend his assistance to the producers, in so much as first to demand that he be well served, and second, to see that he is well served, rejecting all that is not as represented. To succeed in such a system would, of course, necessitate familiarity with the goods handled, and would require study, but what study could be productive of better results? Upon it depends the well-being of the community. Although the art of adulteration has been brought to great perfection, there are in most instances simple methods of detecting sophistication. Jellies, jams, marmalade, fruit, butter, etc., are articles which admit of much adulteration, both in the inspissated substance and the materials used for flavoring. The pulp of the turnip, whose characteristic flavor is easily overcome by admixture and flavoring, is a convenient and favorite material for this purpose; but may be easily detected by the aid of the microscope, the texture of the several fruit pulps for which it is liable to be substituted, being sufficiently dissimilar to be easily recognized. With Jams which contain small seeds, such as blackberry, raspberry, etc., the pulp of damaged figs is sometimes mixed. This substitution, although not apparent to the casual observer, may be detected by the microscope by the difference in texture of the pulp, as well as the difference in the seeds. For flavoring this class of preserves, artificial extracts are prepared from several of the compound ethers and appropriately colored with aniline dyes. They are to be distinguished from the genuine fruit juice by the following tests, founded upon the presence of aniline. Fuchsine dyes a woolen or silken thread a permanent rose color, the tint imparted by natural fruit juices washes out, dilute mineral acids redden the natural fruit juices, but turn those containing an aniline dye yellow, artificial syrups are reddened by carbonate of potassium, but natural syrups are not affected, and subacetate of lead precipitated red with fuchsine, but green with natural fruit. Salicylic acid was first produced in 1874 at a cost sufficiently small to permit of its being used in the arts. It was originally brought to notice on account of its inhibitory influence on putrefaction, and is now used by some packers for the purpose of preserving their goods. When pure it appears as a snow-white crystalline powder, without odor or taste, but leaving a sense of astringency on the tongue, and irritation of the membrane of the mouth. The commercial article is, however, often very impure sodium chloride (common salt), carbolic acid and creosotic acid being the usual impurities. It may be detected in its aqueous solution by the addition of a neutral solution of ferric chloride, which develops a beautiful violet color. This is a very delicate test, one part of salicylic acid in four hundred thousand parts of water having been thus detected. The effect of this acid upon the human system is at first similar to that produced by an overdose of quinine, i. e., fullness of the head, with roaring in the ears. It is a powerful drug, and its effect is to paralyze the higher nerve tissue. In the case of spices, purchasers are apt to accept the fact of their being whole as a guarantee of their purity. This, however, is not always the case. Nutmegs are often punctured and boiled to extract the volatile oil, upon which the flavor depends, after which the orifice is so carefully closed as to defy detection, without breaking the kernel. As the loss in weight when thus manipulated is very marked, they may be recognized, but are not otherwise altered in appearance. An inferior nutmeg is occasionally met with which may be distinguished by its greater length, elliptical shape, the absence of the dark brown veins, and its comparatively feeble odor and disagreeable taste. This is the male, or wild nutmeg, and is sometimes mixed with the cultivated article. Cloves are liable to the same treatment as nutmegs, i. e., the admixture with those from which the essential oil has been extracted by distillation, and with the powdered article, where this practice is extensive, detection is nearly impossible. Ginger root, with the exception that inferior grades are sometimes substituted for the better varieties, is generally sold for what it is; but the flour is frequently adulterated with rice starch, flour of ginger, which has been exhausted in the manufacture of preparations, and occasionally brick dust and chalk; the loss of pungency occasioned by the mixture being atoned for by the addition of pepper or mustard. Tumeric is sometimes employed to give color to the adulterated powder, but may be detected by adding an alkali to the alcoholic solution, when, if tumeric acid be present, the liquid will assume a reddish-brown color.

The quality of cinnamon has a wide range of variation, the best coming from Ceylon, but even this is not constant in quality. The flavor and aroma being much affected by the character of the soil and the mode of cultivation, different localities producing different grades. Cassia bark, however, which is only a species of cinnamon, and an inferior article, is often substituted, or mixed with the true cinnamon. It may be detected, when not ground, by close inspection, as the cassia is much thicker than cinnamon flavor less delicate, and not so strong. In the powder, cassia may be recognized by the addition of tincture of iodine to a decoction which will assume a violet tint, due to the starch contained in the cassia. This does not prove the presence of cassia, but only that starch has been in some way introduced. Allspice, from its comparative cheapness, is not liable to be adulterated, although the husk of mustard seed is sometimes mixed with it when in a powdered state; this, however, can be readily detected with the microscope. Curry powder is composed of several ingredients, of which tumeric forms the greater portion, coriander seeds and black pepper are next in amount, and a small proportion is made up of cayenne, cardamoms, cumin, and fenugreek seeds. Small quantities of ginger, cloves and allspice are sometimes used, but not in all cases. As it enters into commerce it is liable to much adulteration, large quantities of ground rice being often incorporated with the powder, and the reduction in color being made up for by the addition of red-lead. The practice of coloring curry powder with lead is pernicious in the extreme, for, unlike most spices, it is consumed in large quantities by those who are fond of it, and they are thus liable to take into their system lead in sufficient quantity to cause serious, if not dangerous results. For the sake of the additional weight, salt is often added in considerable quantity. With much care the microscope will reveal the presence of rice or other flour adulterations, but would not identify anything of an inorganic nature, further than the discernment of red earthy particles which might or might not be lead; but as no salts of iron are apt to be present, if a small quantity of the powder be shaken up with water and upon the addition of sulphide of ammonium the liquid assumes a dark or black appearance the presence of lead is indicated, and the amount by the degree of color assumed.—N. Y. Grocers' Review.

CONSUMPTION OF WOOL.

The consumption of wool, per head of population in Europe and North America in 1892 was 5.32 pounds of raw wool, and 2.82 pounds of clean wool. This was the largest consumption of record that has ever occurred, being 21.2 per cent. larger than that of 1891, which was regarded as phenomenal. The per capita consumption in 1883 was 2.49 pounds of clean wool, and since then there has been an almost steady increase. Twenty-one per cent. of the raw wool consumed enters into the manufactures of Great Britain, 56 per cent. in those of Continental Europe, and 23 per cent. in those of North America. About 40 per cent. of the wool production is manufactured in the region where grown, leaving 60 per cent. to be obtained from foreign sources.—Boston Journal of Commerce.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE PEACHES.

A Broadway fruit store exhibited the first peach of the season one day last week. It resembled a California peach. A little over four weeks ago, the peach was growing in an orchard at the Cape of Good Hope, and, with a few dozen others was packed in wood and sent by the steamship Methven Castle, to Southampton, England. On arriving at that port, the fruit was at once sent to Liverpool and came across the Atlantic on board the steamship Paris. The fruit, when unpacked was in excellent condition, and in flavor and appearance closely resembles the California peach. The shipment was an experiment. The peaches sold for $1 each. In all probability more peaches, etc., will be sent from the Cape next year, to reach here about January, February and March months, when it is impossible to get the fruit from any orchard on this continent.—American Grocer.

EXPORT DUTY OF LOGS.

The following interview with Mr. Eddy, the well-known manufacturer, of Hull, was published in The Toronto Star a few days ago:

Every boy and man, girl and woman in Canada, has heard of E. B. Eddy, of Hull. If you look over your shoulder you will see it on your package of matches, your washboard, tub, etc. Thus, so it was when I saw the bold Roman head of "E. B. Eddy, Hull," on the Queen's register this morning I started out to hunt him up. Mr. Eddy is a hale and hearty old man, as full of business energy as the Chaudiere falls are full of motive power. His hair is gray and clipped quite short, his shrewd face is clean shaven, and he spoke in a sharp ringing voice, which cracks like a whip when he gets excited. He was dressed in a plain grey tweed, and wore a soft Fedora hat on his head, which he kept shoving backwards and forwards as he warmed to his subject.

"Young man, you have caught me at the right time. I was just thinking of that. There never was a better opportunity of putting ourselves on equal terms with the United States than the present, and that opportunity is being let slip. Canada holds the key of the position on this continent. And that key is not a golden key, or a silver key, or a copper key, or an iron key—no sir, but it is a pine key, a spruce key, a poplar key, and a basswood key, and that basswood key alone can open the heaviest steel burglar proof vault in the United States capital.

"Listen to me. I'm no baby. At one time I was the biggest lumberman in America. One year I got out 70,000,000 feet, so I ought to understand what I'm talking about."

"I wouldn't have come to you if I thought you didn't," said I.

"Very well then," said he, "let us go back a little—for fifteen years. So long ago as that there was an export duty on logs in this country, but it wasn't needed. The Americans had all the pine they needed in Michigan and Wisconsin, and they laughed at our export duty. They didn't want our logs. But the day came when Michigan and Wisconsin, the two geese that laid the golden eggs, were cooked for a Thanksgiving dinner, and they looked around them for something else to pluck. There was only one way to look and that was towards Canada. But there was the export duty. Men like Charlton and that ilk came over here and a combine was formed and influence used with the Government to take off the duty, just!" said Mr. Eddy, leaping to his feet and pacing the room, "just when the duty ought to be put on. What we want now to save the country from being depleted of timber and depopulated as well is a next-door-to-prohibitory duty on lumber.

"And now, young man," said Mr. Eddy, as he leaned back in his chair and pushed his hat back, "I'm going to astonish you. We have got a belt of wood—spruce, balsam, poplar and small basswood, hundreds of miles wide, stretching from St. John's, N.B., to the western extremity of the Lake of the Woods, arching this province, that is worth all the pine that ever grew, is growing now, or ever will grow in the Dominion of Canada. It will be needed for pulp. The biggest pulp mill in the world is being built at Niagara on the American side of the river, of course, which will be fed with Canadian raw stuff—no duty. There are 1,130 pulp mills in the United States, and all these will in a short time have to depend on Canadian material. Now run up the duty to a prohibitory one and they'll have to walk all their pulp mills over into Canada or pay the duty, and in this case there won't be a question as to who pays the duty, the producer or the consumer. I'm not talking retaliation, but I don't see why our country should contribute its very life blood to build up towns and villages over the border.

"The Americans must have white pine and we are the only ones who can give it to them. If we put the duty up to $50 a thousand they would have to have it; they must have it; that settles it.

"The Americans must have pulp—no matter what the duty is they must have pulp and they are bound to pay our price for it. This big pulp mill on the other side of the Niagara river is pretty cheeky—it should be on the side of the river where the pulp trees grow. They've got them at Lockport and Rochester, and they all fatten on our pulp trees and they get them for nothing—nothing. Before you go I want to say this, that of the timber on the North American continent we have got 90 per cent. Try and grasp the significance of that.

WORK OF THE BRADSTREET CO.

Investigations are necessary to the establishment, maintenance and protection of all that pertains to human interests—whether social, religious or mercantile.

Society protects itself by diligent enquiry concerning its every member, as to personal character, habits, and associations. The church examines its applicants as to their faith, creed and practice. The mercantile world investigates as to the character and responsibility of those who assume business relations, either locally or otherwise.

Credit cannot establish itself per se. The bell rung in the vacuum emits no sound; it needs and must have the subtle influence of the atmosphere to give it voice. So credit must be transmitted by the means of human action and personal judgment.

The progress, the development, and the commercial position of every hamlet, town or city are determined and maintained by and through its business men. If these men possess a high order of intelligence and integrity, and are actuated by a proper spirit of enterprise, success will follow their efforts. If, however, they have no real regard for their high duty as citizens, and no just appreciation of the value of commercial credit and its potential influence, then the community will suffer, for its success is dependent wholly upon that of its individual members, communities being but the aggregation of individuals.

The Bradstreet Company is an institution which acts as a clearing house for information affecting mercantile affairs and mercantile credit, originated by and intended for business men throughout the whole world.

One great advantage arising from this organization is that information necessary for accurate judgment as to commercial credits is obtained, through the medium of its service, from various and most trustworthy sources, which would not be so complete except for its wide ramifications, nor so comprehensive except that personalities are waived, and persons supplying information know that their testimony will be held strictly confidential.

There is not a business or profession extant in which honesty of purpose and integrity of conduct is a matter of more vital importance than the service of the Bradstreet Company.

It is the representative of the business men of every community, and is engaged solely in ascertaining and supplying facts upon the strength of which business may be done with intelligence, and therefore with all reasonable assurance of success.

The Bradstreet Company has no interest in the result, whether favorable or otherwise, which the facts thus supplied may produce. Its real intent is found in representing and defending the good name of every worthy business man by supplying correct information concerning his standing, and thus defending him from those who, from selfish motives, may perhaps have uttered libels or hinted doubts or through indifference or ignorance, detracted from deserved credit.

The Bradstreet Company has been on record before the business public for nearly half a century, during which period its methods have been subjected to the most crucial tests applied by a critical and exacting public, whose needs and interests have been stimulated by the marvelous progress and phenomenal development of commercial interests. It has stood these tests, and conferred lasting benefits upon its patrons, and now includes among its clients practically all reputable mercantile and banking houses and insurance companies in this country as well as in the leading cities of the whole world.

Its archives are a mine of valuable information, and contain the detailed history of more than one and a half millions of individuals, firms and corporations engaged in active business in this and foreign countries, besides some hundreds of thousands of others who have an interest in, or who are more or less responsible for, those who assume the direction of mercantile organizations. Thus, through the wide ramifications of its service merchants in any city of the civilized world are able to make sales to or purchases from merchants of any other city, however remote—the knowledge obtainable through this great organization making this result possible. Mercantile credit is thus voiced, the field for enterprise enlarged, and the opportunities for the development of trade increased by the universality of its operations and the acknowledged impartiality of its reports.

BLEACHED CANNED CORN.

Too much cannot be said against the injurious practice of bleaching canned corn, by the use of sulphite of sodium, which has become so prevalent of late. We pride ourselves upon our progress, and with good reason in most cases, but this is an instance of retrogression, the cause of it being, simply, that the effort has not been to improve the quality of the product but to substitute something else by manipulation. Corn was originally packed just as it was taken from the cob (which process is still retained by a few), and in this comparatively dry condition could not be subjected to the quick and intense heat of the steam bath, without becoming scorched, but had to undergo the longer process of the water bath. Prepared in this manner, although it did not always present the white appearance at present so popular with many consumers, it retained the rich flavor which is characteristic of the pure article.

Competition in price has been an inducement to packers to employ methods to cheapen their product. The introduction of water, to the extent of from two to four ounces per tin, makes the use of corn too hard to be packed in the old style possible. This method has become very popular, as it reverts to the profit of the packer in three ways: First, an inferior article may be used, which, during the process of packing, absorbs the added water and becomes softened and whitened; second, the additional water, being thus absorbed, adds largely to the original bulk; and third, the water thus added makes it possible to employ the steam bath instead of the more tedious process of cooking in hot water. It then became necessary to cut under the prices of corn packed in this way, and in order to use an article, inferior even to the second grade, recourse was had to a chemical bleaching agent. This is directly detrimental, both to the corn and to the consumer's health. Treated with sulphite of sodium, the bleaching agent usually employed, the corn is deprived of its natural rich flavor, which is not replaced by the sugar added and the chemical, being a powerful alkali, is highly detrimental to the coating of the stomach, so much so, in fact, that in some cases it is not retained. These methods have become so general of late, that it is a difficult matter to obtain corn which has not been subjected to one or the other of the bleaching processes, and it is high time that consumers, and dealers generally, should protest against this abuse in such a manner as to cause a speedy reform. While whitening may be a desirable feature in corn, but if obtained at the expense of quality, it is objectionable, and if, in addition, wholesomeness is sacrificed, it behooves the consumer to ascertain what he is putting in his stomach.—Grocers' Monthly Review.

YOUR COFFEE TRADE.

The subjoined is a digest of an article that recently appeared in Merchants' Review, and, although it was written for the trade in the United States the Canadian grocer may also find it interesting.

The coffee trade of the average grocer ought to be worth cultivating. Usually a fair margin of profit can be obtained on the article, while the demand is more extensive and steady than for perhaps any other article in the grocer's stock which pays as well to handle. Americans are great coffee drinkers. Although the per capita consumption of this country is less than that of Holland and perhaps several German states, yet the United States consumes a much larger quantity per annum than any other nation, and more than half the quantity that is consumed in the whole of Europe. Retail grocers in this country therefore do not need to exert themselves in order to create a demand for the article, as they often do in the case of tea or with some new and profitable specialty that is not extensively advertised; all that is required is that the demand should be cultivated and turned into the channels that will benefit the dealer himself. There are goods put up in nearly every jobbing centre that would go far to wreck the reputation of the strongest house in the business. Of this class are the gift goods that require expensive articles as a stimulus to retailers to handle them. No grocer who hopes to build up a lasting business can afford to meddle with such goods. If the presents are needed by the dealer he had better buy them separately. He can get them at actually lower prices than he will pay if he takes them with coffee, tea, spices, etc.

A good grade of coffee, offered at a fair price, has few superiors in the grocery trade as a trade winner. Like butter, or possibly flour, coffee is usually considered as a criterion of the grocer's skill as a buyer and his honesty as a seller. If a family can depend upon getting good value in coffee and butter at a certain grocer's, that grocer will eventually obtain their entire patronage. This fact is overlooked by too many of the smaller dealers, who expect that because their stores are conveniently located the whole trade of a neighborhood will be theirs. These dealers are apt to neglect the important matter of quality in regard to the two staples, and in consequence find the tea and coffee stores and the butter and cheese stores absorbing the most profitable portion of their sales. The victims denounce the dealers in the specialties for cutting prices, although it is a mystery how a dealer in a few articles can cut under the dealer in many—the tea and coffee stores not being able to make up for losses on coffee by sales of vegetables and fruits, and the hundred and more articles sold by regular grocers. It is not a question of price that draws so much trade to the big tea and coffee company's emporiums. Many of their patrons are well-to-do people who can afford to pay good prices, and are willing to do so, but they desire a good article and are forced to go to people who will supply it.

All the above is intended to impress upon the minds of our readers the first essential to the cultivation of a large and remunerative coffee trade, which is, a good article. Be at some pains to procure it, and then put your best efforts forth to advertise the fact and draw trade away from the big tea and coffee stores, which for many years have thriven at the expense of hundreds of retail grocers. Do not purchase in too large quantities, but have your roasted coffees as fresh as possible, and, if you can, put in a mill so that you will be able to grind a customer's coffee while he or she waits; it will be a step in the right direction. Have leaflets printed calling the attention of the public to your specialty, coffee, and put one in every package that leaves the store. Strive to make your store famous for the quality and good value of its coffee. If you can sell all the coffee used in the neighborhood of your store, you can supply the remainder of the wants of the residents.

ABOUT TEA.

If grocers would instruct their patrons how to make tea properly, they would have less complaint about poor tea. The fact is we get just as good tea in this country as is grown anywhere, contrary to the popular opinion that the best tea is never imported, but kept for royalty. People will often purchase a fine, close, hard-rolled tea, firm and strong in itself, and they put in a big drawing, wrongly thinking because the tea is fine it requires more. They proceed to boil it, and thus extract the bitter principle, and then condemn the tea and blame the merchant. They buy a coarse, low-priced tea because they mistakenly think it cheaper, and they put in a scant drawing because of its bulky nature, and they boil that or steep it until they get a bad instead of a good flavor, and then condemn both tea and grocer. Few people can prepare tea or coffee fit to drink. A native Chinaman will make an inferior grade of tea appear good by his method of drawing it. The proper way to draw tea is to have the water boiling, allow a teaspoonful of medium tea to the cup; put the tea in the cup, pour the boiling water on, give it a gentle stirring, and by the time it is cool enough to sip the tea is made. Boiling and long steeping injures the best of tea and the best of stomachs.

"How did you like the sermon?" asked the minister of the drummer. "Oh, I liked some parts of it first rate," was the reply. "Your remarks about sins of omission didn't hit me, but when you talk about those of commission I must say you were getting pretty close."—Washington Star.

THE "MONSOON CEYLON"

These Teas are packed in the same well-known style as the popular "Monsoon Indians" and retail at the same prices.

We have a large and varied stock of INDIAN and CEYLON TEAS. Most of our teas being specially packed for us in half chests, and shipped direct from the country of growth, arrive in splendid condition not having been opened and turned out in London.

FLAVOR OF JAPAN TEA.

The slightly unpleasant taste of Japan teas, which militates against its European consumption, may be accounted for by the sulphur and petroleum springs which are found in the vicinity of many tea-producing districts, writes Robert O. Fielding, in American Grocer. At Nutsu, especially, the ground is thoroughly impregnated with petroleum, which has a decided effect on all vegetation.

Kami-bayashi, a tea merchant at Uji, about 1570 A.D., was the first to introduce matting-covers raised on poles about eight feet above the ground—the tree bushes are from four to five feet high—so that people at work can walk under it comfortably and attend to the first crop of leaves. When this is over the roof is taken down and put away in houses or sheds set apart for it, till the next year. Its object is to protect the bushes from the cold dew which reddens the young leaves and gives a bitter taste. It evidently diminishes the radiation of heat from the ground and leaves and thus the nocturnal cooling; the softened light at the same time, lengthens the internodes of the young shoots and make the leaves more tender (maybe this matting roof has something to do, as well as the sulphur and petroleum springs mentioned above, with causing the peculiar flavor characteristic of Japanese teas, for I do not know that it is used in any of the other tea producing countries, China, India, Ceylon, or Java, the teas of which countries are similar in character). When riding through the country in June at the time when the young leaves which yield the first quality of green tea, are fully developed, one notices that the whole country about Uji is under matting, over which the head of the horseman just rises, so that with the exception of the distant hills and mountains and the roofs of the homesteads, the landscape is hidden from view.

PERSONAL MENTION.

The name of T. R. Allison, Bloor street, is up for membership in the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association.

Mr. George Musson has been confined to his house since Friday. A threatened attack of typhoid fever is the cause, and his friends will be pleased to know that he is improving.

Mr. E. A. Agar, who has been with Eby, Blain & Co. for the last five years has been appointed to a position in the counting room of the Empire newspaper.

Mr. Youell of Aylmer, who represents Sloan & Crowther in that district, was in town this week replenishing his samples. He speaks hopefully of the business prospects in the section he covers.

F. W. Vanluven has transferred his services from Stuart, Harvey & Co. who are retiring from business to MacPherson, Glassco & Co., Hamilton. He will cover his old ground. Macpherson & Co. were fortunate in getting his services as he is one of the most popular travellers on the road.

We regret to learn that Mr. T. G. Ballentyne, of the well-known firm of Ballentyne, Johnson & Co., is compelled to sever his connection with the firm and seek a climate where the winters are less severe, for the benefit of Mrs. Ballentyne's health. Since coming here about two years ago, Mr. Ballentyne has shown keen business foresight and abilities peculiarly adapted to the grocery trade, and combined with Mr. Johnston's abilities, the firm have done much to elevate the grocery business in our city. We wish him success—Sherbrooke Gazette.

HAD NO MONEY BUT COULD WORK.

Nothing does more to rouse and deepen enthusiasm among the young than the story of the heroism and patience that make up the life history of some of the men of to-day. We have in mind says an exchange a tale of Vermont grit which recently came to our notice. The story begins with the reading of the will of the father of a tall, raw-boned youth: "I leave to my beloved son a heritage of poverty. May it be to him a higher gift than a mine of wealth. May he use it to the best advantage, so that when it comes his turn to give up his worldly possessions, he may go to the God of his fathers with clean hands and a clean heart." The young man rose to his feet, a new dignity in his bearing, his face set firm as a rock as he said, "I accept my heritage of poverty and hardship and will battle with it with clean hands." There was a contemptuous laugh from his uncle, followed by the question, "Have you got five cents to your name?" "I have what is better," he replied, holding up his ten fingers, "I can work." There was many a fierce battle for the penniless orphan, which sometimes showed itself in the hopeless droop of the shoulders, but with a long pull and a strong pull at such times, he worked on and has made a success of his life work. "Nothing wonderful in it," grunted an old neighbor who had watched him all the way, "take a level-headed boy with ten fingers and an honest heart aching to do his utmost wherever he is, and of course he's going to make a success no matter what he undertakes."

CHATS WITH BUSINESS MEN.

"The consumption of canned tomatoes, corn and peas, is likely to be much larger this season than ever before," remarked a Front street man to me Tuesday. "You see most retailers are selling these goods goods three for a quarter, and they tell me that consumers who come in for perhaps one can take three when they learn the price. The result of this is obvious. At one time the stocks now on hand would have been too much for us; but with the altered condition of affairs it is likely to be the other way with us this season," he concluded, with a smile of satisfaction.

"Those people who are talking about the consumption of syrup being smaller notwithstanding the lowness in price don't know what they are talking about," said one in the trade to me. "Why, my dear fellow, I never saw it so large," he concluded, with a emphasizing gesticulation.

* * *

I hear complaints from some retail grocers regarding the milk permits taken out by them. "When I paid down a dollar for my permit," said one, "it was with the understanding that I was to get it back again when the regular license fee was paid. That license fee has been paid, but still I have heard nothing about my dollar. Inspector Awde, I understand, has been spoken to by others who are in a similar position to myself, and all the satisfaction they could get was the inference from the Inspector that the fee was never legally imposed. How far this is true I cannot say. One thing I do know—I haven't got my dollar back."

* * *

"Yes, it is true that a moral wave is sweeping over the City Travellers' Association," remarked a member to me a few days ago. "You know at one time commercial travellers were rather a drunken lot. In fact, to be able to drink lots of whisky seemed then to be looked upon as a necessary qualification. Things are different now, I can tell you," he continued quietly stroking his moustache. "Why, if some customers even happen to snell liquor upon you they'll have nothing more to do with you. Well, regarding this moral wave. There is, as you know, what may be termed an inner circle within the City Travellers' Association. Its object is to induce commercials to lead sober and upright lives, and it's doing good work, too. Oh, the commercial traveller is quite a different man from what he used to be, I can tell you."

The new building of the Montreal Board of Trade is rapidly approaching completion.

H. Pangman, grocer, Sunderland, is moving into his new store just west of his present stand.

D. M. Smith, Beaverton is giving up business. There is a good opening for a live man here.

T. H. Morton, Little Britain is enlarging his store, as his premises are not suitable for his increasing business.

The wife of Mr. William Parkhill, grocer, Queen Street west, who has been ill, for some time, is still unwell.

The capital stock of the John H. Allan Seed Company, of Pictou and Cape Vincent N. Y., will be increased to $35,000.

The third annual Food and Health Exposition was opened, in New York, on the 7th inst., and is credited with being a success.

Neil McFadden who has been in Lindsay for the past two years in the dry goods business, is returning to his old stand in Sunderland. No place like home, after all.

Mr. John Mills, traveller for the Dalton Soap Works, is lying dangerously ill at his residence, Winchester and Sackville streets. Blood turning to water is the trouble.

Pork packing in St. Louis during the past winter season was the smallest since 1869, and but once in twenty years has the winter's kill in Chicago been so small as this season.

After spending the evening out, when you return home take a cup of Burnham's Clam Bouillon before retiring: it will make you sleep sweetly. Served instantly with a little hot water.

It is reported that the value of the egg product of the United States last year reached $200,000,000 and the value of poultry about $100,000,000, a grand total of $300,000,000 value in a single year.

The annual meeting of the Peterboro Board of Trade was held on Thursday night and the following officers elected for the ensuing year: President, Robert Fair; vice-president, B. Shortly; secretary-treasurer, Hampden Burnham.

The Maritime Grocer is informed that the total importation of American oil into the Maritime Provinces for 1892 exceeded 50,000 barrels out of a probable consumption of 65,000 barrels, and that upon the oil imported a duty aggregating $189,000 was paid.

By last mail it is learned that the Indian Tea Association gives final figures of the season's crop, which show an outturn of 113½ millions against the revised estimate of 118 millions, and a probable export to the United States Kingdom of 106¾ millions.

A local firm complain they recently were obliged to sign a contract with an American firm from whom they bought goods agreeing to pay for them in gold or its equivalent. They say this has not been practiced since the war and indicates the small amount of faith the American firm in question has in its currency.

In announcing a uniform rate for collection of bills, the New York Retail Grocers' Union says it remains to be seen whether or not the new move will be beneficial. Fifteen per cent is now charged on all accounts, whether young, old or outlawed, and the collector is paid a stated salary per month.

Mr. J. D. Irving, who has been in the grocery business in this city for the past 16 years on Lippincott street and latterly on Bathurst near C. P. R., track, has passed over to the great majority. Mr. Irving had been ill for about seven months. Mr. Albert Irving, in the sample room at Sloan & Crowther's, is a son of deceased.

The proprietors of the new pork factory at London have written stating that they will defer arrangements for housing the employes they intend bringing to London from England and Denmark in the spring until their return to the city. It is said that local men will build a number of cottages near the factory for the purpose of renting.

Jimmy Fox of Toronto astonished the natives of Little Britain at a concert lately held in that thriving little town, by singing that soul stirring song "They pulled me back again." Jimmy is quite a success as a concert singer, and his efforts were greeted with applause. It is reported that a man stopped the bus on the morning after the concert and wanted to "pull him back again."

A prominent Brooklyn grocer is "in deep water." He lately took a trip west. Among other curiosities he brought home was a photograph of an elegantly furnished room which he claimed to have occupied in a prominent Chicago hotel. The picture shows very plainly a pair of lady's slippers and a work-basket. "Our friend," says Retail Grocers' Advocate "has offered several explanations to his wife who remained at home, but all to no purpose."

A member of the Grand Haven, Mich., Association says: "We have had a retail grocers' association here for nearly a year and are receiving daily benefits from the movement. We have a uniform price, which prevents us from selling our goods at sacrifice and also protects us from dead-beats and those who are slow and not worthy of credit. The association is a grand success and is doing more good than any other organization we have ever had, as it creates better feeling, larger profits and less losses in business."

In 1868, the consumption of manufactured tobacco in the United States was 1.30 pounds per capita, and 16.7 cigars; in 1878, 2.31 pounds and 40.5 cigars, and 3.5 cigarettes. 1888, the consumption of manufactured was 3.23 pounds per capita, 61.4 cigars, and 29.7 cigarettes.

At the last meeting of the Montreal Chamber De Commerce, Mr. L. E. Geoffrion drew attention to what might be termed some glaring discrepancies existing in the duties assessed by the Customs authorities upon imported wines and liquors. He cited two cases in which the duties imposed upon two different firms for substantially the same goods varied very considerably. It was resolved to lay the matter before the Minister of Customs on the occasion of his next visit to Montreal.

The cultivation of sugar beets in England is evidently being fostered. According to the London Grocer, the sugar factory at Lavham, Suffolk, is about to be restarted by a company, and tenders are invited by the management from farmers in Suffolk and Essex for the supply this year of 30,000 tons of roots, at prices to be arranged between producer and representative of the new company.

"Any stric'lies?" said the grocer's young man, in a matter-of-fact, business-like tone, to the lady of the house. "Any what?" was the surprised answer. "Stric'lies," said the young man, "stric'ly fresh eggs." And thus is language made.—N. Y. Sun.

If you are a grocer, are you selling soap, canned tomatoes, etc., at less than you could buy them for to-day at wholesale? If you are doing so, what are you in business for? It can't be to make money. Your only excuse is that your neighbor is doing the same thing. The chances are that your neighbor would do nothing of the sort, if you did not.—Northwest Trade.

DRY GOODS.

Another draggy week has found a mean existence, and, coming after a more cheerful two weeks has caused the dry goods houses and men to have rather dull appearances. For general dry goods this present month is a sort of between seasons month, and there have been no fine Sundays as yet to make men and women ashamed of their old clothes. In the rural districts roads are bad and trade is very slow. This reacts on the wholesale houses and makes business very dull. Nevertheless letter orders are brisk, and quite a number of buyers are on the market. Some of the travellers are thinking about starting out, and some have gone, but a great many are still in the city. Whatever the present may be, the prospects are exceedingly bright for a smart spring trade.

Payments during the last three weeks of February were very slow; but the 4th of March was productive of fairly good payments. Renewals were numerous as usual, but not more so. Since then payments have been fair from all over Ontario; but are never really good during March. Some dealers complain that the North-west trade is rotten; that even in Winnipeg it is impossible to collect accounts. On the contrary, one house declares that its customers in the west have met their paper well, and they have had no defaulters. This must be due to extra carefulness in choosing customers, for the experience of other houses is certainly discouraging. It is rumored that one house has withdrawn its northwest traveller, and others are contemplating the same movement.

Purple veilings are the correct thing at present, and all available stocks have been cleaned up. The demand is not expected to continue beyond April 1st.

Haircloth has gone up 20 per cent. This is due to the fact that an American house took larger orders than it could fill for these goods. It is being used as stiffening for ladies' skirts, as it gives a crinoline appearance to the skirt, and is not softened by moisture. Stocks are light in Toronto, as the American mentioned sent a traveller into the market who picked up every available piece.

German goods are slow in arriving. The slowness in hosiery is due to a recent rise in yarns in that country, and manufacturers are anxious to buy cheap yarns and still get good prices. With regard to other classes of goods, the reason is much the same.

NOTES

Mr. Begg and Mr. Dewar, buyers for the woollen and carpet departments respectively of John Macdonald & Co., have returned from their semi-annual trip to Great Britain, and have secured the latest novelties for future trade. Mr. Blackey has left for the foreign markets to secure the latest styles of neckwear and furnishings and the newest ideas in haberdashery.

W. R. Brock & Co., are showing some novelties in 6-quarter Irish suitings. The patterns run wholly in mixtures. Black and blue serges in cheviot and bare-cut finishes are in great demand from this house at present.

In veilings, Wyld, Grasett & Darling are showing a range of new novelties in all colors. Navy and gold, cardinal and black are among the leading combinations of chenille spots and nets for the spring trade. Cardinal, tan, and grey hosiery for ladies and children are in great demand at present to match colored shoes and slippers, and this house has a full stock of these in cashmere, cotton and lisle.

Alexander & Anderson report a good trade since the time of the millinery openings. They keep their stock well assorted by means of repeat orders and every other possible mercantile device.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling have experienced a big demand for fancy vestings. They have a nice range of these goods. Their serges are well assorted as to quality and price, and the very numerous orders prove their superiority.

Lace and muslin curtains have been restocked by Alexander & Anderson, and they now have an extra large exhibit for the spring trade. They are also pushing hemp carpets, unions, tapestries and Brussels, of which they carry a very fair assortment.

Caldecott, Burton & Spence have received a very large shipment of French Bengalines in all the exquisite shades of the coming season. In dress trimmings they have shades to exactly match the dress materials, together with beaded gimps, mosses, and fringes. They have complete shipments of Swiss embroideries which were late in delivery on account of the exceptionally heavy demand which has sprung up from the United States. A large number of cases of silk and lisle gloves have been opened up in all colors and in every size.

French printed flannels for ladies' wrappers and children's garments are shown in great variety in spots and stripes by Alexander & Anderson. These are new goods in the latest styles and colorings.

W. R. Brock & Co. are making a special display of cashmere hosiery from 4 inch to 9 1-2 inch in plain and ribbed goods superior in value to anything heretofore shown by them, and they claim that they are the best value in the market. Their numbers in women's sizes to retail at 25 and 50 cents are lines which every live retail merchant should have for leaders. Further shipments of ladies' and children's ribbed cotton and silk underwear are to hand and back orders are being rapidly filled.

Mr. Anderson, of Alexander & Anderson, has gone to England to look up novelties for the spring trade.

Very noticeable amongst Gordon, Mackay & Co.'s excellent display of dress goods is a range of silk check serges in a large assortment of colorings, the newest in the trade.

The special purchase by W. R. Brock & Co., of 6,000 dozen American ribbed cotton vests, a line which they have designated "Rattler," has been sold throughout the whole of Canada, and has proved to be a line which found no competitor. They are receiving several cases a week, and cannot keep pace with the orders, as parties who had as many as a hundred dozen in January have sent in repeats already for a similar amount. They can be retailed at 3 for 25 cents, and allow a good margin to the retailer.

German cotton half-hose in blacks, tans, and silk figured on black ground, as shown by Gordon, Mackay & Co., at prices from $1.50 to $2.25, are in great demand. These are particularly attractive, and the orders to be filled show how the trade generally have taken to them.

The Best Grocers Make
a point of Keeping it always in Stock.

[As there is often inequality in the prices of the various sellers on this market, owing to differences in buying conditions and other circumstances, and as prices are modified by both quantity and quality, the quotations given below and in our Prices Current necessarily take a wide range.]

TORONTO MARKETS.

TORONTO, March 16, 1893.
GROCERIES.

The condition of the country roads is bad and interferes a good deal with business. Travellers report that in some places the roads are almost impassable even with a light buggy and a team of horses. Business under such conditions naturally exhibits a falling off in volume, and payments too are a little slower than they were. Trade, however, has a decidedly healthy tone. Wholesalers, travellers and country merchants unite in this opinion, and all anticipate a brisk spring and summer trade. Nothing particularly new has developed on this market during the week. An unconcerned air, bred of the belief that activity will come when the roads improve, characterizes everyone. In fact in spite of present adverse circumstances business is fair. Coffees continue in fair demand and firm. Quiet and firm is the continued state of the dried fruit market. In nuts the feature is a marked advance in peanuts. Ginger still continues to attract the most attention in the spice line. The quietness in sugars is more pronounced than a week ago and refiners can scarcely be said to be as independent, although for future delivery they are as firm as ever in their views. Molasses and syrups remain in much about the same position as before. Teas continue to occupy a strong position and the demand is much about the same, except for Ceylons, which are in little demand. Soap continues firm and unchanged. Canned goods are without material change.

COFFEES.

The market remains in much about the same position. Local demand is fairly good for really good Rio coffees, which continues scarce and firm at 21 to 22c. One house on the street has received an invoice for Rios now on the way which show that the price is the highest yet paid. The movement is confined to small parcels, and business in coffees is on the whole quiet.

DRIED FRUIT.

The market continues to rule steady. Currants are still the most active commodity in fruits, other lines being still quiet. Stocks of Valencia raisins are gradually getting into smaller compass, both here and in New York. Demand here is merely ordinary at 4½ to 5½c. for off-stalk and at 6½ to 7½c. for layers, and prices are firm at these figures. Currants are firm and in demand at from 6 to 6½c. for barrels and half-barrels and at 6½ to 8½c. for cases. Fine good fruit is scarce. In dates and figs there is the ordinary retail trade doing at unchanged prices. Prunes are in fair demand for season at 7¼ to 8½c. for cases; there are no hogsheds here. There has been a strong advance in peanuts. Almonds are getting into smaller compass and in New York prices are higher. It would cost more than present selling price to lay fresh stock down here.

RICE AND SPICES.

Ginger is still gradually increasing in price and there is a firmer feeling in cloves. Rice remain quiet and unchanged.

SUGAR.

On account of the bad roads and the small amount of business doing some of the agents of the refineries have been offering to take bids. On some medium yellows there has perhaps been a trifle of shading done, but in the others the refiners have refused to make concessions. Refiners say that present prices do not pay them, and as they profess to feel perfectly certain that the market will go higher they appear to be unconcerned, and up to the present they positively refuse to make contracts for future delivery.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Syrups continue scarce, with demand for low grade fair. The prices obtaining are 30 to 35c. for low grade, 38 to 42c. for mediums and 45 to 55c. for brights. There is just an ordinary demand for molasses at 30 to 35c. for New Orleans and at 32 to 38c. for West Indian.

TEAS.

The position of the market seems to be as strong as ever. Buyers are reported to be more numerous and as there is nothing coming in stocks are gradually getting into smaller compass. The demand continues principally for the low and medium grades, although a little more enquiry is heard for the dearer grades. The English market is reported to be very strong on low grade teas.

MARKET NOTES.

[Importers, wholesale merchants and manufacturers should send any items intended for this department so that they may reach the head office not later than Wednesday morning. The editor will always welcome such information.]

Tallow is 1c. lower on the local market for rendered.

Eby, Blain & Co. state that California loose muscatels are in splendid stock.

Maple syrup is arriving this week, and is selling at 75 to 85c. per gallon, wine measure.

There is a better demand on the local market for fine Ceylon teas than a week ago.

W. T. Harris, Chatham, N. B., dealer in general merchandise, offers 200 cases canned lobsters, also dried cod of finest quality.

T. Kinnear & Co. are offering special bargains in No. 1 Labrador herring and No. 1 shore herring; also pure cod fish in two-pound blocks.

The soap market continues strong. Manufacturers report difficulty in getting material, and claim that the recent advance does not cover the advance in raw material. Under these conditions they refuse to make concessions.

There has been a strong advance in peanuts. Fire the other day destroyed several thousand bags in the South, and it is thought that this probably had something to do with the advance.

N. Y. Bulletin says that present prices for California prunes look rather high, but the current demand reveals in unmistakable manner the fact that supplies are low and the assortment very much broken.

Read W. H. Gillard & Co's advertisement on page 11. On their special brands of teas they report steadily increasing sales, and the numerous repeat orders from those who have tried a package is certainly the best guarantee of excellence.

The Counter Tea Mixer advertised by W. H. Gillard & Co., in our issue of 28th January and 10th February, is turning out a great success. Every merchant, we understand, who has one is delighted with it and would not be without it for many times its cost.

Sloan & Crowther are offering a special Indian blend of tea of which they are to have control for this market. It is branded "Sangalia." As they have a limited supply only they have not yet commenced to push the sale. It is jobbing at 35 and 40. The quality is said to be very fine.

The condition of the money market is doubtless an obstacle in the way of realization of expected profits on 3-lb. canned tomatoes purchased at $1.12½ to $1.15 per dozen, but some operators hold firmly to the idea that $1.25 will be paid before new goods come upon the market.—New York Bulletin.

Eby, Blain & Co. are receiving 100 cases of Bensdorp's Royal Dutch Cocoa. The manufacturers of this cocoa have just been awarded the contract for supplying the visitors at the World's Fair. An idea of the magnitude of this contract may be obtained when it is stated that the tables are one mile and a half long and will seat 10,000 people.

Gorman Eckert & Co., spice manufacturers of London, are putting on the market a very fine French mustard. It is a very fine article and is put up in neat glass vessels which are useful when empty, and should be a good seller. No retailer need hesitate in recommending this mustard to their customers. It is being placed with the wholesale trade generally, and we would recommend the retail dealers to place a trial order.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

New large rolls of dairy butter are coming in more freely, but general receipts cannot be called liberal. Really fine butter is scarce. Demand is good but buyers and sellers are somewhat apart on the quality. Good dairy rolls ranging in price from 19 to 22c. is what there is the most enquiry for, the greater part being taken at about 20c. and it must be good stock and free of culls to fetch this figure. Strictly five dairy tub sells at 19 to 20c. concessions having to be made for anything off in flavor. Pound rolls are quoted at 22 to 24c. Bakers' butter is still scarce and wanted at from 15 to 17c. The market for creamery butter continues to rule dull, receipts being almost nil and demand poor. What people are looking for at the moment

TORONTO, ONT.

MY DEAR SIR:—

I think it only fair, to let you know, that at a Dinner party at my house the other day, we had some of your Canned Peas, and that their was a general expression of opinion amongst the eight people present, that these Peas were far superior to any of the French Peas obtainable in Canada. It is quite evident that the Lakeport Preserving Co. understand their business, and how best to preserve fruit and vegetables.

Yours sincerely,

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.

While there has been considerable movement during the week, business has not acquired that briskness that characterized it some two or three weeks ago. At the same time the amount of business doing is satisfactory and values are firmly maintained. Stocks held are in no instance heavy, and in some lines it looks as if they will be exhausted before the season is over. Demand continues good for tomatoes, and the second class stock reported last week to be offering seems to be pretty well cleaned out. Prices are unchanged, still ranging firm at 85c. to $1. Stocks of corn are not large, and it is an open question whether there will be enough. Demand is good and prices are well maintained at 85c. to $1. A fine honey, sweet brand is being shown at $1.40, which is just as fine as that formerly imported and sold at $2.10. Demand for peas continues good at 85c. to $1 for ordinary and at $1.40 for sifted. For beans there is just the usual ordinary demand. The demand continues to improve for canned fruits and stocks are rather on the light side, particularly in those lines where last year there was a small crop. Demand is gradually increasing for salmon and the market is strong; prices range from $1.25 to $1.80. Canned meats continue strong, but the demand is merely of the character usual at this season.

MONTREAL.

The canned goods market does not show any new feature at the moment. It is said that several lots of salmon now en route from Liverpool, have been disposed of here, but no particulars can be learned. One of the principal packers cleared out his holdings of tomatoes a few days ago at 77c., and single cases can now be had at 90c.

is a good dairy butter. Fresh made creamery is quoted at 25c. for tubs and 27c. for pound prints. These are outside figures, and inferior quality can be bought as low as 21c.

A few holders of cheese in the west have been trying to press car lots on this market during the last few days. As the market would not absorb them an easy feeling has developed, although there has been no actual change in prices. Business at the moment is of a jobbing character at from 11½ to 12½c. Stilton is quoted at 14c.

PETROLEUM.

The Petrolia Advertiser, in its weekly report says: The speculative market has been dull to stagnation, and a day without a sale now fails to elicit remarks of surprise or disappointment; in fact it is rather expected, as the number of sales of crude oil in one day may be numbered on the fingers of one hand. Nor are there any prospects discernible of early improvement. Transaction on the Oil Exchange are of decidedly picayune proportions, and were it not for other attractions on the Exchange public trading would be a farce. The price of crude however has varied very little, remaining about the same as last week $1.18½. Refined continues active, with local quotations 10¼c. f. o. b. cars here.

The following are the latest quotations at Toronto:—Canada refined oil, 13½ to 14c; carbon safety, 17½ to 18c; Canada water white, 19c; American water white, 21 to 22c photogene, 25c.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS.—There is still a scarcity and prices are firm and unchanged at $1.40 to $1.50.

DRIED APPLES.—Offerings are not large and all coming in would be taken at from 5 to 5¼c. There is just a fair trade being done and no one seems willing to buy at prices beyond those quoted.

EVAPORATED APPLES.—Are scarce and lighter at 9 to 9½c. for single boxes. No car lots are offering and demand is not heavy at the prices quoted. Old stock is quoted at 7 to 8c.

EGGS.—The market is about as variable as the wind, one day being up and another down. Stocks here are light, supply being about equal to the demand. The retail grocer is just buying from hand to mouth, he realizing that the morrow may see lower prices ruling; 17 to 18c. is the range of prices, but it is seldom that the outside figure obtains.

HONEY.—Market remains as before. Dark sells in bulk at 6 to 7c. and in sections at 10c.; white granulated is quoted at 8 to 8½c. for 50 pound tins and in sections at 15c.

DRESSED POULTRY.—Receipts are almost nil and all coming in is taken at quotations. Chickens are quoted at 65 to 75c. per pair, ducks 85c. to $1 per pair, turkeys at 14c. per pound, and geese at 9 to 10c. per pound.

POTATOES.—There are not a great many offering and demand is fair; 82 to 85c. has been paid during the week for car lots on the track, but the outside figure is an exceptional price. Bags sell out of store at 95c. to $1.

ONIONS.—Dull and unchanged at $2 to $2.25 a bag.

HOPS.—Brewers are pretty well stocked with hops, and holders find it necessary to sacrifice in order to effect a sale; 16½ to 17½c. are the ruling prices.

HOGS AND PROVISIONS.

The season is about over for dressed hogs. Receipts have fallen off during the week and no car lots are offering. Prices are lower at $8 to $8.25. Hog products continue in good demand at firm prices.

BACON.—Long clear 10½ to 11c. Smoked backs are 12½ to 13c., bellies 13½c., rolls 10c.

HAMS.—In good demand and firm at 13 to 13½c.

LARD—Pure Canadian is 13c. in tubs, and 13½c. in pails. Compound 10½ to 11c.

BARREL PORK—U. S. heavy mess is $22.50. Canadian short cut $22. Canadian heavy mess $20 to $21.

DRESSED MEATS—Beef forees are 4½ to 5½c., hindquarters 7 to 8¼c., veal 6½ to 8c., mutton 7 to 8c., lamb 8c. to 8½c.

GREEN FRUIT.

A fair trade has been done during the week at steady and unchanged prices. Demand for oranges has fallen off somewhat, partly owing no doubt to the freer arrivals of bananas. Florida oranges continue to find the readiest sale, although Californias may be expected to take their place in a week or so. Demand for lemons is only fair. There is no demand for cranberries and the few Canadians on the market could be obtained at buyer's figures. Apples are lower in sympathy with the decline in England. Local demand is light, but exporters are still shipping out at the rate of about 2,000 weekly. Prices range from $2.50 down to $1, or even lower per barrel. We quote as follows:—Valencia oranges at $4.50 to $4.75 per case, Jamaicas $2.50 to $2.75 per box, Floridas $3 to $3.50 per box, Palermos $2.50 per box; lemons $3 to $3.50 for choice and $3.75 to $4 for fancy; bananas $1.75 to $2.50; pineapples 20 to 30c., Malaga grapes $8 to $9, fancy cranberries $10 per barrel, common $1 per basket; apples, $1.00 to $1.75 for market stock and $2.00 to $2.50 per barrel for fancy.

FISH AND OYSTERS.

Trade continues brisk at steady to firm prices, while fish and trout are still the most sought after. Haddock is quoted 1 to 2c. higher, while steak cod shows an appreciation of 3c. Black bass is quoted a little lower. Quite a few oysters are coming in, but there is no demand and prices are lower. We quote as follows: 7 to 7½c. for trout and ordinary whitefish, 7½c. for Manitoba whitefish, 4½c. per lb. or $3 per hundred for frozen Lake herring, 10c. for mackerel, 13c. for B.C. frozen salmon, and 17c. for fresh ditto, 5 to 7c. for smelts, 6 to 7c. for haddock, 4 to 4½c. for market cod, 10c. for steak cod, 5c. for flounders, 6½c. for skinned and boned codfish, $3 per half bbl. for Labrador herring, $2.75 per half bbl. for shore herring, 11 to 12½c. for Digby herring, 4c. for boneless fish, 7 to 8c. for boneless cod, 7c. for pike, 7c. for pickerel; ciscoes $1.50 to $1.75 a hundred, black bass 10 to 12½c. a pound; oysters, $1.25 for stds., and $2 select.

HIDES, SKINS, WOOL, TALLOW.

HIDES—There is about the usual quantity offering, and dealers report that they are selling freely. Prices are unchanged at 5 to 5½c. for cured and at 4½c. for No. 1 cows'.

SKINS—Skeepskins are a little easier in prices at $1.35 to $1.40. Calfskins are beginning to be a little more plentiful, and they sell readily at 8c. a pound.

WOOL—There are no white wools left on this market. Pulled wools sell well at from 22 to 23c. for supers and at 26 to 27c. for extras. No. 1 and black are unchanged at 20 to 21c. Demand from local mills is moderate.

TALLOW—Market is easier. Highest price being paid for rendered is 7c., while rough is unchanged at 3c. The market is unsettled, and as long as it remains so not much business will be done.

SEEDS

The market is quiet, deliveries being about completed and jobbers have not began to buy. There are no change in quotations. Dealers are paying $8.50 to $9 for scattered lots of red clover that are offering. In alskie the market remains unchanged, prices still ranging from $5.50 to $6.60. Some interior lots are selling below these figures, while fancy seed brings a little more. For the few lots of timothy offering $1.50 to $2.50 is being paid, while for an occasional lot of flail threshed 25c. extra is paid.

DRUGS.

Trade is good, and prices in a good many staples and necessities are advancing. This applies particularly to disinfectants which are in big demand. Chloroform, opium, morphia, carbolic acid, glycerine, castor oil, chloride of potash are all higher. Heavy chemicals are, as a rule firmer in the European markets. The effect however, not been felt here yet, but it doubtless will be as soon as present stocks are exhausted.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

MONTREAL, March 16, 1893.

GROCERIES.

There has been no important change in the grocery market since our last, and quietness is still the prominent characteristic in all the leading lines, sugar, tea, syrup, molasses, and dried fruits all participating. In fact, none of them have furnished any feature calling for special comment. With the exception of an easier feeling in molasses and the lower offers of canned tomatoes, there is no change in the firm tone that values have presented all along. All the staples, tea, coffee, sugar, syrups, fish and dried fruit share in this feeling of strength.

SUGAR.

A fair movement is to note in refined sugar, granulated at 4 5-8c. and yellows 3 1-2 to 4 1-8c., according to grade. There is little change to note in the position of the raw sugar market, and we hear of no cost and freight business on account of spring importation.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The market has been rather quiet in syrups during the week, with some movement in Canadian at 1 3-4 to 2 1-4c per pound as to quality. In American the sale of a good sized lot was made at 18c. and another at 18 1-2 to 18 3-4c., and we quote 18 to 19c.

Reports differ as to molasses. From Halifax there have been some bullish advices, but it is worthy of note that the market here shows an easier feeling, and round lots have sold at 32 1-2c., while direct shipments to arrive via the St. Lawrence have been offered at 30 to 30 1-2c., which is a considerable drop from previous offers.

TEA.

There has been a somewhat better demand for the cheaper grade of Japan stock, but the market generally still rules quiet. One lot sold at 11 1-2c. and another at 17 1-2c. We quote common at 12 1-2 to 14c., medium 16 to 18c., good to fine 19 to 21c., and finest 25 to 31c. Blacks remain firm, with no low-priced stock to be had. Greens rule equally firm.

COFFEE AND SPICES.

The firm tone of the coffee market is fully maintained, and the supply is still restricted. Round lots of Maracaibo have changed hands at quotations, also some Jamaica, while Rio is firmly held and Mocha is enquired after. Jamaica, 19 to 20c.; Maracaibo, 21 to 22c.; Rio, 19 to 21c.; Java, 25 to 27c., and Mocha, 25 to 28c. Jobbing lots necessitate a proportionate advance on the above basis.

Spices continue strong all round, and we quote black pepper 8 to 9c.; Pimento 6 1-2c., and Nutmegs 50c. to $1, according to quality.

DRIED FRUIT.

Dried fruit has not furnished anything important during the week, although there was some enquiry for off-stalk, but holders are firm on it, and this checks business. We quote off-stalk Valencia layers 4 3-8 to 4 1-2c. for seconds, and 4 3-4c. for firsts, layers 6 to 6 3-4c. for straight lots, prices for jobbing business necessitating an advance on these figures.

Currants are quiet, and values are nominally quoted at 5 to 5 3-4c. as to quality.

RICE.

A better feeling is to note in the rice market, with a freer movement at former quotation. Advices from primary sources give an advance from lowest quotations in Japan. The quotations are: Standard, $3.85; choice, $4; Japans, $4.25, and Carolina, $7.50.

NUTS.

There is no change in nuts, which rule dull and unchanged. We quote Pecans, 11 to 12 1-2c.; Terragona almonds, 10 1-2c.; Grenoble walnuts, 13 1-2 to 14 1-2c.; filberts, 10 to 10 1-2c.; Ivica, 14 1-2c.; Brazil, 15c.; marbots, 12 1-2c.; cocoa nuts, $3.50 to $4.50 per bag of 100 for old, new $5 to $5.50.

FISH.

The market here is practically bare of fish and smoked fish, all offerings being picked up at quotations. The backbone of the market in a wholesale sense however is broken, and no more large consignments are anticipated now. We quote as follows: Haddock, 0 to 5c., cod 4c., lake trout 7c., white fish 7 to 7½c., pickerel or dore 9c.; dried cod, $5.50; No. 1 green cod, $7; Labrador salmon, $13 to $14; No. 2 mackerel, $12 per bbl.; do. $7 per half bbl.; C.B. and N. S. herring, $4.75 to $5 per bbl.; tommy cods, $1.50 to $1.75 per bbl.; fresh herring, $2 to $2.50 per hundred; haddies, 7½ to 8c.; Yarmouth bloaters, $1.50 to $2; frozen mackerel, 8½ to 9c.; smelts, 4 to 5c.

BEANS.

The bean market is quiet and a few wholesale lots change hands at $1.25 to $1.45 for choice with ordinary $1 to $1.20.

HONEY.

Honey is much the same. Buckwheat sells at 6 to 6½c. in cans and extracted 6 to 7c., while bright comb is firm at 12½ to 13c. with inferior 9 to 11c.

MAPLE SYRUP.

No new syrup is offering yet but some is expected shortly. Old stock has been moved at 4 to 4½c. per lb.

HOPS.

The market is quiet and weak and holders have accepted lower prices, 18 to 18½c. being taken.

POTATOES.

Receipts have been so new that freer but prices are firm and unchanged at 95c. to $1 per bag in round lots.

ONIONS.

Demand for onions has been fair and prices are firm at $2.75 to $3 per bbl. according to grade.

EGGS.

The decline in the price of eggs since our last has been steady under increased re-

TORONTO.

Flour market continues dull with quotations purely nominal. Offerings are light because no one wants to buy, but there is plenty of stuff on hand and if any inclination to purchase was evinced there would soon be liberal offerings. A fair demand is reported for feed but at easier prices.

FLOUR.—City millers' and dealers' prices are: Manitoba patents, $4.35 to $4.50; strong bakers' $3.85 to $4.10; white wheat patents, $3.50 to $3.75; straight roller, $3.15 to $3.30, low grades, per bag, $1.00 to $1.25; Ontario family $3.35 to $3.85.

Car prices are: Toronto freights—Manitoba patents, $4.40 to $4.50; Manitoba strong bakers' $3.90 to $4.10; Ontario patents, $3.25 to $3.50; straight roller, $3.15 to $3.20; extra, $3.00 to $3.10; low grades, per bag, $1.10 to $1.25.

MEAL.—Oatmeal is $4.00. to $4.20 Cornmeal is $3.25 to $3.50.

FEED.—Bran (ton lots) $17, ditto (on track) $15 to $15.50, shorts (ton lots) $18; mixed feed $20 to $22, feeding corn 57 to 58c., oats 33 to 34c.

HAY.—Baled timothy, demand is good and supply fair at $9.25 to $9.50.

STRAW.—Plentiful and demand limited, at $5.50 to $6.

MONTREAL.

The flour market has not shown any change, but while stocks are large the supply of desirable brands are rather small, and holders of such are firmer in their views. On other goods, however, of which the supply is large, concessions are offering and values rule unsettled. We quote:—Winter wheat $4.00 to $4.25; spring patents $4.25 to $4.35; straight rollers $3.50 to $3.75; extra $3.10 to $3.25; superfine $2.60 to $2.90; city strong bakers' $4 to $4.15; strong bakers' $3.90 to $4.00.

THE car of Java Coffee bought last June, came in Tuesday, the 21st inst., this with what we had in stock makes twelve tons of Java Coffee now in our warehouse.

ceipts of fresh stock, and now 19 to 19½c. is the general idea. A good demand is to note, however, and the market is kept fairly well cleared up.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

Butter does not show any special change. Dairy stock continues scarce and firm, but holders of creamery are easier in their views, although there is no change in price. We quote as follows: Choice fall creamery, 23 to 24c.; creamery seconds, 21 to 22c.; Townships dairy, 21 to 23c.; Morrisburg and Brockville, 20 to 22c.; Kamouraska stock, 00 to 20c.; Western 20c.

Aside from some odd jobbing business, there is no cheese market here now, and won't be any until the new stock is at hand.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market rules quiet. A small hand to mouth movement is noted in pork and smoked meats at full figures, but business is much below the average. We quote: Canadian short cut pork, per brl. $23 to $24; Canada mess pork, per brl. $23 to $24.00; Hams, city cured, per lb. 13c. to 14c.; Lard, Canadian in pails, 12½ to 13½c.; Bacon, per lb., 12 to 13c.; Lard, com. refined, per lb., 10½ to 12c.

INDIAN AND CEYLON TEAS.

McMeekin & Co's. circular regarding the course of these teas during the month of February says: The offerings of Indian at public auction were 102,000 packages, against 132,000 packages in the same month of 1892. The quality was generally somewhat inferior to earlier arrivals, and a considerable number of teas with reddish leaf and autumnal liquors passed through sale. Business generally throughout the country being dull and unsatisfactory, the trade showed little disposition to operate freely, but the very moderate offerings kept prices fairly steady. At the close of the month there was a better tone and a slight advance in values was observable except in Broken Pekoes, of which the supply is in excess of the demand. The average of public sale prices for the month was 9¾d. per lb. against 8¾d. per lb. for the corresponding month of last year. The imports were 8,810,000 lbs., and the deliveries 8,689,000 lbs., leaving in stock on 28th February 50,210,000 lbs.

The offerings of Ceylon at public auction were 52,000 packages against 65,000 packages in the same month of 1892. The course of the market during the month followed that of Indian teas, the demand being chiefly for the lower leaf grades. Broken Pekoes were neglected, but the small proportion of fine quality teas offered met with good competition. The average of public sale prices for the month was 9¾d. per lb. against 9¼d. per lb. for the corresponding month last year. The imports were 5,125,000 lbs., and the deliveries 4,104,000 lbs., leaving in stock on 28th February 13,675,000 lbs.

In China teas there was only a moderate business passing and 3,400 packages of Java teas were offered in public auction.

WHY HOG PRODUCTS ARE HIGH.

The reason why hog products bring so high prices this year lies in the fact that the winter's packing all over the continent shows an enormous shortage, says an exchange. Chicago has a deficiency that has not been less but once in twenty years. Most other points fell behind previous seasons. Cincinnati reports less hogs packed than in 48 years; Milwaukee packed less than any season since 1866; St. Louis less than 1869; Indianapolis less than since 1873; Kansas City is behind all seasons since 1885. The United States Government report says that North America has 48,059,045 hogs; South America, 2,723,516; Europe 49,164,341; Asia, 488,937; Africa, 546,909; Australia, 1,156,325; Oceania, 33,151; making a total supply of 102,172,224. It is estimated receipts of hogs at Chicago this month will be about 400,000; that a leading speculator has May lard practically cornered, and is shipping it from Chicago as fast as it is being made; that other parties are manipulating pork and ribs, both on the bull and bear side.

A GREAT CORPORATION.

The United Alkali Co., of Great Britain, whose head offices are in Liverpool, was organized rather more than two years ago, and represents, to all intents and purposes, nine-tenths of all the makers of alkali products in the United Kingdom. The capital of the company is between $35,000,000 and $40,000,000, and, in spite of the strenuous efforts of various manufacturers to prevent the formation of what was considered as a great combine, the company now occupies a most enviable position in England, being admirably managed and of a distinctly progressive character. The list of their various products would almost fill a column, but those in which the grocery trade is most interested are Caustic Soda, Bi-Car. Soda, Soda Crystals, Crystal Carbonate, Bleaching Powder, Soda Ash, and Sulphur. The most improved processes of manufacture have been adopted by them, and continual additions and improvements are being made to their already extensive works. Their products have no superior in the world for the various uses, and in spite of the high duties ruling on the continent of Europe, French, German and Italian manufacturers find it more economical to import their goods than to manufacture at home. Their exports to the United States are enormous, while in Canada they probably supply three-fourths of all the alkali products used. The various departments of the business are carried on under distinct management, special sales agents handling the sale of special products. Their office and headquarters for Ontario are at 43 1-2 Wellington street east, Toronto, and is under the management of Arthur P. Tippet & Co., who have charge of the following departments for the Canadian trade, viz., Bi-Carb. Soda, Crystal Carbonate and Sulphur products. The recovered sulphur manufactured by the U. A. Co., is the purest form of sulphur produced, it being guaranteed over 99 per cent. pure.

Mr. Nicholas Flood Davin, M.P. has withdrawn his motion to discontinue the grinding in bond privileges, the Government having opposed the motion.

R. Randall, general storekeeper, Bewdley, Ont., has made an assignment to Charles Langley, Toronto. The liabilities will amount to about $1,000, with assets nominally the same.

Grant Milligan, cigar manufacturer, St Thomas, has made an assignment to Angus McKenzie for the benefit of his creditors. The assets are placed at $125 and liabilities $1,000.

The boot and shoe stock of M. Irving, College street, Toronto, amounting to $872 was sold to Cole & Co. for 70½c. on the dollar and the book debts were purchased by the same firm at 20c. on the dollar. The general stock of G. W. Woodland, Durham, was sold to Joshua Woodland, for 45½c. on the dollar.

A petition has been presented to the House asking for an amendment to the Weights and Measures Act, so far as it relates to the weight of vegetables by the bushel. On Monday it was officially stated no change would be made in the law during the present session.

An Ottawa correspondent telegraphs: "Mr. J. D. Noble, of Petrolea, representing the coal oil interests, is here arranging the new regulations which are to govern the importation of coal oil into Canada in tank cars. The refiners are confident that the resolutions can be framed in such a way as to interfere very little with a practical monopoly of the home market."

It is not likely that the French treaty between Canada and France will be ratified by the Dominion Parliament this session. The Minister of Finance stated Tuesday in the House that he found so many changes made by the French Government since the treaty was signed, and all to the disadvantage of Canada, that, pending explanation of these matters, he will not ask Parliament to ratify the same.

It is stated that the salt mines of Nevada throw into the shade all others known in the United States. One bed is reported to cover 15,930 acres, and no bottom to this salt has been discovered. As deep as the work has gone the bed is solid rock salt, and from a depth of thirty-five feet the salt water comes so rapidly as to prevent work without efficient pumping arrangements. The salt water wells fill up to the surface, and overflow the large floor, from which the fine white salt is continually gathered. The floor several acres in area, has been so well leveled that the water flows evenly over it, and thus by exposure to the atmosphere it rapidly evaporates, leaving a stratum of fine white salt. The yield and production go on continually, and the more rapidly it is removed the better the quality of the salt.—Ex,

TO GET AT THE BETTER HALF.

The following is the text of a bill that has been framed by the Grocers' Protective Association of Paterson, and that they propose to introduce in the New Jersey Legislature: 'Every married woman living with her husband shall be equally liable with him for all debts incurred for necessary goods, wares and merchandise of every kind supplied to them or either of them for the use of their family, and such debts may be enforced by an action at law against said married woman and her husband in the same manner that such debts may now be enforced against the husband.'

INTRODUCING NEW GOODS.

Referring to the communication of a retail grocer which appeared in the New England Grocer, the Philadelphia Cash Grocer says that while it holds that wholesale dealers and jobbers "are necessary to the success of the retail dealer, and, therefore, entitled to a fair profit on all goods sold by them, it does seem to us that those who really introduce the goods to the consumer should have more consideration than those who are only distributors. It is the retail dealer who introduces the article, who forces it to a trial by consumers, and, if it be a good thing, creates a demand and a market for it. His compensation is usually the small margin left after the wholesale dealer or distributor has had his profit, when, in all fairness, he ought to have the full profit above the manufacturers' price as a reward for his labor. Of course, when the market is created for an article it is a gain for the wholesale trade, too, for the whole of the retail trade is seldom accessible to the manufacturer, and that which is not must be supplied by the wholesale dealer. It would be good policy for the manufacturer of a new article of general consumption to use the retail trade to introduce it, by offering the latter all the inducements that are usually thrown in other directions. There is promise of quicker and more successful returns in such a policy, and it is worth trying at any rate."

There is, doubtless, a too prevalent idea on the part of manufacturers that they can force a retail dealer to handle their goods. That's the reason they sell to consumers—to advertise the goods, as they say. The fact is that the retail dealer has more to do with the introduction of new goods than these manufacturers admit. A grocer can force its sale, or he can supply it only when called for—and can even in supplying that demand do it in a way to prevent large sales.

On the other hand it must be borne in mind that the advertising done to the consumers in the daily press—done by manufacturers—does help the retailer.

The truth is that if the manufacturers held out to the retailer the inducements that is claimed they give the wholesalers—someone would cut the price and soon all would follow. The wholesalers don't do this. When cutters cease from the land then will the manufacturers hold out better inducements to the retail trade.

The retail grocer who asks for the doing away with the retail grocer is as inconsistent as the farmer who asks for the doing away with the retail grocer. There must be a wholesaler, retailer, and consumer.—N. E. Grocer.

BEESWAX.

The manufacture of beeswax is in itself an important industry in the United States. Formerly it was prepared in a crude way by simply pressing the honey out of the comb. The best of it is made from the cappings with which the bees cover up the cells after they are filled with honey. It is now commonly refined for market by a new process of American invention, sun's rays being employed to assist the operation. The crude wax is put into a shallow metal tank covered with glass, along side of which is a mirror so placed as to reflect the rays of the sun into the tank. This produces a very high temperature inside of the tank, the bottom of which is an inclined plane. The wax as it melts runs down and strains itself through wire gauze into a receptacle.

After cooling, it is ready for market. Beeswax is utilized for a great variety of purposes—among others, for artificial flowers, phonograph cylinders, ointments, pomades, leather dressings, and the beautifying of floors. It is used for embalming the dead, and by dentists for taking moulds of people's jaws. In India it is employed for dyeing clothes, those portions of fabric which are not intended to take the color being covered with a thin layer of wax. One of the most important uses for beeswax is in the manufacture of candles. Roman Catholic priests are not permitted by the regulations of the church to employ candles made of any other material than wax produced by bees. In the Greek Church everyone who attends divine services must bring a candle of wax. The people provide themselves for this purpose with little tapers.

In countries about the eastern part of the Mediterranean these tapers are current like coins, being a medium of exchange in a small way. The charitable give them to beggars instead of coppers. Mendicants go from door to door with baskets, collecting the little candles, and sell them to the churches. In Europe much wine and vinegar are made from honey, and in France cakes of honey, sugar and almonds are consumed in large quantities. Honey is chiefly utilized for medicinal purposes in China. There, as well as in India, the larvae of bees are considered a delicacy, and the brood-combs containing young grubs are much relished.—Boston Transcript.

RETAILERS RIGHTS.

It is surprising that any question has been raised regarding retailers being justified in advancing prices to keep in line with market fluctuations the same as wholesalers do, caustically remarks Herald of Commerce. Why should they not have the same privilege? Why should they abandon any opportunity to secure a legitimate profit? By what law of trade or justice has the wholesaler such right above the retailer? If a retail dealer has had the keen foresight to purchase goods at an advantage and the same line of goods rises in market value, it is his good fortune and good business methods that he has to thank, and if he pays for his goods and gets no extortionate prices above market value it is nobody's business but his own at what rate he sells them. The retail dealer is but a wholesale dealer in embryo. He supplies the wholesaler the same as the wholesaler supplies him, and has just as much right to a corresponding margin of profit as anyone, and the more fool he if he does not secure it. In this case it is a poor rule that won't work both ways. Competition forces goods down, but does not force them up. When goods fall the retailer has to submit no matter what they cost him, and it is neither justice to himself or his neighbors in business to sell goods at less than market value, or without a fair and legitimate profit.

Leave throat cutting and price cutting to the pirates in trade, and gain respect by honest dealing.

THE GROCER AND THE PRETTY GIRL.

She is pretty and pert, and as she enters the grocery store the eyes of the proprietor follow her round with silent admiration. She asks for celery, and while she is trying to make up her mind as to whether she will take a ten cent bunch or a thirteen cent bunch she eats nuts out of a basket and throws the shells on the floor.

The eyes of the proprietor still follow her, but there is a different look in their depth. After having nibbled at some dates, whose stones follow the shells, she tries some crackers, samples some cheese, and finally decides on the ten cent bunch of celery, which she requests the grocerman to "send round as soon as possible."

With a final grab at a handful of nuts she makes her way out, leaving a trail of shells, stones, and cracker crumbs.

The grocer orders the boy to "sweep up," and spends the rest of the evening in trying to calculate how much he lost on that bunch of celery.

THE GROCER.

The grocer needs must be a man of starting versatility,
Considering all the things he has to sell;

And it's very gratifying to observe the great ability
With which he handles everything so well.

In glancing through the columns of THE GROCER'S current prices,
The multitude of merchandises sold,
From Woodenware or Pickles, to Petroleum or Spices,
Is really most amazing to behold.

There are Chocolates, Cocoa, Licorice,
Canned Meat and Drugs and Paris Green,
Knife Polish, Mince Meat, Mustard, Chewing Gums,
Jams, Jellies, Linseed Oil, Sardines, Soap,
Fluid Beef and Glycerine,
Molasses, Lemons, Castor Oil and Plums,
Saltpetre, Coffee, Salmon Trout, Figs,
Muscateles and Arrowroot,
Tobacco, Yeast, Wax, Foods for old and young,
Tea, Baking Powder, Persian Dates,
Clothes Pins, and hundreds more to boot,
Brooms, Biscuits, Devilled Chicken, Ham and Tongue.

So I think you'll all agree with me that this enumeration

Is sufficient my reward to justify,
That the grocer's versatility is worthy admiration,

Yet I'll give you still another reason why.

You cannot fail but notice that with wondrous perspicacity

To keep right up to date he never fails;
For his store is always stocked to its uttermost capacity

With Eddy's Matches, Washboards, Tubs and Pails.

'TIS A STAB AT RETAIL GROCERS.

There was a meeting of the patent medicine manufacturers and vendors in Toronto Tuesday to take steps to prevent the Local Legislature amending the Pharmacy Act. The druggists of the province will have a bill introduced during the coming session providing that no one who is not a properly certified member of the Pharmaceutical Association will be allowed to sell medicines of any kind. This will seriously affect the business of the retail grocers and general shopkeepers, who are large handlers of patent medicines and simple remedies and on which the profits are larger than on any other lines they handle. It is stated that the object the druggists have in view is to prevent such men as Eaton & Co., who have sold patent medicines at less than the regular prices. The bulk of the business in patent medicines and simple remedies, such as castor oil, epsom salts, senna, etc., is done by the general storekeeper, who is in many instances miles away from any drug store.

THE FAST ATLANTIC SERVICE.

The committee of the Montreal Board of Trade appointed to consider the question of a fast Atlantic mail service in response to a resolution of the Toronto Board have submitted a report signed by all but one member in favor of the project. The objector is Mr. Edgar Judge, the well-known flour merchant, who takes the ground that for all practical purposes a line of steamers making from two to three knots more than the Vancouver or Parisian would meet the requirements of Canada. He considers also that the cost of running a steamer similar to one of the New York greyhounds would be $75,000 per trip, and that the Government subsidy of $750,000 a year would give only $14,000 per trip, so that the steamer would have to earn $61,000, which he considered very unlikely, to make both ends meet. However, despite his objections, the following report submitted by the committee was adopted by the council by a vote of nine to three.

To the Council of the Montreal Board of Trade:

Gentlemen,—Your committee, appointed on the 28th ult., upon the question of a fast Atlantic mail service, beg to report in the shape of the following draft resolution, which it submits for adoption by you:

That it is of great importance to the commercial interests of the Dominion that a Canadian fast Atlantic steamship service should be established at the earliest possible date.

That this council hereby urges upon the Dominion Government the desirability of giving such substantial aid as may be found necessary to secure a first-class steamship service between Great Britain and Canada, with a speed of not less than eighteen knots an hour, the steamships to come during the season of navigation to the ports of Quebec and Montreal, and to the most convenient Canadian Atlantic port during the winter months, and

That the Government should, at the same time, make the necessary arrangements with the several railways to ensure rapid despatch of all mails, passengers and freight carried by the said steamship line.

The whole respectfully submitted,

JAS. A. CANTLIE,
Chairman.

JNO. B. McLEA,
J. D. ROLLAND,

THE POSITION OF MUSTARD SEED.

The price for yellow mustard seed to-day is considerably above the normal, but from present indications there is no likelihood of a break in the value until the period approaches for the harvesting of the new crop. The past season proved an unfavorable one for the seed the world over. All the producing countries harvested quantities much smaller than the average, the Holland yield being barely sufficient for the home consumption, and the English considerably less than was required by the consumers of that country. The California yield had been increasing annually, and during the fore part of last year the leading authorities on the coast ventured the estimate of a probable harvest of 35,000 bags, but subsequent bad weather had an unfavorable influence upon the growing crop, and as the season advanced it became evident that these estimates would prove wide of the mark, and by the time harvesting began it was readily seen that the output would not come within one-half of the quantity counted upon. The results at the close of the harvest exhibited a quantity placed by best authorities as not to exceed 15,000 bags. During the growing season last year reports were received of the unfavorable prospects of the European crops, and later on similar advices began to come in regarding the California product. Though at first the advices were accepted rather cautiously, it soon became evident that an actual shortage in all producing countries threatened, therefore a gradual toning up of sellers' ideas followed, and from that time on the appreciation kept up, until the several crops had been harvested and passed from growers' hands. The market began to rise from the point of 4 1-2 to 4 3-4c., and by fractional advances the value gradually increased until 8 1-4 to 8 1-2c. was established as the quotation of the market, this full price having been reached during November. The demand during the fall was very active, the object being the concentration of the stock by our local operators. The competition to secure supplies was quite sharp, and holders on the coast dictated terms that in most instances were met with but little opposition. English buyers, unable to secure sufficient stock "at home," were compelled to look to California for quantities to piece up their requirements, and purchases were made there of fully 4,000 bags for distribution across the water. After reaching the extreme of 8 1-4 to 8 1-2c. the demand began to subside, and for the past four months no business of any consequence has been accomplished. During the period of inaction there has been only a slight modification of holders' selling limits. The stock to-day is concentrated in the hands of two or three concerns, and supplies are not seeking buyers below 7 3-4 to 8c. The market, though quiet, is regarded as strong, and any material increase in the demand would undoubtedly be followed by an appreciation. The prospects for this year's crop will be anxiously awaited, for upon such will depend the future value of the article. Some five months must elapse before new California can be placed upon the market, and holders in the meantime are counting upon a demand that will absorb the greater portion of the available supply. In past years the picking season has been regarded as the period for active distribution, but more recent experience has shown that there is a good all-the-year-round trade, and that an active demand is likely to crop out at any moment, and it is just such an event that speculators are constantly anticipating. Whether England will require additional quantities to bridge the period to next crop is a question, but holders are not looking to Europe for the distribution of their stocks, they counting upon the trade of this country to take care of the bulk of the goods they are now carrying. European markets are entirely bare, the world's supply being centred to-day in the hands of our local merchants.—N.Y. Bulletin.

THE LOBSTER PACK.

Latest accounts from the British provinces are to the effect that the 1893 season for lobster fishing and packing will be a short one, shorter, if anything, than that of the years 1892 and 1891. Legal restrictions confine the fishing to the months of May and June, and, judging from the experience of several seasons, it is doubtful that the catch of lobsters exceeds the moderate average of the past few years. Of itself, the short season is significant, but another important point comes up in the shape of a demand for higher prices for raw material on the part of fishermen, who now ask $1.75 per 100 pounds, against 50c. accepted for several years. On the top of this is another suggestive feature, the outcome of which is problematical, says N.Y. Bulletin. It is in the shape of full bids by a Maine packing establishment for the output of various Canadian canneries. The Maine goods command about $1 per case more than the same stock packed under the Canadian canners' label and the Maine packers therefore figure conspicuously as buyers at practically the prices that similar goods are offered to the trade direct by the real packers. The several conditions here outlined, along with smallness of spot supplies, imparts decided strength to the future of the market.

IRRITATING THE GROCER.

The grocer idly leaning over his counter and wondering if it would not be good scheme to send to the cannery for a lot of fresh labels for the stock of apricots he had bought some three years ago, when a ring of the telephone bell called his attention, and this is what he got:

"Say! Is this Stringbein's grocer?"

"Yes'm," answered the grocer.

"What's potatoes worth?"

"Twenty cents a peck."

"Are they sound?"

"Certainly."

"If I take a bushel I can have them for 75 cents, can't I?"

"M'm—yes, I guess so. Where shall I send them?" "There's a peddler at the back gate, wants to charge me 25c a peck, and I'speck he's likely to give me short measure at that. Say, I think these peddlers are awful swindlers, don't you say so?"

The grocer didn't say so. He opened his mouth two or three times, but the words refused to come. It is just as well they did, for the sake of the telephone girl's nerves.—Ex.

retail merchants have against the foreign pedlars. Another is the danger to the community through their habits of living. It is well known that large numbers of these Italians will congregate in one house. Into these crowded houses many of them carry at night the fruits, vegetables, etc., which may remain unsold at the close of the day's peregrinations. It is alleged that some of them utilize the space underneath their beds for storage rooms. Whether this be true or not, it is evident that fruit or any article of food stored in a dirty, overheated and overcrowded room is not improved in quality. On the contrary, it is injured, and not only this, but it is well known that fruits readily absorb disease germs, which are afterwards transferred to the stomachs of the consumers. If this were more generally known people would be a little more particular about from whom they purchased their fruits, vegetables, and other articles of food.

Hucksters there always have been, and hucksters there probably always will be, but, like every other class of people, they have rights that must be respected. At the same time they have no right to special privileges or to bear a proportionately less share of civic burdens than any other class in the community. The privileges they are granted of standing with their horses and waggons on the principal and crowded streets and calling out their wares, or of going from house to house, often one after another in close succession, and bringing people to their doors in answer to their summons, is surely not dearly bought at $30 a year. Why, in the matter of bills for rent and light they save that over and over again during the twelve months. Some of the pedlars no doubt think it an injustice that they should be compelled to pay a license fee of any sort or form. But after all these should remember that the pedlar is a bit of a nuisance in the community as well as a sort of a convenience. If he was not he would not be compelled to take out a license; for one of the very objects of the license is to regulate him.

The remark of the Minister of Finance the other day anent the French treaty has caused a good deal of talk, newspaper and otherwise, and it has not been confined to this country either. In fact it has been discussed with avidity in England. All sorts of interpretations have been put upon it, and Mr. Foster has found it necessary to make a further explanation in the House, the sum and substance of which was that he did not in the first instance say that he would not ask Parliament to ratify the treaty this session. What he did say was that unless the conditions were changed the treaty would not at present be brought up for ratification. And in the cross questioning which followed two things were inferred. The one was that the treaty was a little different in some important particulars from what the Government expected; and the other was that Sir Charles Tupper, the Canadian High Commissioner, had been a little too previous in signing it.

Some of the "conditions" referred to have an important bearing upon the value of the treaty to this country. Canada, it was understood, was to have access to the French market under the minimum tariff, which would give us an advantage over non-treaty nations, but it seems that under the treaty now awaiting ratification there is some doubt as to what articles will be accorded this privilege. Then again, the goods to enjoy this privilege must be shipped by a X It was with a good deal of surprise that the retail trade Friday last learned that the Property Committee of the Toronto City Council had reduced the license fee of pedlars to $10—a drop of two-thirds, and had also removed the restrictions as to streets upon which they were not allowed to follow their avocations. Thus, almost without warning, was undone the work that resulted from the several years' agitation of the retailers of the city in general and the Retail Grocers' Association in particular. And aside from the question as to whether the license fee was excessive or not, it does seem that the retail merchants should have been given an opportunity of being heard before the step was taken.

X The retail men of the city claim that their opposition is not so much against the principle of peddling as against a certain section of the pedlars. This certain section is the foreign element, and particularly the Italians. These, they point out, do not, as a rule, come to this country for the purpose of permanently settling here. Their purpose is to accumulate as much of the coin of the realm as they can and hie away again to the hills and plains of sunny Italy, their presence here thus proving an injury instead of a benefit to the country. This is but one of many grievances the French line of steamers. To ship by a line running out of New York or by way of England would mean forfeiture of the right to go in under the minimum tariff, while French wines, on the other hand, could come into Canada by any route whatever. In regard to preserved fish and lobster there is also some ambiguity that needs elucidation. Another difficulty has arisen regarding wooden sea-going ships. Under the treaty these were to be allowed the privilege of the minimum tariff, but during the progress of the negotiations a law has been passed granting bounties to French vessel owners. The value of the minimum tariff to Canadian ship-builders under such conditions is obvious. It is the general opinion in and out of the House that Hon. Mr. Foster was justified in not hurrying the ratification of the treaty until certain obscure points are made clear, no matter how much Canada may desire extended trade relations.

To grocers the clauses of most interest are of course those immediately relating to the trade. Wines, sparkling and non-sparkling, for instance, were to be allowed to come into this country without being burdened by an advalorem duty of 30 per cent. The present duty on common soaps was to be reduced by one-half, while that on nuts, almonds, prunes, and plums was to be allowed entry on payment of one-third the amount now charged. The duty on nuts is now three cents a pound, and on dried prunes and plums one cent a pound. Among others, these articles of Canadian origin were to be allowed the privilege of the minimum tariff: Canned meats, condensed milk, fish preserved in their natural form, lobsters and cray fish preserved in their natural form, fresh or dried apples and pears, and preserved fruits.

The warmer and longer days remind the merchant as well as his wife of the approach of spring cleaning. At least if it does not it should. During the sleep of winter there are always some things that accumulate about the cellar, store house, yard or lanes that are not conducive to health. This season more than usual vigilance should be exercised in this particular. Cholera was epidemic in portions of Europe last year, and some of its victims reached the very gateways of this continent. This year cholera is expected to make its appearance in earnest, and the period of its visit and the extent of its damage will be limited by the precautions that may be taken to grapple with it. Cholera is a dirt disease. If the water supply is pure, the sewage system good and the streets, lanes, yards and dwellings clean, it has little chance of establishing itself. Cholera and other disease germs, scientists tell us, do not proceed directly from filth. They say we may live on polluted soil, drink contaminated water, breathe impure air, without getting typhoid fever, scarlet fever, diphtheria, or, in fact, any infectious disease unless the specific germs of either of these have been introduced. The trouble is that bad drinking water, polluted soil and filth attract the specific germs just as the dead horse on the plain does the carrion crow. But there the comparison ends, for while the latter does not breed, the disease germ multiplies about as fast as one can think. Hence the desirability of cleanliness.

A storekeeper should always aim at keeping the size of his stock in proportion to that of his capital, even if adhering to the rule necessitates the carrying of a small stock. Where the proportion is unequal the merchant is like a ship at sea with an abundance of sail but little ballast. As long as everything is favorable, —customers paying up well, no competition—there seems no danger, but let a few adverse winds arise, and over she goes. The advantages of the wise course are many. Whether a man's stock be large or small he is always pretty secure. He is also in a position to keep what stock he has fresh and new. This, if he is overloaded and short of funds he cannot do. Goods well selected and that are fresh usually find a ready sale. And quick sales, even if the profits are not what they ought to be, is what helps to make business a success.

There was a brief and lively discussion at the last meeting of the United Grocers of Brooklyn that illustrates the old adage that "those who live in glass houses should not throw stones." One member referred to the fact that certain dry goods houses were selling staple groceries at ruinous prices. Other members, while deprecating the practice, pointed out that some grocers were selling towels, crockery, and even clocks, and that before anything was done the members of the association ought to take the notes out of their own eyes.

At the same meeting a short talk was given the members by a Mr. J. H. Meyer, during which he said some sensible things. One part of his subject was devoted to the question of the treatment of clerks. "Many grocers," said he, "treat their help as men, others again look upon them as a mere piece of machinery, with which you have contracted to do so much work. As to the ratio of blame attached to the majority of cases are as six to one and a half a dozen of the other. I often find when a clerk has been dishonest, it is the usual course to take him to some back room, make him admit that he has robbed you, and then proceed to squeeze him until he confesses the amount. You agree that if he pays you that amount you will not prosecute him, he pays and out he goes, probably helped along with the aid of your solid understanding giving him a gentle lift. I wonder if you all know that you are compounding a felony. The law says you are when you enter into an agreement or understanding, express or implied to compound or conceal a crime or to abstain from a prosecution thereof or to withhold any evidence thereof. My advice is to squeeze him until you get your money, and then hand him over to the police. Then you are doing your duty as a citizen and ridding the community of an evil." His conclusions are somewhat harsh, but they are just, and what is just is right. Of course it is well to temper justice with mercy, and the wideness of the mercy should be measured by the circumstances. This should be considered calmly before taking final action by every employer who is unfortunate enough to have in his employ a man whom he has caught in dishonest practices.

Here is a pointer for publishers of trade journals. Take your old blank sheets, give a few extra folds and then tell your subscribers that commencing with this issue your journal will in future be fashioned in the more expensive and handy magazine form. If you have been in the habit of using the commonest of paper, continue to do so. We are indebted to an eastern contemporary for the recipe.

RETAILERS' RIGHTS MENACED.

The bill to be introduced at the next session of the Ontario Legislature to amend the Pharmacy Act, would, if adopted, be a disgrace to the statute book that it would adorn. The duty of our legislators is to make laws for the preservation of the peace and for improving the condition of the people; not to enact measures to the detriment of the many for the benefit of the few.

Ever since this country was settled by white man part of the stock-in-trade of practically every general merchant has been what is commonly known as patent medicines. Insect powders some of them also sold. In all hardware stores these latter articles, particularly Paris green, are to be found. The country has never been injured by reason of these patent medicines and insect powders being handled by this class of merchants. On the contrary it has been benefited.

The bill that has been prepared by the Ontario College of Pharmacy aims to deprive all except duly accredited druggists or general dealers who are not within five miles of a pharmacist, of these vested rights. Even such simple remedies as castor oil, senna, salts, turpentine, horse medicines, etc., would come under the bane. The bill is clear on this point. "No person shall keep open shop for retailing, dispensing, or compounding poisons or medicines of any kind, or sell, or attempt to sell, any of the articles mentioned in schedule A," is the reading of the vital clause. Further down the clause is specified Paris green and London purple. The The schedule A referred to contains a list of poisons. Even scammony, bromide of potash, and other mild drugs are placed upon it. In fact, the framers of the bill seem to have searched high and low for every substance or thing in which there was the smallest proportion of poison and placed it on the list. But after all they might have gone a little further. They might have included some articles that are in daily consumption, such, for instance, as apples, turnips, cabbage, potatoes, etc., for there are poisons in all these. Carrots, of course, they could not have touched; for nature, it is said, has put no poison in their make up.

The Ontario College of Pharmacy has no doubt been led to take this step by reason of encouragements received by judicial decisions in England and in Canada, where judgments have been obtained against persons selling proprietary medicines in which, upon analysis, were found to be certain poisons. Analyze our bread, our butter, and in fact about everything we eat, and poison could be discovered. But the zealous druggists have no desire to carry their investigations so far. It is not the public weal they are most interested in. What they want is a monopoly of the trade of patent medicines. Poison or no poison, they will have no qualms of conscience about selling them. There are about 3,300 general merchants in the province selling patent medicines compared with probably about four-fifths of that number of druggists.

The general, or any other merchant as far as that goes, is just as competent as the druggist to hand a bottle of patent medicine or a box of pills over the counter. Nobody denies that. There can, therefore, be no question as to motive. It is patent on the very face of it. The plea that the sale of medicines does not come within the purview of a general merchant will not suffice, aside altogether from the fact that years in the trade has practically given him vested rights. It does not come within the province of the Legislature to say what one merchant shall sell and what another shall not, except of course where the public safety is in question, such, for instance, as the practice of medicine or the making up of prescriptions. And if the Ontario Legislature is to depart from this principle for the benefit of the druggist, why not for the grocer, the boot and shoe man, the dry goods man, the hardware man—in fact, why not prohibit every merchant from selling an article of merchandise that is outside his immediate line of business? This would only be carrying out to its logical conclusion the absurdity that the proposed bill will initiate. One can scarcely conceive, however, the possibility of the bill going through the House. First of all it has the common sense of the legislators to contend against, while arrayed behind this will be the opposition of the manufacturers of patent medicines and of those whose interests it menaces. It will not do, however, to trust to possibilities. What everyone interested in the defeat of the bill want to do is to drop a line to his representative in the Ontario Legislature. That will materially assist in the premises.

CHATS WITH BUSINESS MEN.

I met a friend of mine the other day who is at present filling a position in a store in this city. In his boyhood he worked on a farm. Like thousands of others he pined for other spheres. After he had obtained an education he taught school for a few years. From that he graduated into business. "I tell you there is nothing like farm life after all," he remarked with a sigh, as he walked by my side tired and pale-looking. "And you can bet that when I have saved a little more money I'll pack up my traps and back to farm life will the wife and I go again. Like lots of other boys, I used to think that farm life was the worst of all lives. But I have found out my mistake. Then think of the pureness of the air, the healthy and exhilarating character of the work, the sweet sleep that comes to tired but healthy body, the plentiful supply of plain and nutritious food. Then look at the jolly winter evenings we have in place of being tied up in the store as I am. Oh, don't I wish I was back on the farm now!" he added gleefully, as he lifted the latch and entered the store. He has already a tidy sum in the bank, his share, by the way, of what his father had made on the farm. And so he is pretty sure to gravitate, as many others would like to, back again to farm life.

"There is one thing that I think ought to be cried down," said a Front street man to me a few days ago, "and that is the practice of some brokers of selling to retailers direct. Perhaps you doubt it, but I know what I am talking about, for we have unearthed more than one case. It is not just to us. These brokers are supposed to sell to us wholesale men, and we in turn to the retail trade. But what do we find. Simply that some of these very brokers are selling to our customers the very goods we are trying to sell. I say it is not fair, and I know one thing, if it is continued we shall stop having anything to do with them. They will soon see where they will be if this and other houses give them the cold shoulder," he concluded, with a shake of the head.

"Did you ever see those piano-hand-organ men loading up their instruments after they were through for the day?" queried a retailer.

"No. What with? Music?" I rejoined.

"No, no. Don't you know what I mean? Potatoes, groceries, bread, butter, and so forth. That's what I mean. If you have never seen them—Well, you watch them some evening. It's a sight I can tell you to see the amount of stuff they will stow away in one of those instruments. My little boy saw them loading up the other day, and he wanted to know if they fed the organ to get more music out of it. I told him no, but that the stuff was to make the organ man strong so that he could grind out music all day to please little boys and to displease their papas. But, say, you ought to see them," he persisted.

Mr. Lewis, of Belleville, eastern representative of Sloan & Crowther, was in the city Saturday. "The roads are in a terrible condition," said he to me. "They are full of pitch-holes, and it's neither wheeling nor sleighing that you can get in some parts. And trade is quiet. But the prospects—Well, they're excellent," he added as he slipped a rubber band over a box of yellow sugar. "And what is more, there's money in the country. Plenty of it. I met an auctioneer in Colborne and he told me that he had just had a sale of farm stock and implements. He said that he got excellent prices, and the buyers seemed to have plenty of cash. He told me that the farmers were well supplied with money this spring. And that is what I hear from other people. You know that firm that was burned out in Cobourg the other day. Oh, you know, Mr. What's-his-name. Well, never mind. Anyhow, the man next door to him had his stock damaged by smoke and water, and he has been having a fire sale. And would you believe it, last Saturday he took in one thousand dollars, and the most of that was cash, too," he concluded, as he tilted back his hat and resumed the work of replenishing his samples.

BYSTANDER.

ADJECTIVES IN ADVERTISEMENTS.

DEAR GROCER,—Your interesting contributor's (Straight Moyune) dissertations, though not very deep and lengthy, are nevertheless pithy and appropriate to our trade, and I read his weekly comments with pleasure, but I think his last week's effusion relative to criticizing the advertisements in your paper, must have escaped the editorial eye or it would never have been inserted. No doubt a good deal of random and rackless advertising is indulged in by some quack nostrum manufacturers in the average daily newspapers and religious weeklies, but I question very much if any of your legitimate advertisers can be justly accused of doing any of this sort of work. As "Straight Moyune's" identity is not known, one cannot tell whether he is one of those jealous j"quack" advertisers or not, but it is not unlikely that he is one of that unfortunate class of retailers who buy everything that is offered them without considering the business standing and integrity of the houses or manufacturers advertising the goods, or the appropriateness of the article to his trade.

"Straight Moyune" denounces the use of adjectives and qualifying words in announcing the quality of one's goods, and decries the use of such trite and appositive words as "finest," "famous," "best," "most attractive," "delicious," etc. He forgets the fact that while a certain article which is advertised, and conscientiously so, by the advertiser, according to his belief and light, as "the best," may not be the best for him and his trade. Circumscribed though it is, it does not follow that the article is not inherently "the best" to some other merchant, or merchants, in some other locality. To the merchant in a section where Japan teas are sold the best China, Ceylon or other teas are dead stock, but that does not prevent the latter named teas from being "the best" for a black tea district. There are men in business to-day who maintain that this or that blacking, blue, soap, or other article sold by them 30 years ago, is "after all the best," "nothing like the old button blue for my trade," etc. Perhaps "Straight Moyune" believes that granulated sugar is "the best," but can you convince a life-long user of fine crystal Demarara that that sugar is not infinitely "the best after all"? I think not.

As I take a great interest in advertisements generally, and those in your excellent journal particularly I crave the indulgence of a little space on this matter. I have taken the trouble of looking through the advertisements of your issue of the 17th inst., and hope your readers will find the comparative statements presented of interest. I also hope that your advertisers will consider that no reflection is being cast on their goods, as their names and articles are only used by way of illustrating my point, and the merchants throughout the country will now, as heretofore, have to be the best judges of the various articles.

Beginning with the front (outside) cover we find staring us in the face the monstrous announcement that Colman's Mustard has obtained the HIGHEST awards and unequalled honors at all the principal international exhibitions. And a list of gold medals, long enough to cover the breast of a champion amateur bicyclist, follows. Turning to page 25 we notice a noted Hamilton wholesale grocery calling the attention of the trade to "Cherry's Irish Mustard" as being "guaranteed absolutely PURE." Now, if a thing is absolutely pure nothing can be purer or better, and it therefore follows that Cherry's Mustard must also be "the best," because, according to a well-known axiom of Euclid, "things which are equal to the same thing are equal to one another." I may venture to remark here that there are thousands of benighted merchants and consumers who maintain, and stubbornly at that, that a certain Mr. Keen also makes another "best" mustard, and I personally know from experience that this same Keen does sell an abnormally large quantity of "the best" mustard.

Below the mustard ad. on the front cover we notice that Messrs. H. A. Nelson & Co. are advertising "Best Quality" of butter tubs. Then turning to page 2 and the inside page of back cover, the E. B. Eddy Co. and the Wm. Cane & Sons' Mfg. Co. also lay claim to making "excellent goods" and "the best goods made." Strange, that both should make the best.

Inside of the front cover a St. Catharines manufacturer has the unheard of presumption to advertise "The Best and Cheapest Mince Meat on Earth." Note the wide range he gives his defiant ad., "Best on Earth!" Our friend must be an American. The writer, while admitting the excellent quality of this particular mince meat, knows of several other manufacturers of the article in this country and the United States, but for fear of being subpoenaed as a witness in a libel suit between these parties I refrain from mentioning names.

Then on some page the well-known London spice house of Gorman, Eckert & Co. states that they make "The finest goods on the market." I am of the opinion our local houses have good grounds for a libel suit against you, Mr. Editor, right here.

But the most striking instance of advertising license as observed through the colored spectacles of "Straight Moyune" is on page 1. The top advertisement of the United Alkali Co., Ltd., of Great Britain, states that their Bi-Carbonate of Soda is "Highest Test (98 50-100 per cent. Pure), while at the foot of the page Messrs. Brummer, Mond & Co., Ltd., claim to making "The Purest and Cheapest in the Market," etc. I am free to wager with "Straight Moyune" that he dare not deny the purity of both these "Best" bi-carbonate of soda. Then on some page we find Messrs. Fry & Sons advertising the "strongest, highest, absolutely pure highest medical authority, marvellous purity and strength, highest grade of pure cocoa manufactured, etc." I am pleased that they didn't use up all the adjectives as I have a very "superior" cocoa myself to advertise and I feel nervous about launching out now.

The Canada Meat Packing Co., Montreal, and F. W. Fearman, Hamilton, both prepare, the one "extra flavored hams and bacon," the other "mild, sweet, delicious flavored goods." Can "Straight Moyune" deny the contention of these two reputable firms? Not if he has tested the goods.

Coming now to the subject of teas, and particularly that public trade disturber, the dreaded "package" tea which is giving some small calibre men so much concern, we find a perfect galconada of adjectives. Page 11 is fairly alive with high sounding and unpronounceable names of brands and adjectives, and a cursory glance by one not accustomed to such literature is apt to lead one to believe it to be a report of the siege of Delhi, a chapter out of the Vedda, or a Russian Ukase. The various advertisers of these Indian teas no doubt believe their teas to be the "best," but if you will turn to page 15 you will observe that Eby, Blain & Co. also have a package tea, with, however, a somewhat more pronounceable title. That this firm's tea is beyond doubt "the best?" and of unsurpassable quality, I am, in the words of Truthful James, "free to maintain," for I wrote the advertisement, and if any of your readers don't credit my assertion all I ask them to do is to order some and see for themselves. We could get along very well with all these "best" package teas now on the market, and the soul of our friend Stephen Hustwitt, was beginning to become reconciled to the number of the enemy, but, oh, horrors! What did his outraged soul say when he read THE GROCER'S market notes of last issue and learned that another of the "faithful" had fallen away. Sloan & Crowther have joined the procession with a new "best package" tea, with an Indian name, too. Stephen, however, like Ephraim, is "wedded to his idols" and will keep on Salaaming to his "original packages," and drawing inspiration at their bungholes. To do Stephen credit he does his "best," and I hope he will long be spared to "Beard the lion in his den, the Douglas in his hall."

Dear GROCER, I might go on enumerating on the extravagant use of adjectives by all your advertisers, the pickle men, jams, jellies, canned goods, meal, etc., but I have already taken up much more of your space than I thought necessary to explain my point. I may state, however, that the use of such qualifying words as are censured by "Straight Moyune," (who, by the way, I am inclined to believe is a very "boxey" Ping Sney after all, and very blue at that), are perfectly appropriate and permissible, and your sceptical readers require only to buy the goods and try them to ascertain if they are "the best," "finest," "most delicious," "purest," etc., as the case may be. As far as regards the absolute purity of the goods themselves is concerned, that is one of the things to be learned on Judgment Day.

In conclusion, I hope my friendly criticism of a friendly suggestion will be accepted by "Straight Moyune," and your advertisers, and readers as in the interests of your numerous advertisers, among the most modest of whom is

Yours truly,

WM. H. SEYLER,

Toronto, March 20th, 1893.

HOW HE WAS FOOLED.

SCENE—Grocery store; Mr. J., proprietor, behind the counter. Enter Mr. M., commercial traveller.

Mr. M.—Good morning, Mr. J.; this is a fine morning.

Mr. J.—Yes, sir, it is, very fine. Well, how are teas to-day?

Mr. M.—Well, they are very stiff. In fact they are going up.

Mr. J.—Is that so? What are they worth now?

Mr. M.—Well, I have a few very fine samples here that are very good value and if you have time and don't mind I will let you see them and you can judge for yourself.

Mr. J.—All right, sir; just let me have a look at them.

Traveller opens up samples and displays them on the counter. Grocer looks at them and says they appear all right and suggests that they liquor them.

Traveller—All right, sir. Just let me have your cups and I will fix them.

Mr. J.—All right, you fix them while I go and put on the water.

Exit to get the water, while the traveller assort the teas and puts the marks on the bottom of the cups. Grocer returns, and, reaching towards a box of cigars, takes one, and presents the box to the traveller, saying: Take one, and have a smoke till the water is ready. Traveller accepts, and both sit down to smoke and exchange wisdom while the water boils.

Enter another traveller with teas.

Grocer—Hello! Just in time; have a cigar.

2nd traveller—No, thank you. It makes me sick. I just brought these samples over for you to try. Here are some of the best teas in the market.

Grocer—All right; we are just waiting till the water boils, and if you wait we will try the teas together.

Traveller No. 2 decides to wait. He takes a seat and enjoys a second-hand smoke, while the others discuss nearly everybody else's business but their own. At length they drift into a discussion on articles they have read in THE CANADIAN GROCER.

"By the bye," said Traveller No. 2, "did you read the article in THE GROCER the other week on tea testing?"

"No; I did not see it," said Traveller No. 1. "What was it about?"

"I read it," said the grocer. "It was about travellers smoking when they were going to sell teas. I think the fellow who wrote that is a crank and don't know what he is talking about. Why there is T., he smokes, and he sells lots of teas."

"Well, I believe that the man who wrote that is a thoroughly experienced man, and perfectly well understood what what he was talking and writing about," said Traveller No. 2.

"Oh," said Traveller No. 1, "you will often come across men that are cranks like that. I don't pay much attention to these things, anyhow."

At last they were notified by the singing of the kettle that it was time to draw the tea, which they did, and after testing and re-testing, and disputing with the man who did not smoke, and whose taste was perfectly clear, the grocer bought a large quantity of the tea he considered according to his then viciated taste to be the best. But the grocer, like many another grocer who smokes, had been completely fooled, for after the travellers left the store the one turned round and said to the other, "Look here, M., you know that that tea was nowhere near the best."

"Of course I do," said Traveller No. 1. "Why, it was the worst tea I had in the lot."

CRITIQUES ISSUE MARCH 17.

To begin with, retail grocers are not going to be beguiled into anything savouring of combine. That idea was unfortunately tried once. Perhaps the good accomplished by the utter failure of the "fixed prices for granulated" some years ago will bear fruit in repressing the efforts of an over-anxious manufacturer to boom his soap by means of a fixed retail price, and the consequent advertising by means of the naturally attendant public outcry will never come. Free trade has come home to stay.

That article on "Evaporated Apples," from the N. Y. Bulletin, was about as indefinite as some of George A. Reid's impressionist pictures. There was an utter disregard of point and a striving after generalities which make reading such concoctions a burden. An "impressionist" picture is really to be admired for some inherent strength, but save us from "impressionist" writing.

Another good information-giving article, this time on "The Herring Fishery," is a commendable feature and well worth reading.

Adulteration in food is an important topic now-a-days, and too much care cannot be taken by the trade in making and keeping a reputation for pure and wholesome goods. A good rule is to buy certain spices always from the same houses. Then if any complaint follows you have definite ground to work upon, knowing absolutely who is to blame.

That interview with E. B. Eddy sounds just like him.

At three-for-a-quarter canned vegetables sell quicker than the most popular blend of package teas, and that rate of progress is likened to hot cakes, only quicker, so they say. We won't say which tea sells so very quickly.

Notwithstanding the emphatic gesticulation of the self-sure authority on syrups the cold emphatic fact remains that syrups are not in it any more as sellers.

Yes, commercial travellers who come into your store smoking their cigar are not by any means as welcome as if they paid more attention to the proprieties. There is no need for business men smoking while attending to business, and this rule is growing in force as a sound maxim for intelligent buyers and also sellers. What is more incongruous than a retail grocer, hoping, working and wishing for success, and at the same time smoking in his store in full and complete view. Very often, we fear, the materials used are old pipes and worse tobacco.

The druggists do not want much, and, inasmuch as they (after securing their amended Pharmacy Act) are going to quit selling toilet soap, castile soap, brushes, fancy meals, toilet paper, ginger pop, candy, ice cream, and the hundred and one articles to which they have no right whatever, why should we grumble?

STRAIGHT MOYUNE.

WHERE HE WORKED.

There was a minstrel show in the city last week and it got off a good hit on a certain Yonge street house that is trying to run nearly every branch of trade except that of selling liquor. The dialogue was something like this:

"Where's yo' workin'?"

"Up at Hungry's."

"Up at Hungry's?"

CARBONIZED PEPPER.

A Western company manufacturing graphite paint tell us of a recent enquiry for a price on a large amount of graphite. It is not the custom of the concern to sell its raw material, and an investigation was made as to the use to which the graphite was to be put. The enquiry was found to proceed from a company having a close business connection with a jobbing house that does a large business in black pepper. The era of sanded sugar and chicoried coffee has evidently given place to the day of carbonized pepper.—Iron Trade Review.

VINEGAR FROM RAGS AND PAPER.

Eternal vigilance seems to be the only price at which the welfare of the vinegar trade can be preserved. Spurious vinegars, purporting to be the genuine article, are constantly finding their way into the markets and competing with simon pure product, despite every precaution that can be taken. And now comes the intelligence, vide a prominent English medical journal—that is quite within the bounds of possibility, according to chemical science—to convert, by a series of chemical operations, an old linen shirt, or a paper collar, or paper pulp of any sort, into vinegar. This authority assures the reader that recent search has shown that by digesting any of the above substances, or, indeed, starch, sugar, or other carbohydrates with alkali, such as caustic soda, a salt of the alkali, acetate of soda, is formed. This can easily be recovered, and the product on distillation with sulphuric acid could be made to yield pure acetic acid, which, as everybody knows, is the acid of ordinary vinegar, in which it occurs to the extent of 3 to 4 per cent.

The trade, that is, the elder vinegar branch, might well be disturbed at this piece of information; but, happily, the authority aforesaid hastens to reassure the public that "this conversion is only of theoretical interest, however, and of no practical value." But who can tell this? In these days of sharp practice and clever adulteration, who can tell that this discovery, theoretical only though it may seem, may not be utilized and put into practical shape by some shrewd commercial fraud? What with false coloring and branding, the elder-vinegar maker has enough to contend with now, but when it comes to pitting his product against a decoction of old linen shirts and cast off paper collars, and such like, it is too much. If that day should ever come, the rag bag will be the rival of the apple tree, and the junk shop will compete with the orchard. Dreadful thought! Imagine, if it is possible, the process of putting up pickles in acetified second-hand garments!—American Cidermaker.

HEAVY ADVANCES IN LEAF TOBACCO.

The root of all the trouble in the cigar trade lies in the Sumatra wrapper market. The McKinley tariff of 1890 has caused a revolution in this grade of tobacco. It was imposed to keep it out of the market, yet has failed to do so, as the consumers of fine cigars will have Sumatra wrappers and nothing else. A year ago, or about seventeen months after the new duty was imposed, the price of pure Sumatra wrappers to the manufacturers was from $3 to $3.50 per pound. To-day the same goods cost $4 and $4.50. This advance has been effected by two things. Principally a shortage in the crop. The Sumatra crop in 1892 was 223,000 bales, against 305,000 bales in 1891. Then again, a new and important buyer has appeared in the market—Austria. Two and three years ago when the Havana crops were failures, Austrian buyers bought Sumatra wrappers as a substitute. The consumers in that country like those in this have grown to like them, and now want Sumatra wrappers instead of the more costly Havana variety. As an instance of how scarce good Sumatra is, some Boston manufacturers, who usually take a week or two in December to pick up their year's supply, were this season in the New York market for two months. It is anticipated that before long fine light colored Sumatra wrappers will be worth $5 per pound.—Boston Commercial Bulletin.

THE CURRANT CROP.

Referring to the market for currants the Produce Market Review of London, in its issue of March 4, says: The position is not without a considerable amount of strength, and in looking at the probable course of future events one very important factor must be borne in mind, viz., the probability, and as regarded by some producers, the certainty, that the crop of 1893 will be a small one. The reason for this idea is based upon the fact that, owing to the "Peronosperous" last year, the vines have been left in a weakly and sickened condition, and where the pruning operations have been commenced the opinion has been forced upon the farmers that particular portions of the trees will not bear their quota of fruit. Supposing this view to be correct, the evils of this disease did not end with the very serious reduction which it caused in the out-turn of the 1892 crop, but it leaves an unfortunate heritage behind, to be borne by that of 1893. Another point which is strongly in favor of the market for the lower descriptions is the fact that the French Government have in consideration a measure which would greatly facilitate the use of currants in the manufacture of wine. It is true that the bill seems likely to suffer postponement, but the hope is still strong in the minds of the Greek farmers that it will sooner or later become law, and that, if not in the immediate future, it will ultimately be an important concession, which will do much to restore the French demand to its former magnitude. A point which is also worth taking into account, and which may affect the sounder and better parcels in the landed stocks of provincial fruit, is the clear indication from the average quality of the last shipment which reached London, that the fruit remaining in Greece is inferior to that which has previously been received. If this is a correct conclusion, it would appear tolerably clear that good sound grocery fruit will not be in any too heavy supply, and will be more or less at a premium.

ONE PRICE.

The merchant who succeeds in building up his business and realizing the most profits, asks one price for his goods, and firmly refuses to lower, says Canadian Traveller. The customers who want good goods are willing to pay what the article is worth. These are truths which close and intelligent observation always confirm. Yet there are some retail dealers who, rather than lose a stubborn customer, will reduce the price of goods to almost what they cost; and there are customers who invariably haggle for a lower price, even if an article is offered at a reasonable rate. The merchant who begins to occasionally "knock off a little" on regular prices, having shown himself vulnerable, will be continually tormented by cunning and mean customers until he yields again and again, to the serious detriment of his business; and only by a decisive return and a continued adherence to a one price basis can he recover his former prestige.

Customers who invariably try to "beat down" on prices wherever they go to trade, although they occasionally get many things cheap, only accomplish their purpose by showing that they have no self-respect; and, moreover, in most places in which they enter, they expend their breath in vain, for care is taken that they never be given a cent's worth more than their just due. On the contrary, reasonable customers, who do not complain at reasonable prices, will be the favored ones, and will have extra pains taken with their orders, so that they will be sure of obtaining their full money's worth. Justice, clear and simple, and business stability, require that goods and articles of all kinds, should be sold at one price. Whoever succeeds under such circumstances in getting anything for almost what it cost, knows that he is defrauding someone out of his dues, and the dealer who yields to the imposition knows that he is sacrificing his own rights, as well as strict business honor.

THAT QUEBEC BUSINESS TAX.

There was a very lively meeting of retail merchants in Montreal on Monday evening last, the occasion being a gathering to consider the provincial business tax which has raised such a rumpus, and the particulars of which have already been fully made public. After a very stormy meeting, at which a report detailing the course taken by the committee who had interviewed Provincial Treasurer Hall and their reception by him were submitted, it was decided to carry the case to the Privy Council of the Empire, so it would seem that the Montreal men are in dead earnest in their intention of resisting the obnoxious impost.

When the chairman, Mr. Joseph Fortier, called the meeting to order, the hall was well filled. On the platform with him were Mr. John Lewis, the hon. secretary; Mr. James Baylis, the hon. treasurer; and Messrs. H. Huot, A. Michiels, Israel Rubenstein, W. Paul, A. Michaels, A. M. Featherston, C. P. Chagnon, J. O. Labelle, R. Hemsley, W. A. Stephenson, J. B. A. Lancot, all members of the committee. The first business was the reading of the hon. secretary's report, which was simply a review of what had been done, ending up with the following strong sentiments:

"On the 13th instant they saw with surprise and indignation that the Government had not kept faith with them, and had, through Mr. Lambe, issued public notice that the tax would now be collected with rigor. The executive committee immediately convened, ordered a letter to be sent to the Treasurer expressing surprise at this action and asking the promised communication on the subject and calling this meeting to take into consideration what shall be done in the premises.

"The Government says: 'Pay the tax under protest if you will' and then we will grant you one or two test cases to prove the constitutionality of the act. There are 1,000 to 1,500 dealers in Montreal subject to this unequal tax, 450 have subscribed 10 per cent. of the tax to defend themselves against its injustice. You subscribers to that defence fund are called here to-night, and only subscribers are supposed to be here, at any rate, only such can vote as to what action shall be taken. We regret that some citizens were unjust enough to refuse to subscribe to this fund, while waiting to avail themselves of the advantages of this agitation and the work of your committee, being willing to reap where others have sown."

After a very hot discussion the following resolution was adopted:

"Whereas, we learn with regret and indignation that notwithstanding our earnest appeals and courteous remonstrances, that the Quebec Government, in violation of their promise made through Premier de Boucherville on the 24th of November last, that the obnoxious and unjust Commercial Tax bill should be remodelled during the last session of the Quebec Legislature, so as to equalize the burden placed upon the trading community of Montreal. But during the session no action has been taken in the matter;

"And, in despite of the promise made by the Cabinet Ministers to our deputation which waited upon them at their own request before the session closed, which promise was emphatic; that although no relief had been afforded by legislative action, the Cabinet would consider immediately the session closed what could be done by order in council or otherwise for the relief of the commercial community of Montreal if any such relief could be had, and that no action should be taken until our deputation was informed of the result of such deliberation.

"And, whereas, no information has been vouchsafed as promised and a respectful letter to the Hon. Treasurer asking for such information having been completely ignored, the only answer being a public notice in the newspapers calling upon all concerned to pay this obnoxious, unjust and unequal tax, and that it will be collected with vigor, and that since the calling of this meeting to decide what shall be done in the premises legal process involving expense has been taken to enforce it. Therefore, be it resolved that our executive committee are hereby instructed to take such legal action in the matter as the solicitors in the case may advise to test the constitutionality of the act, which we believe both unjust and ultra vires."

After this a motion by Mr. A. M. Featherston that the tax be paid under protest and that a subscription be opened to defray the legal expenses of carrying it to the highest court in the realm be taken, was carried amid applause.

The feeling over the action of the Hon. Mr. Hall in refusing to attend the meeting is very bitter.

MONTREAL MERCHANTS' AND THE FRENCH TREATY.

The subject of the proposed treaty with France and the actions of Sir Charles Tupper and the Hon. Mr. Foster in connection with the matter has been engaging considerable attention in Montreal since the first discussion of the matter opened up in the press. THE GROCER'S Montreal representative, in his tour around the grocery trade learned that the parties who are most directly interested in the matter, viz., the wholesale grocers and fruit dealers, all approve of Hon. Mr. Foster's action, deciding wisely they consider, in not taking a plunge in the dark. Besides they all are carrying some pretty good lots of the goods which come under the provisions of the treaty, and consider that it would be most unfair to them to have a sudden change launched upon them without a minute's warning to give them any time to prepare for it.

Mr. Quintal, jr., of N. Quintal & Son, said that he had not paid much attention to the matter, but that he considered all the talk about insults to France, etc., pure nonsense. The treaty must surely have been signed subject to the ratification of our Parliament, and if its members considered that we had been unfairly treated they had a right to delay the matter before binding the country to any hard and fast course. The class of goods affected would be mainly wines and fruits, and even if the treaty was all right merchants should get fair warning before it was enforced.

Mr. Geoffrion, of L. Chaput, Fils & Co., spoke in the same strain, as did other French wholesale grocers whom the correspondent happened to run across.

Mr. G. Childs, jr., of G. Childs & Son, said that he did not want to see the treaty arrangements closed until everything was perfectly clear. He considered that the action of the Finance Minister in the matter was perfectly correct. His firm carried considerable lines of goods which would come under the provisions of the treaty, and he considered that six months' notice at least should be given in the event of the treaty being agreed to before it came into force. This would allow merchants to arrange matters in accordance with the new conditions.

Mr. Hughes, of Caverhill, Rose, Hughes & Co., expressed himself in the same strain, while Ald. McBride, of the firm of Vipond, McBride & Co., fruit importers, did not want to see the treaty enforced for a year. His reason was that the firm was carrying a heavy stock of nuts, prunes, etc., which would stand them a heavy loss if the treaty was put into force without fair notice.

HE'S THE WHITE HAIR ED BOY.

The estate, including the stock and store of the late J. H. Hunter, M.P.P., of Durham, has been purchased by his eldest son, James A. Hunter, who will continue the business in his own name.

When Mr. Hunter died his son James was in Toronto studying law, but he immediately threw it up and returned to Durham, rolled up his sleeves, and took charge of the store in the interest of the estate, his father having died intestate. Now, as already stated, he has purchased the business. If an ideal general store-keeper can be found it is Mr. James Hunter. He is young in years, but he has put his time to such good use as to have acquired a knowledge of his business such as is not attained by many who are his superior in years. He is a careful student of the trade papers, keeps his eye on the markets, and usually knows when to step either backwards or forwards. With the farmers' wives—and the daughters of course as a natural consequence—he is the white-haired boy. He can never do too much for them, and those who have witnessed it say it is a sight good for sore eyes to see the fatherly way in which he tucks the robes comfortably around the forms of the ladies, both young and old, who have occasion to visit his store.

CANNED GOODS GOSSIP.

It is semi-officially stated that the Alaska salmon combine realized an average profit of $1 per case on salmon packed last year. They expect to do as well or better on a pack of 500,000 cases this year.

Apres of California canned fruit, it is learned that some misleading reports have latterly been sent out to canners, no other object for which can be imagined than an effort to attract consignments during the coming season. Those reports virtually affirm that the low prices at which some lines of goods have been sold recently were unwarranted, and intimating that the writers of the reports were in a position to obtain more money. As "business," from a certain standpoint, this sort of canvass may be right and proper, but in contrast with honest trade methods it certainly loses in the eyes of conscientious merchants. All "trade-winning" arguments to the contrary, the local market for California standard canned fruit remains in poor condition. Convincing evidence of that fact may be secured by corresponding with commission merchants and brokers of experience, and on application to jobbers generally.—N.Y. Bulletin.

Latest accounts confirm previous reports that there is little or no prospect of the rupture in the proposed Columbia River salmon packers' combine being healed, and that a combination this season is out of the question.—Ex.

Still bids made by a prominent Maine packer for the product of the various Canadian lobster packers has somewhat excited the provincial canners, and the majority now ask 5 to 10c. per doz. advance on prices that were accepted a short time ago.—New York Bulletin.

It is reported from a New England trade centre that orders have been taken there for an anti-combine brand of red Alaska salmon, 1893 pack, at $1.12 1-2 delivered.

Two lots of 1893 pack canned lobster, aggregating 32 cases, have been received in New York during the past few days; all went at $2.00 per dozen. The goods were in tall tins.

Several canners have made their opening prices for 1893 pack Columbia river salmon. The range is $1.35 to $1.45 f.o.b. shipping point for tall tins and $1.45 to $1.57 1-2 for flats.—N.Y. Bulletin.

The N.Y. Bulletin says that the better grades of American quarter oil sardines are gradually growing in favor, and the prospects are that the use of enough olive oil to relieve the flat cotton oil flavor would help the sale of the goods considerably.

There were some signs of recovery on the New York market from the recent slight decline in prices of gallon canned apples. In any event bids of $2.70 for a fancy brand of Maine goods was refused, while $2.75 figured as an inside price for standard New York State fruit.

CANNED GOODS NOW AND THEN.

When the failure of Jay Cooke & Co. was announced in September, 1873, the commercial and financial classes instinctively realized that a crash was impending. The "crash" came all right, and following in its wake began the gradual shrinkage in value of nearly, if not all, commodities, to the scale of present existing values. No line of goods seemed to offer so long and stubborn resistance to this reduction in price as did the large line of articles known as canned goods. At the date above referred to three-pound tomatoes were held firmly by packers at $2.50 per dozen, there being "no money" in packing them at that "misery" price. Other articles were priced on a similar scale of values. The shrinkage, however, began almost immediately after the occurrence of the above failure, and went on steadily for ten or twelve years, until the scale of values ruling up to January last was established, say 80c. to 90c. for three-pound tomatoes, with only a trifling difference in price as between eastern and western markets, local packers in the west being compelled to yield to the dealer the largest share of the freight advantage he held over competitors in order to clean up his pack. But this gradual cheapening was, as it were, fought year by year in a speculative way by packer, retailer and jobber. Every break in price was assumed to be to a point less than cost of production and bound to react. Every dealer loaded up with a stock sufficient to meet his ordinary trade requirements for years ahead, in the idea that he would unload on his neighbor who had failed to size up the situation correctly as he had, but time gradually revealed the fact that the speculative holder had in his store stacks of goods bought at higher than ruling market price, with the added disadvantage of rusty cans, swells, shop-worn, old goods, in place of new, and fresh goods, loss of interest and storage. In fact, the result was failure to many of this speculative class, and loss to all. Of late years the buying of canned articles has been done by all classes on the conservative shop-keeper principle, of buying as required to meet a regular demand from the regular trade. In this style of trading goods no longer accumulate and grow into swells and "rusties." The packer-made prices are based on the pack to be marketed; it is met by packer, jobber and retailer, and it is consumed. Very few old goods are now found to enrich the warehouseman as in former years. If there ever was a time when the date of pack was needed on canned articles, that time has passed long ago and will never come again. Goods are forced to consumption by cut in prices and by agencies that reach all classes of the people—dry goods stores, drug stores and meat markets—so that the grocery man has to keep his profits within limits or he will cease to be in the business so far as canned goods are concerned, and it also insures consumption of the goods within a reasonable time, say two seasons after packing at most, probably 85 per cent. being consumed before new packing season comes around. There is absolutely no need, therefore, to date cans, as no goods are injurious to health because of their age, whereas a person ignorant of this fact and prejudiced, would perhaps be induced to reject the chance to purchase a palatable, wholesome table delicacy offered at a low price. In such a case ignorance is surely more profitable than knowledge.—Chicago Grocer.

BUYERS AND SELLERS IN TOWN.

These are among the merchants who have called on Eby, Blain & Co. during the week: Messrs. Geo. Parker, jr., Sheldon; D. J. Miller, Gore Bay; Geo. Simms, Nipissing; Geo. Johnston, Ballantine; G. H. Falconer, Streetsville; J. J. Rae, J. Urquhart, Stouffville; Geo. Hagerman and wife, Zephyr; E. H. Disney, Balsam; E. Harris, Gore's Landing; J. F. Ardell, Queensville; W. Bernard, Brechin; Wm. Suggitt, Valencia.

A PACKER'S VIEWS.

A leading Chicago packer says: "There will probably be about 10,000,000 lbs. of short rib sides here at the end of March, against 55,000,000 lbs. last year. I expect in May there will be about the same amount, 10,000,000 lbs., against 44,000,000 lbs. last May. We will get in May and June some increase in the hog receipts, for we will get the hogs now following cattle. I do not expect the hog receipts to become normal until next January. Pigs are usually dropped in the spring and not usually marketed until they are ten months old. Feeders are now willing to pay 7c. for young pigs in the West, and find them very hard to get."

THE MACKEREL SITUATION.

The Lenten season has witnessed no remarkable movements in the market for mackerel or other pickled or salted fish. The strong features of favorable statistical position and prospective large consumption were discounted in advance to no little extent by prominent handlers of the goods, and with no greater demand than was calculated upon, values have fluctuated within narrow limits. A week or so ago there were signs of softness in values and an inclination in some quarters to the idea that changes in prices, if any took place, would be towards a lower level. Auction sales of stock taken from a warehouse that was recently partially destroyed by fire served, however, to allay the rather "bearish" tendency that was developing. Two prominent New York and one Philadelphia firm took enough of the goods at comparatively stiff prices to make it clear that the market still has some friends; that mackerel are not considered dangerous property at present prices, and that not a few distributors are enjoying a very good trade. To all accounts, supplies here and in the East are well under control, while no great amount remains back in foreign countries to come to this market in the immediate future.—N. Y. Bulletin.

WHY ORANGES DO NOT FREEZE.

The hypothesis of Bishop Whipple mentioned in "W. D.'s" interesting letter from Florida in the New York Times in regard to the resistance of oranges to frost is an excellent one for a theologian, but hardly so to any scientific person.

It is a law of crystallization that this process depends upon several conditions of the liquid to be crystallized or frozen, by which is meant simply that the liquid is changed into a solid. The effect of evaporation has much to do with it, as this itself reduces the temperature of liquid to a considerable extent, as may be discovered by any person who will pour a little ether on his hand and blow upon it, when the greatly increased coolness will be felt. In India water is frozen by exposing it in porous jars to the cold night winds, when the temperature of the air is several degrees above the freezing point.

Ice may be formed in a red-hot crucible by the sudden evaporation of liquid carbonic acid, or in a saucer under the receiver of an air-pump by the evaporation of it and the rapid absorption of the vapor that escapes by reason of the reduced pressure by sulphuric acid in another saucer.

Again, solutions of various substances, as sugar or crystallized salts, will not freeze at the ordinary temperature at which ice is formed in pure water. Thus a solution of salt requires a lower temperature to become frozen than fresh water does, and it is well known that sugar syrup can hardly be frozen at any ordinary temperature. Further, the tension under which liquids are held has an effect in the same way; a light tension makes freezing easier, while a high one retards the congelation.

Now all these facts have a bearing in the case of oranges and other fruits, as well as the sap of trees. Watery sap of very succulent plants freezes much more easily than that of the sweet and dense sap of the maple or the hickory. Some buds will resist freezing quite stubbornly at a very low temperature, and the resinous covering of the bud scales of trees, as those of the horse chestnut, exert a great resistance to freezing.

The sap or juice of the orange contains a large quantity of citric acid in solution, and a low temperature is required to congeal such a solution. It also contains considerable sugar, and this tends to resist cold. The sap or juice, which exists in this fruit in the proportion of 78 per cent. in the Florida orange, is under considerable tension, and this exerts some resistance to freezing. And, finally, the sap is not exposed to evaporation because of its tight covering by which it is protected.

Thus an orange must be exposed to a lower temperature than the ordinary freezing point of water before it will freeze. The same applies to other fruits as apples and vegetables, as potatoes, to some extent.

TO ENCOURAGE COFFEE GROWING

According to the Bureau of American Republics the Government of Nicaragua has promulgated a law offering to each person planting coffee trees a premium of 5 cents for each tree planted when the number does not fall below 5,000 plants. One-half of the premium will be paid when the trees are two years old and the remainder when the trees begin to yield. Coffee shrubs ready for setting out can be purchased at the rate of $5 per thousand; the land cleared at a rate of from $3 to $12 an acre, upon which from four hundred to five hundred trees can be planted. The cost of clearing the land will largely depend upon the quantity of timber and undergrowth upon it. Labor can be obtained on the plantations for 40 cents a day, and 100 pounds of coffee can be produced for $5 of a quality that has been selling for the past five years at from $16 to $25. Under no circumstances should a person go to Nicaragua or any other country of Central or South America for the purpose of growing coffee unless he has a capital of $3,000 or $4,000. He should have sufficient capital to live upon while he is waiting for his coffee trees to grow, which will be a period of four years.

BUTTER KEGS.

A new kind of butter keg, holding about a cwt., or 112 lbs., is being made for packing creamery butter for shipment to the European market. It is lined with parchment paper, preventing any woody flavor round the sides and at the top and bottom. Some of these were forwarded to the English market last year, and gave great satisfaction. Fifteen or twenty years ago nearly all the butter turned out in the Brockville and Morrisburg sections were put up in kegs or firkins.—Trade Bulletin.

DUTIES ON FRENCH WINES.

There are at least two industrial classes in this country who are desirous of not seeing the French treaty ratified in its present form. The one is the manufacturers of Canadian wines and the other is the grape grower. A deputation was in Ottawa this week with a petition praying that the 30 per cent. ad valorem duty on French wines be not removed.

The firms directly interested in the manufacture of wine in Ontario are Pelee Island Wine and Vineyard Co., Brantford; Ernest Girardot & Co., Concordia Vineyards, Sandwich; T. G. Bright & Co., Niagara Falls Wine Company, Toronto; J. S. Hamilton & Co., Brantford and Tilsonburg; George Barnes, St. Catharines Wine Co., Haskins Wine Co., Hamilton; Luc Montreuil, Walkerville; M. Guindon, Windsor; A. C. Tournier, Sandwich; Alex. McNeill, J. S. Visger and Alex. Askin, Walkerville, and Thaddens Smith, E. Wardroper and H. H. Reherg, Pelee Island.

The Canadian wine manufacturers claim that there are at least 5,000 acres of land planted in vines, capable of producing one million and a half gallons of wine; that Ontario alone has an area suitable for grape culture at least equal to the present area of vineyards in France, and that there are about 4,000 people directly or indirectly interested in grape growing and wine-making.

They further contend that if the proposed treaty is ratified without certain restrictions, and also without equivalent advantages being granted to Canadian wine-makers from the Government, our grape-growing and wine industries will be practically ruined.

"The wine market of the United States is closed to us on account of a specific duty of 50 cents per gallon," said a dealer to a reporter, "and if the French wines are admitted at a lower rate than at present without regulations which would enable us to compete on equal terms with them the Canadian market would also be practically closed to us, as the wine manufacturers in France possess numerous advantages and privileges that we do not enjoy. For instance, French manufacturers are making from dried raisins a wine which they fortify with alcohol and blend with Spanish, Italian or Sicilian wines, of which they import enormous quantities for that purpose; so that admitting French wines in Canada is practically admitting Spanish, Portuguese and Italian wines also. It is well known that Canadian people favor sweet wines rather than dry wines, and that the bulk of the wine consumed in this country is sweet wine, which may be classed as light port or light sherry. Now the admission of wines of 26 degrees of strength for importation, free of the ad valorem duty, includes light ports and sherries. We are thus forced to compete against sweet wines which are produced at a nominal cost and fortified with spirits which wine manufacturers in France can distill without costly restrictions or use without any excise duty."

The retail grocers of the East End, Pittsburg, Pa., are again talking of organizing into an association.

The production of rubber boots and shoes is nearly equal to a pair a year for every man, woman and child in the United States.

Burnham's Clam Bouillon—just the thing for outing parties, served instantly with little hot water, 50c. bottle enough for 8 to 10 persons.

The store of A. C. Lloyd, grocer, Stratford, was broken in Sunday evening, and the contents of the till, amounting to about fifteen dollars in silver, was stolen.

The four most prominent coffee brokers of Holland have estimated the world's production of coffee for current year ending July 1, at 11,486,000 bags, and for the year ending July 1, 1894 at 9,786,000 bags.

Tins filled with sand, but which are represented to contain a preparation known as "Granulated milk," are being sold in several towns in East Kent, and public attention has been called to this gross imposition.

Quite a number of cheese factories in Brockville district are in full blast. At Wilow factory about 4,000 pounds of milk are being received daily. This factory will have a lot of new cheese ready for the market by Saturday.

The retail grocers of Memphis, Tenn., recently held a meeting for the purpose of taking steps to protect themselves from the constantly increasing habit among the jobbers of selling to consumers at wholesale prices.

The last West India steamer arriving at St. John, N. B., brought 150 puncheons of new crop Barbadoes molasses, half for St. John and half for St. Stephen, also a lot of sugar for the Moncton refinery and a lot of asphalt.

Tallow has declined in the United States from 8½c. last week to 7c., owing, it is reported, to an agreement between two big soap-making firms of Chicago to resist the payment of what they regarded as an unwarranted price.

Advices received from the Philippine islands are to the effect that two sugar ships are already on their way to the port of Montreal, and that a third is now loading. The ship Abbie S. Hart sailed from Iloilo on February 57, and the ship Treasurer sailed from the same place on March 3. Both these vessels are for Montreal with sugar. The ship John E. Sayre was loading at Iloilo on January 29 for Montreal.

Mr. John Richardson, grocer, Orillia, has removed his grocery to a more central part of the town, the McCosh building. Mr. Richardson deserves the success he has met with, as no merchant north of Toronto can boast of a finer stock of high class groceries and chinaware than Mr. Richardson.

Imports of salted mackerel from foreign countries into the United States during the seven months ending January 21st, 1893, amounted to 77,977 barrels, against 78,029 for the corresponding period last year. Imports of salted herring were 120,819 and 116,833 barrels respectively.

The Supreme Court of Tennessee has decided that the action of the Wholesale Grocers' Association of Nashville in binding its members not to purchase from any manufacturer or importer who sold to retailers was illegal. It decided further that the injured party in such case was entitled to damages and costs.

Prof. Robertson addressed the Agricultural Committee a few days ago on the development of the cheese and butter industry in Canada. The committee will advise that the Government grant assistance equivalent to $200 each to not more than four cheese factories in each constituency whose proprietors convert them into butter-making establishments in the winter.

Perry & Alport, general merchants, Orillia, have made extensive alterations in their already large establishment. The grocery department has been moved to the rear of the store, but as usual this department will be first in the county. Perry & Alport are noted for good goods at reasonable figures, and having more room to do business they will spare no pains to give their customers a rare treat from one of the largest and finest assorted stock in the town.

It is announced that large sales of lands for coffee growing have been made to Americans in the Mexican States of Vera Cruz and Oaxaca. Nearly the whole of North America south of the United States is more or less adapted to coffee culture. Guatemala, Salvador, Honduras and Costa Rica have large coffee interests, and the government of Nicaragua is making special efforts to promote coffee culture by giving land and a small bounty on the crop.

A deputation composed of Messrs. L. V. Labelle, J. B. Dugas, O. Mario, B. A. Dupuis and A. Piquette, from St. Jacques, county of Montcalm, headed by Mr. L. E. Dugas, M.P., waited upon Controller Wood Monday and asked that a change be made in the manner of collecting the duty on tobacco. At present the duty is collected on the manufactured article, and the deputation asked that it be collected on the raw material at the port of entry. The proposition will be given due consideration.

According to an official statement made in the House Monday there are 144 breweries in Canada located in the provinces as follows: Manitoba, 9; New Brunswick, 4; Nova Scotia, 5; Ontario, 82; Quebec, 35; British Columbia, 18, and Prince Edward, none. The number of employes are 1,840, and the wages amount to $891,381 per annum. The value of the raw material used is $2,530,631, and of the finished product $5,717,872. There are also 9 distilleries in Canada—1 in Nova Scotia and 8 in Ontario. These distilleries give employment to 404 men, the amount of wages paid being $178,950 per annum. The value of the raw material is $1,226,092, and of the finished product $2,199,060.

Few men who go into maple syrup manufacturing make an unadulterated success of it.—Troy Press.

Employer—"You took a day off to go a-fishing yesterday?" Employee—"Yes sir." Employer—"Catch anything?" Employee—"Nothing, sir." Employer (making a powerful effort to appear calm)—"Come up to my house this evening. I want to have a talk with you about taking you into partnership."

"Pleath, thir, I want five pounds of crack-erth," said a tiny woman in a Yonge street grocery.

"You do, hey?" said the grocer. "What kind of crackers?"

"Juth plain crack-erth like we aluths get," lisped the little one.

"I guess you want them mixed," suggested the grocer.

"No, I don't, cauth there for the birds to eat on the winder thill," explained the child anxiously.

"Well, I declare," said the grocer, "that's drawing it pretty fine," but he put up five pounds of his best crackers for the little friend of the birds.

DRY GOODS.

The past week has been a quiet one in the entry rooms of the wholesale houses. Some of the placing orders have been filled, but these are only the orders delayed by late arrivals from the factories, and even these are all filled now. Travelers are out on the road, but their orders are meagre as yet. Now and again a large order is secured, where some buyer has not been on the market nor ordered previously. But sorting orders as a rule are very small. Dealers will not order until the warm weather causes brisker buying by consumers. The execution of better orders requires considerable time in most of the houses; these orders are mostly for staples and small wares of various kinds. Silks of all kinds have advanced in price, but the advance in the price of the manufactured product is not commensurate with the advance in the price of the raw material. The United States silk manufacturers estimate that the raw silk which cost them $3.80 a year ago now costs them $6.50, or an advance of 71 per cent. This is a tremendous increase in price, but the increase in manufactures such as ribbons has been only from 10 to 25 per cent., and many of the Canadian jobbers having placed early orders have been holding back from the advance and contenting themselves in many cases with a small profit. This is useless and unnecessary. Prices must be advanced, and a gradual advance is better than a heavy abrupt one. It is estimated that the increased consumption in silk goods last year amounted to 20 per cent., and it is still on the advance.

Lest the figures quoted above should seem too high, it might be mentioned that some reports substitute $4 for $3.80 and $6.25 for $6.50. But even these figures show an advance in raw silk of over 61 per cent. Moreover, it is said on the best of authority that raw silk will reach $7 within the next six weeks. One of the largest silk firms in the United States has issued a circular saying that after April 1st they will be compelled to ask an increase of 12 1-2 per cent. on all new orders or re-orders for mitts or gloves. Let all dealers in silk goods keep stocks well assorted and full; it will undoubtedly pay.

The business in underwear is at present in one of the stages generally passed through by all lines of a similar nature; the competition between the mills running on this class of manufacture has been so keen of late, that prices have been reduced so as to leave extremely scanty margins, in fact, in some instances "leaders" have been sold without any profit whatever. As a natural consequence of this, the quality of the goods produced has been lowered to meet these exigencies and the general demand for low-priced goods. The inevitable outcome will, of course, be a reaction in favor of the higher grades, as soon as the public are awake to the state of affairs. In fact it may be said that this reaction has already set in. Take, for example, the line of heavy underwear which was mostly cotton, and sold for from $3.50 to $4.50 per dozen at the mill. Where a wholesaler two or three years ago used a hundred cases of these goods he now contents himself with a hundred dozens. The past winter has given cheap stuff the go-by in earnest style. Two or three years ago $9 per dozen was the price of the best domestic underwear; now Canadian underwear of the better grades bring $21, $24 and $27. This may be due to demand for better goods in part, but in part it is due to the ousting of cheap and medium grades of imported underwear. The lowest grade of imported goods several years ago was $7.50 per dozen; now it is $18. Why this change? Simply because our domestic manufacturers are producing lines which oust foreign lines at a less price than $18 per dozen. Under protection our manufacturers must gain in experience and power. Whether the cost of this is too high from a public standpoint is a political question, and must be settled by politicians.

BOARD OF TRADE TALK.

The fourteenth annual report of the Winnipeg Board of Trade has been issued, and shows that the board is steadily progressing. The president, in his speech, deprecates a Dominion Insolvency Act, and says it would prove detrimental to the interests of Manitoba and the Northwest Territories.

The council of the Brandon Board of Trade invite applications for the position of secretary.

The London Board of Trade banquet, to commemorate the opening of the new Canadian Pacific railway station in that city, will probably take place in the third week in April.

A Board of Trade has been organized at Gananoque with these officers: President, E. L. Atkinson; vice-president, W. F. Latimer; sec't.-treas., J. T. Green; council, C. E. Britton, R. Taylor, O. D. Cowan, S. McCammon, W. N. Rogers, Jas. Donevan, Wm. Byers, M. McParland, J. B. Turner, J. B. McMurchy, W. J. Gibson, Thos. Roach.

T. S. Ford has been chosen president of the Mitchell Board of Trade.

The Tilsonburg Board of Trade is having petitions made ready to forward to the officials of the G.T.R. asking to have the evening train from the East arrive there earlier than 9.35, to have the delay of the morning train at Brantford lessened so that the travelling public may reach Toronto earlier in the day; also to have the trains coming east on the Air Line in the afternoon timed so as to make connections with the Brantford train which leaves Tilsonburg at 4 p.m.

The Baltimore Manufacturers' Record says: The present position of cottonseed oil is no less interesting than the phenomenally short cotton crop. The small yield of cotton and the unusual demand for oil to supplement the scanty supply of lard have given to cottonseed products an importance never before reached. Last summer cottonseed sold at $7 a ton and less in some localities, but now the mills are buying all they can get at upwards of $20 per ton, $22 being about the ruling figure. Refined oil is now selling at 60c. and upward per gallon, as compared with 20c. a year or two ago.

The Best Grocers Make
a point of Keeping it always in Stock.

[As there is often inequality in the prices of the various sellers on this market, owing to differences in buying conditions and other circumstances, and as prices are modified by both quantity and quality, the quotations given below and in our Prices Current necessarily take a wide range.]

TORONTO MARKETS.

TORONTO, March 23, 1893.
GROCERIES.

The quietness noted last week is more pronounced this. The condition of the roads in the country is wretched, travellers experiencing a good deal of difficulty in getting about. The situation however is healthy and a good brisk spring and summer trade is anticipated. The farmers seem to be well supplied with money and stocks in country stores are not large, a good seasonable winter having stimulated a steady demand. Dealers too have been buying from hand to mouth. Under these conditions the trade has good reason to be hopeful. Nothing particularly new has developed during the week, the market being absolutely devoid of any marked features. The sugar market was a little unsettled during the early part of the week, but it seems to have regained its self possession again, while outside the markets have if anything become a little firmer. Fruits remain in much about the same condition as they have for the last few weeks, while the movement in canned goods has followed the trend of the general trade and also exhibits a slight falling off, although the inquiry for corn is if anything a little more brisk. Teas are moving fairly well, while the position appears to be still gathering strength. Payments are fair.

COFFEES.

The local demand for Rios continues for small lots at 21 to 22c. for the really good article. An increasing demand is reported for the East Indian product, of which there is a scarcity. There are absolutely no good Javas to be obtained. Prices rule firm and the situation locally is without change.

DRIED FRUIT.

Business continues much about as before. The movement is not large, but prices rule steady. Some lines, if anything, have evinced a little more firmness. Valencias are fairly strong in New York, where prices are about $\frac{1}{4}$ c. a pound higher than ten days ago. Demand on the local market is only fair, but in view of the condition of the outside markets higher prices are probable before long. Prices here rule from $\frac{1}{4}$ c. up, although it seems that some fruit is being offered $\frac{1}{4}$ c. lower than this figure, but the quality, it is said, is of such a nature that the buyer needs to give it a careful examination. The current market continues to rule strong. The demand is still fair, and the next two or three weeks will probably see a much brisker movement. Prices range all the way from $5\frac{1}{2}$ to 10c. per lb., the outside figures being quoted for fine Vostizzas, Plunes continue strong, with demand light at from $7\frac{1}{2}$ c. up in cases. Dates are quiet and unchanged at $5\frac{1}{2}$ to $5\frac{3}{4}$ c.

RICE AND SPICES.

The rice market continues to rule quiet and steady at prices ranging all the way from $\frac{3}{8}$ c. to 10c., the outside figure of course being for genuine old Carolina.

Spices are without change. Ginger is firm at 25 to 27c. for pure Jamaican and 16 to 18c. for African.

SUGAR.

Some eastern people have been selling goods on this market at a little lower prices, and the Montreal refineries have it seems met them. The latter however still appear to have confidence in the market and do not want to sell for future delivery, their contention being that they are sure to get more money as soon as the demand becomes active. The local trade is quiet with prices unchanged at $4\frac{3}{4}$ to $4\frac{1}{2}$ c. for granulated and at $3\frac{3}{8}$ to $4\frac{1}{4}$ c. for yellows. Tuesday's telegraphic advices reported cane firm and rising in New York and London, and beet on the latter market strong. In New York granulated was quoted at $4\frac{1}{2}$ c.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

There is still a scarcity of good syrups, while demand for low grade continues fair. We quote as before at 30 to 35c. for low grade, 38 to 42c. for mediums and 45 to 55c. for brights. Demand for molasses continues only moderate at 30 to 35c. for New Orleans and at 32 to 38c. for West Indian.

TEAS.

Teas continue to attract the most attention, but nothing particularly new has developed in them during the week. The characteristic is still the strong position of the market. Demand continues good, particularly for low and medium grades. The desirable lines are being picked up rapidly and the market here is getting into splendid shape for the new teas, old stocks getting so reduced. The general opinion in England, as far as Assams and Ceylons are concerned, is that the bottom of the market has been seen for some little time, and these teas are not expected to be any cheaper for some months to come.

Lewenr & Hauser Bros.' tea letter of March 10 says:—"It is reported that in consequence of the very unfavorable weather they have had in Ceylon, the export from Colombo during the current month would not reach even 5,000,000 lbs., and though this low figure is not generally believed in, same would certainly have had some effect upon the market had not the somewhat unsatisfactory deliveries of late counteracted it. These latter so far this month again show half a million pounds less taken for export than same time last year. They are, however, stationary for home consumption, although the falling off in February was said to be attributable to a belief entertained in the country that the Liberal Government might reduce or do away with the tea duty this coming Easter. If such were the cause of the smaller deliveries for home consumption last month, the same cause would probably again operate this current month, unless the country is bare of duty-paid stock."

MARKET NOTES.

[Importers, wholesale merchants and manufacturers should send any items intended for this department so that they may reach the head office not later than Wednesday morning. The editor will always welcome such information.]

Apples have dropped to $1.75 for fancy stock.

The red clover market is nervous and jobbing prices are higher at $8.60 to $9.50

Shipments of Coleman's mustards are arriving on this market. They are said to be larger than usual.

W. T. Harris, Chatham, N. B., dealer in general merchandise, offers 200 cases canned lobsters, also dried cod of finest quality.

A car of frozen sea herring arrived on this market during the week. This is the first for a month and only about the third for the season.

Lucas, Steele & Bristol, Hamilton, have still left a few packages of cheap Young Hyson and Japan teas, which they advertised a few weeks ago. Samples will be mailed a few weeks ago.

Gorman, Eckert & Co., London, Ont., are putting up a fine article in catsup and fruit relish. Their sales in this article are away ahead of their expectations. No grocer can afford to be without these goods in stock.

Boyle & Son, Napanee have this spring introduced a new patent cheese vat gate that is taking well. So far they have not been able to supply the demand. They are now building 75 cheese vats, each one having the gate specified.

Cheap lots of evaporated apples recently offered in the interior New York market have been practically all cleaned up, and prices there are firmer now than they have been for some little time past. Cheap lots in the New York city market have become rather scarce also.

The railways have issued the following notice to their freight agents: From March 13, 1893, until further notice, canned vegetables in cases will be carried at the following weights from stations in Canada east of Port Arthur to all points to which the rates are governed by the Canadian joint freight classification. All canned fruits and vegetables, except tomatoes: 2 lb. cans, 45 lbs. per case; 3 lb. cans, 65 lbs. per case; gallon cans, 6 cans to case, 45 lbs. per case; ditto, 12 cans, to case, 90 lbs.; tomatoes, 3 lb. cans 70 lbs. per case.

The Surprise Soap concern are now making extra time to catch up with their sales of Surprise Soap. For some time past they have been behind hand in filling orders, but are now gradually catching up. Since the St. Croix Soap Mfg. Co. started in business the sale of Surprise Soap has increased very rapidly. This growth of their trade has compelled them to enlarge their factory from time to time. Up to the present five additions have been made, and a sixth is now projected. From a local trade the business has grown until at the present day Surprise Soap has a sale from ocean to ocean.

MARKETS—Continued

PETROLEUM.

The Petrolea Advertiser in its weekly report says: The market position continues unchanged, and little movement in any way can be looked for until the amendments to the Petroleum Inspection Act have been made, and become law. Transition periods like this in an industry necessarily cause stagnation, as people do not know what to do. The crude man cannot keep on drilling; the refiner cannot buy stock freely; the dealer will only buy from hand to mouth; and the general tone is thus depressed.

The following are the latest quotations here:—Canada refined oil, 13½ to 14c; carbon safety, 17½ to 18c; Canada water white, 19c; American water white, 21 to 22c photogene, 25c.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

The butter market is in a fairly healthy condition. Receipts are not heavy, although there is a good deal of ordinary butter coming in. Demand is principally for large rolls and fine dairy tubs, the latter at 20 to 22c. and the former at 19 to 20c. Pound rolls as a rule sell at 23c. In creamery, early makes are difficult to place, being off flavor and new make is above the price that the ordinary grocer cares to pay. The movement is therefore small. Prices for the first-class article are unchanged at 25c. for tubs and at 27c. for pound prints. Ordinary creamery of second quality can be obtained a little lower than last week, at 20c.

In cheese the supply and demand is fair. The ruling prices are from 11½ to 12c., and occasionally 12½c. is obtained, but this is a difficult price to get. On the other hand, there is some early make that dealers would be willing to take 11c. for. The market is quiet and the movement is merely on retail account, there being no large lots going out.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—Demand is light and there are not many to be had. Some dealers are selling an ordinary sample at $1.20 to $1.30, and for good stock $1.50 is being asked f. o. b. Chatham.

DRIED APPLES—There is not much demand. Receipts are a little more plentiful and stocks tend to accumulate. Dealers are paying 5½ to 5¾c. and are selling at 5½c.

EVAPORATED APPLES—Prices if anything are a little firmer at 9½c. There has been some enquiry for car lots, which seem unobtainable. Small lots are not wanted, it being easier to sell a car than a ten-box lot.

EGGS—The tendency of prices continues downward. Receipts are liberal and demand good for small lots. Arrivals on Tuesday last were particularly free. The ruling price for small lots is 16c., but ½ or even 1c. lower would not be refused for fair-sized lots.

HONEY—Market remains as before. Dark sells in bulk at 6 to 7c. and in sections at 10c.; white granulated is quoted at 8 to 8½c. for 50 pound tins and in sections at 15c.

TORONTO.

No particularly new features have developed during the week. The market has followed to some extent the trend of the grocery trade in general, and, like it, the movement is not so brisk owing to the breaking up of the roads, although a good business is nevertheless being done, while the position of the market continues to gather strength. Tomatoes are in fair demand, but trade is scarcely as good as a week ago. Prices range as before, at 9c. to $1. There has been some enquiry from London, England, this week for five thousand cases, but the prices offered were rather lower than dealers here would accept, and nothing came of it in consequence. Tomatoes have advanced to $1.17½ in Chicago, and prices here are firm. Peas are in fair demand and unchanged at 90c. to $1. A line of soaked peas is said to be on the market, but these are only taken by people who are not particular as to quality, and they sell cheaper than the figures quoted. Corn is in active demand; in fact more so than probably any other line of canned goods. Stocks are getting low, but it is thought they will be ample. Prices are quoted as before at 90c. to $1. In canned fruits an increased demand is reported for apples and peaches, but the market has developed no new features beyond these. Peaches are quoted at $2.25 for 2's, $3.25 to $3.75 for 3's Apples sell at from 85c. to $1 for 3's. There is nothing particularly new in the situation regarding salmon. Stocks are light and prices firm at $1.50 to $1.80. One house on the street has instructed its travellers to pick up all the five or twenty-case lots of Horse-shoe brand they can find in retail hands. The local demand for lobsters is only moderate, but prices are firm at $2 for tails and $2.50 for flats. There is no particular feature beyond that packers report that they have foreign orders in excess of what they will be able to supply. Sardines are quiet and unchanged. Canned meats are only moving in limited quantities, but prices are firm, with an upward tendency, and packers refuse to sell ahead at present prices.

MONTREAL.

Canned goods continue dull on the whole. A feature is the scarcity of salmon, and further orders have been placed for stock which will arrive on first steamers from Liverpool. These goods were taken around the Horn from British Columbia by sailing vessel to Liverpool, and it is claimed that they can be laid down in Montreal cheaper than if they came across direct to this market by rail. The prices are said to be $5.25 cost delivered in Montreal. Orders are also being taken for July and August delivery at $4.55 for clover leaf, and 4.52½ for British American brands.

MARKETS.—Continued

DRESSED POULTRY—The market remains dull and unchanged. Chickens are quoted at 65 to 75c. per pair, ducks 85c. to $1 per pair, turkeys at 14c. per pound, and geese at 9 to 10c. per pound.

POTATOES—Demand is fair at steady and unchanged prices. Car lots on track have been moving at 82 to 85c., and bags sell out of store at 95 to $1. Dealers are now patiently awaiting the opening of the pits.

ONIONS—Dull and unchanged at $2 to $2.25 a bag.

HOPS—The market is difficult to fathom, there being considerable difference of opinion among dealers, both regarding prices and the future. Prices for '92's range all the way from 17 to 20c., according to quality, and yearlings are quoted at 15 to 16c. A local dealer a few days ago wrote to a grower in one of the hop centres, asking for quotations. He was quoted 25c. and was requested to make a bid if that did not suit him.

HOGS AND PROVISIONS.

The season is about over for dressed hogs and there are but few coming in. No car lots are offering, and packers are depending upon farmers' deliveries for supplies. Prices range from $8 to $8.10, and they are easy at these figures. Meats are in fair demand, and some car lots of mixed are going out for Liverpool. There is a continued good demand for hog products generally, but in small parcels.

BACON—Long clear 10½ to 11c. Smoked backs are 12½ to 13c., bellies 13½c., rolls 10c.

HAMS—In good demand and firm at 13 to 13½c.

LARD—Pure Canadian is 13¼c. in tubs, and 13½c. in pails. Compound 10½ to 11c.

BARREL PORK—U. S. heavy mess is $20.00 to $20.50. Canadian short cut $22. Canadian heavy mess $20 to $21.

DRESSED MEATS—Beef forees are 4½ to 5½c., hindquarters 7 to 8¼c., veal 6½ to 8c., mutton 7 to 8c., lamb 8c. to 8½c.

GREEN FRUIT.

There has been quite a slump in the apple market during the week in sympathy with the decline in England. On the local market the demand is limited and not many are being exported. Fancy stock is down as low as $1.75 per barrel, while ordinary to poor stock no one wants. There is a fairly good demand for oranges at unchanged prices. Lemons are in fair demand at higher prices. We quote as follows:—Valencia oranges at $4.50 to $4.75 per case, Jamaica $2.50 to $2.75 per box, Floridas $3 to $3.50 per box, Palermos $2.50 per box; lemons $3.50 for 300's and $3.25 for 360's. Bananas $1.75 to $2.50; pineapples 20 to 30c., Malaga grapes $8 to $9, fancy cranberries $10 per barrel, common $1 per basket; apples, $1.75 for fancy stock.

FISH AND OYSTERS.

Trade continues brisk and supplies have been arriving with more regularity. Demand will principally be for white fish and trout. Among the receipts this week was a car lot of frozen sea herring, and prices are quoted at $2.50 per hundred. Haddock and steak cod are both 1c. lower at 6 and 9c. respectively. Finnan haddie is quoted at 9c. Oysters remain as before. We quote as follows: 7 to 7½c. for trout and ordinary whitefish, 7½c. for Manitoba whitefish, 4½c. per lb. or $3 per hundred for frozen Lake herring, $2.50 per hundred for frozen sea herring, 10c. for mackerel, 13c. for

B.C. frozen salmon, and 17c. for fresh ditto, 5 to 7c. for smelts, 6c. for haddock, 4 to 4½c. for market cod, 9c. for steak cod, 5c. for flounders, 6½c. for skinned and boned codfish, $3 per half bbl. for Labrador herring, $2.75 per half bbl. for shore herring, 11 to 12½c. for Digby herring, 4c. for boneless fish, 7 to 8c. for boneless cod, 7c. for pike, 7c. for pickerel; ciscoes $1.50 to $1.75 a hundred, black bass 10 to 12½c. a pound; finnan haddie, 9c.; oysters, $1.25 for stds., and $2 selects.

HIDES, SKINS, WOOL, TALLOW.

HIDES—The market is without change. Car lots of cured have been moving at 5¼c. and No. 1 cows' is quoted at 4½c.

SKINS—There is less enquiry for sheepskins, although prices are unchanged at $1.35 to $1.40. Calfskins are in good demand at 7c. a pound, with supplies light.

WOOL—There is very little doing. Demand is moderate for pulled wools, but there is no fleece in the market. Enquiry from local mills is steady. Pulled wools unchanged at 22 to 23c. for supers and at 26 to 27c. for extras. No. 1 and black are unchanged at 20 to 21c.

TALLOW—Business is rather quiet. Dealers are paying 7c. and selling at 7½c.; rough unchanged at 3c.

SEEDS

The market is in a decidedly nervous condition, and quotations are subject to variations from day to day. This applies more particularly to red clover, but other lines are affected to a more or less extent, and when jobbers quote it is generally accompanied by the request that a reply be sent by wire if price is favorable. During the past week there has been an advance of 75c. in red clover in Toledo, but this market has only slightly responded, but what it might be compelled to do is another thing. Country customers are ordering sparingly, although the parcels are numerous. Red clover is being jobbed out at $8.60 to $9.50. A fair jobbing trade is being done in alsike at prices ranging from $5.50 to $8.50, the outside price being for fancy seed. The demand for timothy is so far only moderate. Prices range from $2.40 to $2.90, the outside figure being for flail threshed and unbulled, but the chief demand is for the prime to choice article, which is being jobbed at $2.50 to $2.65.

DRUGS

There have been no actual changes in prices during the week. Trade is fairly good, and the chief demand seems to be for plain everyday drugs. Spring medicines and disinfectants are beginning to move.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

MONTREAL, March 23, 1893.

GROCERIES.

The grocery trade has been quiet during the past week, for the spring break-up has conduced to restrict the actual movement of business. As a consequence there is little to note in this connection. But the fact does not seem to cause sellers any anxiety, for they appear to be satisfied that once the country is settled supplies will be required of them pretty freely. Nor is there anything in the advices from the interior to indicate that they are wrong in this supposition. In the matter of values, however, some of the leading staples have furnished new features. For instance, although the change has not actually been established on the regular market, refiners are booking orders for round lots of granulated sugar at 1-16 decline, but refuse to concede this in the case of jobbing parcels. Yellows show no change. Syrups and molasses are on the easy side also, the latter having been offered for June delivery at 30c., which is rather contrary to the advices which have been circulated in this market this spring, the general tenor of which indicated firmness. It seems that they were erroneous, however, and it is worthy of remark that operations here on the higher price first advised have not been large, for buyers have pursued a very conservative course in the matter. Tea has met a fair enquiry from dealers, although importers' agents are doing nothing. Coffee and spices continue in light supply and good demand, values ruling firm. Dried fruit is very quiet. Canned goods have been dull.

SUGAR.

There is an easier tone to the sugar market, but it can hardly be said that a change has been actually established yet. However, there is no doubt that the refiners have conceded 1-16 on round lots of granulated, but such a basis is not possible for business in the regular way as they are still asking 4 5-8c. for ordinary quantities. For wholesale business though 4 9-16c. is possible on granulated, and it is said a cut of 1-16c. has been made in yellows also for large quantities, but we cannot cite any actual business as transpiring on the new basis.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Good bright syrups continue to move out fairly well, but although no actual change is to cite the tone is easier. Molasses rules quiet and unchanged on spot on the basis of 32 to 33c., but for futures business at 30c. June delivery has transpired.

TEA.

There has been nothing very special in tea, and the only sales of importance that the brokers announce is an 800 package lot of Japans on a steady basis. We quote common 12 to 14c., medium to good 16 to 18c., fine 19 to 21c., and finest 25 to 31c. Black teas are firm, low-priced stock being very difficult to obtain. Greens are steady also.

COFFEE AND SPICES.

The firm tone of the coffee market is maintained under light supplies and a fair demand. We quote Jamaica, 19 to 20c.; Maracaibo, 21 to 22c.; Rio, 19 to 21c.; Java, 25 to 27c.; and Mocha, 25 to 28c. Jobbing lots necessitates a proportionate advance on the above basis.

Spices are firm and unchanged. Black pepper, 8 to 9c.; Pimento, 6 1-2c., and nutmegs, 50c. to $1.00, according to the quality.

DRIED FRUIT.

Dried fruit rules very quiet but steady. We quote off-stalk Valencia 4 3-8c. to 4 1-2c. for seconds and 4 3-4c. for firsts. Valencia layers have been enquired for at 6 to 6 1-4c. for straight wholesale lots. Currants are quiet, and values are nominally quoted 5 to 5 3-4c., as to quality.

RICE.

Rice is moving out fairly well from first hands at unchanged prices. The quo-

FLOUR AND FEED.

FLOUR.—City millers' and dealers' prices are: Manitoba patents, $4.35 to $4.50; strong bakers' $3.85 to $4.10; white wheat patents, $3.50 to $3.75; straight roller, $3.15 to $3.30; low grades, per bag, $1.00 to $1.25; Ontario family $3.35 to $3.85.

Car prices are: Toronto freights—Manitoba patents, $4.30 to $4.50; Manitoba strong bakers' $3.90 to $4.10; Ontario patents, $3.25 to $3.50; straight roller, $3.00 to $3.20; extra, $2.90 to $3.00; low grades, per bag, $1.10 to $1.25.

MEAL.—Oatmeal is $4.00. to $4.20. Cornmeal is $3.25 to $3.50.

FEED.—Bran (ton lots) $17, ditto (on track) $15 to $15.50, shorts (ton lots) $17 to $18; mixed feed $20 to $22, feeding corn 57 to 58c., oats 33 to 34c.

HAY.—Baled timothy, demand is good and supply fair at $9.25 to $9.50.

STRAW.—Plentiful and demand limited, at $5.50 to $6.

MONTREAL.

The flour market is dull and unchanged. A few special brands are still meeting with some attention at quotations, but the market is neglected on the whole. Winter wheat $4.00 to $4.25; spring patents $4.25 to $4.35; straight rollers $3.50 to $3.75; extra $3.10 to $3.25; superfine $2.60 to $2.90; city strong bakers' $4 to $4.15; strong bakers' $3.90 to $4.00.

ST. JOHN'S N. B.

The market has a slightly easier tone, though holders of stocks claim prices are liable to advance. Quotations are, Manitoba, $5.15 to $5.25; High Grade Ontario $4.30 to $4.40; Medium Patents $4.15 to $4.25.

Oatmeal very firm. Prices are given at $4.40 to $4.50.

Corn meal steady at $2.75 to $2.85.

Feed is higher and almost impossible to get at $23 to $24, bags free.

tations are: Standard, $3.85; choice, $4; Japans, $4.25; Louisiana, $5.25, and Carolina, $7.50.

NUTS.

There is no change in nuts, which rule quiet and unchanged. We quote as follows: Pecans 11 to 12½c., Terragona almonds, 10½c., Grenoble walnuts 13½ to 14½c., filberts 10 to 10½c., Ivica 14½c., Brazil 15c., marbots 12½c., cocoa nuts $3.50 to $4.50 per bag of 100 for old, new $5 to $5.50.

FISH.

The fish market is quieter, the demand being pretty well over. Stocks of fresh fish are small and prices are generally nominal, but pickled fish are easier in tone, although there is no actual change in the quotations. We quote as follows:—Haddock, 0 to 5c., cod 4c., lake trout 7c., white fish 7 to 7½c., pickerel or dore 9c.; dried cod, $5.50; No. 1 green cod, $7; Labrador salmon, $13 to $14; No. 2 mackerel, $12 per brl.; do. $7 per half brl.; C.B. and N. S. herring, $4.75 to $5 per brl.; tommy cods, $1.50 to $1.75 per brl.; fresh herring, $2 to $2.50 per hundred; haddies, 7½ to 8c.; Yarmouth bloaters, $1.50 to $2; frozen mackerel, 8½ to 9c.; smelts, 4 to 5c.

BEANS.

The market is quiet but steady, at $1.25 to $1.45 for fair to choice stock, with ordinary $1 to $1.20.

HONEY.

Buckwheat honey has been sold at 5 to 6c. in cans, and we quote 5 to 7c. for extracted. Bright comb stock is worth 12½ to 13c., with sales at these prices, dark and broken stock ruling at 7 to 8c.

MAPLE SYRUP.

Quite a lot of old maple syrup has sold during the week at 55c. Arrivals so far are few and unimportant and no bona fide sales can be cited.

HOPS.

The market is quiet for choice. Canadian has sold as low as 18c., and we quote a range of 15 to 18½c., according to quality.

ASHES.

The market is firm, first pots changing hands at $5 per 100 lbs.. Second pots are nominal at $4.20, and first pearls at $5.35.

APPLES.

The market is steady at $3 to $4 for choice with poor down as low as $1.

ONIONS.

Onions are in fair demand, red and yellow stock in barrels selling at $2.50 to $3.50. Spanish onions are worth 90c. to $1 per crate.

POTATOES.

The potato market is firm with prices, somewhat higher, $1 to $1.05 having been made for car lots, some choice cars fetching as high as $1.08 to $1.10. In fact, really choice is so difficult to obtain that it commands almost anything.

EGGS.

The egg market rules weak, single cases selling at 20 to 21c., and round lots 19c. Receipts are large, and while the demand is fair, it is not sufficient to keep the market cleared.

BUTTER.

Butter rules steady for a fair jobbing trade. We quote as follows: Choice fall creamery, 23 to 24c.; creamery seconds, 21 to 22c.; Townships dairy, 21 to 23c.; Morrisburg and Brockville, 20 to 22c.; Kamouraska stock, 00 to 20c.; Western 20c.

MONTREAL TRADE NOTES.

The fact that canned salmon can be sent from British Columbia around the Horn to Liverpool and afterwards shipped across and sold laid down in Montreal at less than they can be brought direct across by rail, has been demonstrated this week.

Sales of molasses for June delivery have been made on this market at 30c.

Reagan, White & Co. are offering now, some newly arrived Indian, green, and black teas.

A lot of 800 boxes low grade Japan teas changed hands here during the week at 12 to 14c.

English cables on raw sugar say that Java is being quoted at 16s. 7½d. and beet 14s. 4½d. for present and future delivery.

Mr. Hughes, of Caverhill, Rose, Hughes & Co., says that once the roads get settled, he expects trade to pick up materially.

Mr. Quintal, jr., of A. Quintal and Fils, calls molasses the easy spot of the grocery market. He has heard of numerous offers of 30c. June delivery.

There is a decided scarcity of really choice potatoes, and car lots bring almost anything sales at $1.10 transpiring during the week for choice car loads.

Messrs. Lightbound, Ralston & Co. are offering their usual special lines of Japan, Ceylon, Indian and China teas, as well as a complete assortment of canned goods, etc., etc.

Mr. Geoffrion, of L. Chaput, Fils & Co., reports that, although the refiners may have marked down granulated sugar for round lots, grocers are still working on the former basis.

Refiners are conceding 1-16c. per lb. for round lots of granulated sugar, but for business in a regular way 4½c. is still the basis, for they will not allow anything for ordinary quantities.

ST. JOHN, N. B., MARKETS.

ST. JOHN, N.B., March 23, 1893.

The market is without any special feature. Prices in all staple lines are steady, with the exception of molasses, which has weakened some. Trade is improving.

Teas—The market is still firm for all cheaper grades, though no change is noticed in better qualities. Stocks held are quite sufficient for requirements.

Sugars—A fair demand for all grades. Sugars at steady prices is quoted: Granulated, 4½ to 4¾c.; ex. C., 3¾ to 4c.; yellows, 3½ to 3¾c.

Molasses—Very little moving. Some new Barbadoes has arrived and is selling at 32 to 33c.; other kinds, 28 to 32c.

Rice—A slightly easier tone. Some quotations given are 3½ to 3¾c.

Beans—Steady at regular prices, $1.80 to $1.90.

Eggs—A better demand, prices somewhat higher; are selling at 17 to 18c.

Butter—Is somewhat easier; any choice lot finds ready sale at 20 to 21c.

Cheese—Is without change, at 11 to 11½c.

Provisions—Clear mess pork, $26 to $27; mess pork, $22.50 to $23.50; beef, $15 to $15.50; smoked rolls, 12 to 13c.; hams, 14 to 15c.

PERSONAL MENTION.

The wife of Mr. Wm. Parkhill is convalescing nicely.

Mr. George Mnsson has recovered sufficiently to leave the city for a few days.

Lockhart Watt left on Monday for a business trip to Europe. He will be absent about two months.

Mr. Donald Morrison, western traveller for Stuart, Harvey & Co., Hamilton, has joined the travelling staff of Eby, Blain & Co. Mr. Morrison will cover the territory west of and including London, taking in the Sarnia branch. Mr. Robert Stuart, who formerly covered that section for Eby, Blain & Co., will take in all points east of London, as his increasing trade through the counties and the Niagara Peninsula requires all his attention there.

James Stewart, who has done a successful general store trade at Young's Point for many years, is offering his business for sale. He has not been in the best of health for some time and is to return to the Old Country. Young's Point is on the Trent Valley Canal, six miles from Lakefield and fourteen from Peterboro'. There is a growing trade to be done in the locality, and for an experienced young man this is an excellent opening.

MILK SUGAR.

It has long been a problem what to do with the by-products of milk. Much time and money have been devoted to experiments to utilize these, but the Swiss are the only people who have made a successful business in that direction, their product—sugar of milk—commanding the market. "The American Dairyman" states that one of the leading cheese makers in the United States, W. E. Smith, has quite recently succeeded in producing an article of milk sugar equal to the best Swiss product. "In this connection Mr. Smith informs us," says that journal, "that 200,000 lbs. of the Swiss product was imported into this market during the four months ending April 30, 1892 in addition to the home output. There are no means of learning the volume of the production of the home article other than that based on mere guesswork. That it must be important may be gleaned from the fact that the American Lactose Company, of which Mr. Smith is President, purpose turning out 300,000 lbs. of this product during the current year."

THE POSITION OF PEPPER.

N. Y. Bulletin says that operators for a rise in pepper appear to have lost their advantage, and the market for some little time past has been in a ragged, uncertain position, but mainly favoring buyers. It is now claimed that the bull movement was not based so much upon calculations of an actual shortage of crops, as upon the belief that the market had been oversold, and the bears would find it impossible to meet their engagements; but when time for delivery came the shorts were ready with a great deal more stock than they received credit for, and tendering it to parties who really had no use for the pepper. The latter in their desire to promptly sell out have weighted the market with a surplus amount, under which weak prices develop. It may be noted, however, that there are some limits about quality of deliveries that are likely to produce discord.

RATS PLAY BALL WITH EGGS.

"Do you want to see something funny?" said a drug clerk to a reporter one evening. Of course, the reporter was not averse to see something in the humorous line and so informed the mixer of pills and powders, says The Washington Post.

"Well, if no one comes in for a moment I'll show it to you," said he, placing a basket of eggs, used in making egg phosphates, from the top of the soda fountain to the counter. "Now stand here and watch the rats," and the newsman stood where he could get a view.

It took but a moment's silence and then out popped a hoary old rat, soon followed by three more. They seemed to understand their part, and climbed nimbly up a box about a foot high, used in covering pipes, and from that to the tray under the counter where the glasses are washed. Up on top of another box they went, and then to the top of the counter.

The first descended to the floor, the second remained on the box the third in the tray, and the fourth on the high box. Seeing they were there the old rat on top walked to the eggs and picked up one, carrying it with his front legs, walking on his hind feet like a squirrel. He dropped it over and it was caught by the rat beneath, who in turn gave it to the one beneath him.

This rat jumped down and rolled the egg under the soda fountain. In this manner they carried down six eggs in exactly one minute, when, thinking the fun was expensive, the clerk drove them away.

"They will steal them by the dozen if I'll let them," said the clerk, "and we have to keep them on top of the fountain."

KEEPING APPLES PERFECTLY.

A prominent apple grower at Portland, Me., confidently asserts that he has discovered by actual experience how to keep apples perfectly; and in proof of his claim he has on hand sound samples of no less than three distinct crops. His procedure is so simple that it is well worth experimenting on. Select sound winter fruit, wipe dry, wrap in tissue paper, pack in dry sand, and place in a dry cellar. The result, it is claimed, will be the perfect preservation of the apples thus treated.

AUSTRALIAN BUTTER.

A Victoria (Australia) dairyman, after a visit to England, has communicated some of his impressions to The Australasian. Australian butter, he says, beats both the Normandy and Danish makes in its keeping qualities, but where it is lacking is in uniformity. On the necessity for uniform quality strong stress is laid. Better, he says, a slightly inferior butter which is uniform than superior butter of varying grades. It is the belief also of this authority that Australian butter is destined to drive the French and Danish out of the English market. It may be mentioned as one of the curiosities of the trade, due principally no doubt, to the bonus system, that Victorian butter may be bought cheaper in London than in Melbourne.

A CASH BASIS.

For many years the question as to whether retail merchants should sell on a cash or credit basis has been debated warmly in trade papers and in meetings composed of merchants, and also in grange lodges and Patrons of Industry. Of course the principles of the Patrons is to buy wholesale, deal for cash, and do away with middlemen. However, many men have pointed out the use of credit, especially where a fair percentage of the merchant's customers are agricultural laborers or farmers. These men receive their year's pay or profit during the last three months of the year, and for the other nine are supposed to be without any considerable amount of cash. And for this reason many boldly declare that a retail merchant cannot succeed when doing business on strictly cash principles. At a debate in a neighboring village last week this question came up, and this reasoning was advanced.

Now this appears to be both fallacious reasoning and from wrong premises. The farmer does not market his produce in this country all in one day or all in one month. At least a farmer who judiciously varies his crops and products should have a perpetual harvest all the year round. The product of the farm is not all grain; it is composed of different classes of articles or products which are marketed each week, or can be if necessary. Even the grain is marketed at intervals during the winter months, and plenty of farmers in this district often hold over until spring. In all these cases the reasoning of the credit men breaks down.

But even if the whole statement were true, and farmers did market their grain all between October first and January first, that proves nothing. They have their money, and why should they lose the interest on it as well as the merchant? A cash business no doubt will be mutually beneficial. Every person is making for the cheapest market to buy in, and where goods are sold on credit cannot be the cheapest place. Neither can a cash and credit business be the cheapest, although cash customers may get a discount, yet the credit price is always asked, and even with discount off the prices are not as low as they would be if the business was strictly cash.

It is an undoubted fact that the man who sells the cheapest is the man who sells for cash. If merchants would put their cash business plainly and honestly before their customers they would undoubtedly succeed in convincing them that a pure cash basis in the retail business would be much more economical.—London Free Press.

TRADE COMPETITION IN FRANCE.

An important bill has been passed by a very large majority in the French Chamber of Deputies, the double purpose of which is to protect the smaller distributing traders from the competition of great establishments dealing in many kinds of goods, and to raise more revenue. The patentee, or license tax, is levied on all dealers. It is charged in two portions, one upon the rental, the other being a fixed sum, equal in amount in the same locality, but increasing with the size of the population. The tax upon rental varies from one-thirteenth on the smallest rents to one-seventh on the largest. Hitherto firms carrying on several branches of trade in the same building have only been chargeable as for one. Under the new bill, however, each branch is to be treated singly and taxed accordingly. An additional patentee is to be paid also, proportioned to the number of persons employed. The bill defines the kinds of goods to be included in each branch, and there are sixteen branches. It is estimated that the total amount of license tax paid by the Bon Marche, a great retail establishment in Paris, which has 2,000 employees, will be increased from $82,000 per annum to $228,000, and that of the Louvre from $82,000 to $195,000. Attempts were made during the discussion of the bill to fix the number of categories at 70 and even 102 instead of sixteen, but these were unsuccessful. The measure was passed by a majority of 379 to 54, the deputies being greatly influenced, it is said, by popular jealousy of large trading establishments, and by the fact that a general election is near at hand.

AN INSOLVENCY BILL.

A private bill was introduced in the Nova Scotia Legislature Monday providing for the distribution of insolvent estates, the main provision of which makes preferences illegal, and provides for the equal distribution of assets among the creditors. Provision is also made for making assignments to sheriffs of counties, but creditors are allowed to substitute assignees of their own nomination. The bill is largely a re-enactment of the Ontario act, omitting some provisions that have been the subject of controversy in the courts.

THE MONTREAL BOARD OF TRADE.

The Council of the Montreal Board of Trade is at present discussing the advisability of depriving delinquent members whose dues are not paid of the little piece of paper that entitles them to the privileges and advantages of the Board of Trade, and as it is said that there are quite a few of these who are over a year in arrears, the board's action seems to be right and just. It is the desire also of many of the most prominent members of the board to make the certificates worth more than they are to-day. At present they stand at $65, but it is understood that at the quarterly meeting in April Mr. E. Judge will propose an advance in the value of the certificates. There are only a few for sale now, but if the board carries out the intention of confiscating the certificates of members whose dues are over a year in arrears there may be a lot more on the market.

There are two suggestions as to how the value of the certificates may be increased. One is to limit the membership and the other to put up the membership fees. The board will soon have to wrestle with both of these.

Next month the board moves into its new quarters, and already the question of how the event is to be celebrated is being considered. One suggestion is for a formal opening of the building in the afternoon and a reception in the evening and the next day a grand dinner at the Windsor hotel. Delegates from the Boards of Trade all over the country are to be invited. The members of the Dominion and Provincial Cabinets and members of both legislative bodies.

IMPORTS OF CITRUS FRUITS.

The California Fruit Grower says: "That we are nearing the point of self-support in the production of oranges is evident from the declining imports of such fruit. It is not long since there were imported into the United States nearly two million boxes of oranges, mostly from Italy and Spain. At present rates of increase in production, it will be but a short time until we shall grow more fruit than can probably be sold, especially at high prices, in this country, and must ourselves seek a foreign market for oranges. Of lemons we still lack a large amount of enough to supply the home demand.

The value of imports of citrus fruits for the past few years will be seen by the table showing the imports for the fiscal years ending June 30th, as follows:

	Oranges Value.	Lemons. Value.
1885	$2,088,204	$2,510,426
1886	1,871,839	2,608,819
1887	2,408,140	3,835,147
1888	2,268,872	3,395,983
1889	1,961,889	3,189,534
1890	1,916,652	3,374,032
1891	2,339,987	4,351,970
1892 (cal. year)	1,227,311	4,831,334

The above figures are compiled from the reports of the Chief of the Bureau of Statistics, which give values only without regard to quantities.

From other authentic sources we find that the number of boxes of oranges imported into the United States for the year ending October 31st last was 614,628 as against 1,050,988 for the previous twelve months. For the same period the number of boxes of lemons imported reached 2,291,700 and 1,828,720 respectively. A glance at these figures will show that generally speaking the imports of oranges have fallen off perceptibly of late, while there is a noted increase in the imports of lemons. As near as may be estimated, the orange crop of the United States last year was not far from five million boxes, and the imports as above shown something over half a million, making the total consumption in the United States from five and a half to six million boxes at the present time. That the consumption of oranges is rapidly increasing is also shown by the figures above presented, and they also show that the value of lemons consumed has nearly doubled since 1885.

The crop of Florida oranges last year was a large one, reaching some 3,800,000 boxes, while California had over 1,000,000 boxes. The Florida crop of the present season now nearly all marketed will not reach 3,000,000 boxes, but that of California will come up well towards 2,000,000 boxes; thus making the American crop, including that of Louisiana, nearly equal to that of last year.

The extent of citrus planting during the present spring will be much less than that of the previous two seasons, but enough will no doubt be added to our orchard areas to keep ahead of the increasing consumption of oranges in the United States. It will then become a question of successfully competing with the Italian and the Spaniard in European markets.

THE WHITE BEAN SITUATION.

One would naturally suppose that this country was sufficiently large and abundantly able to produce all the white beans that the inhabitants require for their annual consumption, but it appears that only a small percentage of the actual quantity necessary is produced from our own soil. The consumption of beans is undoubtedly showing a gradual, although steady increase, which is conclusive evidence that Boston 'culture' is making itself felt throughout all sections of the country. Vast quantities are regularly consumed among our Puritan neighbors, but other localities are rapidly forging ahead, and will in time succeed in wrenching from the east the title of "bean eaters," which for ages they have retained possession without question. The importation of the foreign product has been unusually large the past season, and the business has yielded excellent returns to all those interested both in this country and in Europe. The increased demand is attributed to the poor potato crop this country harvested last year, and the heavy advance in the value, thus forcing thousands of the working class to a more economical substitute, and seemingly with one accord the article beans has been decided upon as answering fully the requirements of the people. In past years France has been the country we have looked to when desiring to make good deficiencies upon this side of the water, the hand-picked product of that country being favored next to that of our own raising; but the season of 1892 did not deal favorably with the crop in that country, the yield not being sufficient to permit of any considerable exports to this side; hence it was found necessary to seek in other sections the stock that has been needed to meet the requirements of this country. Hungary was discovered as possessing an abundance, and, though the quality of their crop is probably not up to the standard of the French hand-picked, yet the prices quoted were accepted as favorable; therefore to that section of the world import orders went out in large volume, and have continued to increase steadily up to the present time, until today the quantity in transit has caused a halt in the interest of buyers, the latter entertaining some doubt as to the country's ability to take care of the heavy quantity in prospect upon the basis of the values now ruling. The cost of medium abroad is said to be equivalent to about $1.15 to $1.20 laid down. To this must be added 40c. duty, which brings the actual value up to $1.55 to $1.60. The quotation of this market at present is $1.75 to $1.85, though it is doubtful if these values could be realized to-day upon invoices. Up to this time there has been no important accumulation of stock, but it is the future quantity that is to be landed that appears to disturb the trade, and prompts more cautious action. The Scotia has just arrived with 9,900 bags. A considerable portion of this lot was sold previously, and will pass directly to the trade when the vessel is discharged. Cable statistics show that the Pocahontas, to follow, has 1,200 bags; Prydain, 11,000 bags; City, 38,000 bags; Powhattan, 20,300 bags, and Elysia, 10,000 bags, or a total quantity yet to arrive, of, say 80,500 bags, or the equivalent of 281,750 bushels. Whether any further shipments will be made to this side during the remainder of the season is a question, as reliable authorities in the trade inform us that it was with some difficulty the last cargo loaded was secured. The course of the market from this time on will be dependent wholly upon the character of the demand. If the consumption continues at the rate experienced during the past four months importers claim they will meet with no difficulty in handling the seemingly large supply in prospect; but the trade, on the other hand, are looking forward to the summer season, and the harvesting of the various domestic crops, and anticipate a gradual falling off in the consumption from the opening of spring. Buying will undoubtedly be pursued cautiously during the next several months, or until a clearer idea of the situation can be obtained; in the meantime the market is summed up, "Quiet but steady."—N.Y. Bulletin.

EUROPEAN POTATOES.

The potato market has been in a most unsatisfactory condition of late, and as the season advances the outlook seems less favorable for those most interested. The light home crop last season caused growers and dealers at primary points, both in the interior of this State and throughout the Western States, to turn speculators; and large quantities of potatoes were put away for the winter and late season to await the high prices which were expected in view of the short crop. The yield in Europe was believed to be light from early advices, and the prospects were truly very favorable. As the season advanced stock commenced to arrive freely from Europe, and for the last couple of months the importations have been very excessive, and, notwithstanding the market is overstocked, and prices have been forced down to a basis which does not cover expenses, they will which do not cover expenses, they still come in in quantity beyond all expectations, and the yield must have been much larger than supposed in most European countries. The arrivals for the past two or three weeks have been over 100,000 sacks per week, and values are so low that all classes of trade are using them exclusively, causing business in domestic stock to be almost at a standstill, as they are held higher in proportion than foreign, and, as prices now asked for the domestic are not on a parity with figures ruling at primary points, commission receivers are not disposed to make further concessions, particularly in view of the fact that they could not get low enough to materially widen the outlet.

Not only this market, but about all the nearby markets are being supplied by the foreign potatoes, and enquiries and orders are received from some of the most westerly sections, so that unless there is a very decided falling off in shipments from abroad, it does not seem probable that the market can be forced up sufficiently to allow holders of domestic to clean up at satisfactory prices, and it looks as if the bulk of the stock would have to be sold at figures below those which could have been realized first of the season.

One favorable feature for the domestic is the poor quality of foreign. In previous seasons they have been superior to our home potatoes, especially those from Scotland, but recently the stock received has been of irregular quality, and this may turn the consumption more toward the domestic. In some cases stock has arrived in such poor shape as to be a total loss, many marks not averaging over 50c. to $1, while the bulk of offerings have sold lately in range of $1.25 to $1.75, with only strictly choice up to $2 or higher per sack holding 168 pounds of potatoes.

The demand is all that could be expected, however, and, while not equal to the excessive offerings, the accumulation would be quickly reduced under light arrivals for a week or so, and an advance would undoubtedly result, and it seems as if the unfavorable advices which have been sent abroad from here during the past two or three weeks must soon be answered by a temporary reduction in receipts; but dealers all claim that there are any quantity of potatoes still in Europe which holders are anxious to unload on this market. Many of the foreign are shipped on commission, while a great many are bought by speculators here, and some of the investments have turned out rather disastrously for the buyers, the stock selling here for less than it cost on the other side, bringing the price for the consumer down to a very low point, considering the smallness of the yield last year.—N. Y. Bulletin.

A POINTER ON BUTTER.

"No dietetic reform would, I believe, be more conducive to improved health among children, and especially to the prevention of tuberculosis than an increase in the consumption of butter," remarks a contemporary. "Our children are trained to take butter with great restraint, and are told that it is greedy and extravagant to eat much of it. It is regarded as a luxury, as giving a relish to bread, rather than in itself a most important article of food. Even to private families of the wealthier classes these rules prevail at table, and at schools and public boarding establishments they receive strong reinforcements from economical motives. Minute allowances of butter are served out to those who would gladly consume five times the quantity. Where the house income makes this a matter of necessity, there is little more to be said than that it is often a costly economy. Enfeebled health may easily entail a far heavier expense than a more liberal breakfast table would have done. Cod liver oil costs more than butter, and it is besides often not resorted to till too late. Instead of restricting a child's consumption of butter, I would encourage it. Let the limit be the power of digestion and the tendency to biliousness. Most children may be allowed to follow their own inclinations, and will not take more than is good for them. The butter should be of the best and taken cold. Bread, dry toast, biscuits, potatoes and rice are good vehicles. Children well supplied with butter feel the cold less than others, and resist the influenza better. They do not 'catch cold' so easily. In speaking of children, I by no means intend to exclude other ages, especially young adults. Grown-up persons, however, take other animal fats more freely than most people do, and are, besides, allowed much freer selections as to both quality and quantity. It is not so necessary to raise any clamor for reform on their account."

EGG-TESTERS AND LIQUOR.

Talk about eggs, and you deal with a delicate subject says a contemporary, that is, if you attempt to illustrate your remarks with the things discussed. The discussion, too, should always be carried on at a time and place when and where you are reasonably certain that there is no possibility of sudden interruption, such as would necessitate your dropping the subject. It is needless to point out the wherefore of this to the intelligent egg man. Doubtless the Sun writer gave due consideration to these points when he delivered himself of the opinion that the Egg-Testers' Union of New York city have done well to decide that no person shall be considered in good standing as an egg-tester, who is addicted to strong drink. Sobriety is desirable in every walk of life, but it would be difficult to mention any vocation in which it is more imperatively demanded than in that of the professional egg-tester. There have been statesmen who have made some of their ablest public deliverances while half-seas over, hod-carriers who could carry their heaviest loads superimposed upon a jag; clergymen who could deliver their most powerful exhortations when in the condition of how-came-you-so; prize fighters who could strike their most telling blows while standing up on a skate; and temperance lecturers who could score their greatest number of pledge-takers when their trolley was off. But neither history nor mythology mention an egg-tester who ever accomplished a noteworthy feat of egg-testing when he was loaded.

The many reasons why an egg tester should keep sober are as patent to the layman as to the professional manipulator of the ovarious bounty of man's sedentary provider. Perhaps the best of these reasons has to do with the matter in hand. If an egg be dropped by a nerveless egg tester, the damage is total and beyond repair, except through a miracle; for has not the poet truly said:—

"All the king's horses and all the king's men Couldn't put Humpty Dumpty up again?"

Not only should the hand of the egg tester be as steady as though controlled by nerves of steel, but his vision should be clear and direct. The expert can tell at a glance whether "Within a wall as white as milk,

Behind a curtain soft as silk,
Bathed in a bath of crystal clear," a yoke or a chicken doth appear; but what value would there be in the professional opinion of an inebriated egg tester, whose bifurcated vision should see maybe two chickens in an egg justly entitled to be classed as a "strictly?" Again, the egg tester should be firm on his legs. Some of the most complete (we use this form of speech advisedly) wrecks on record have been the result of a tipsy man inadvertently sitting or kneeling in a basket of eggs.

From the view point also of his obligation to society it is imperative that the egg tester shall always be at his best. Not only does it depend upon him whether the matutinal boiled egg of the bon vivant shall open fit to satisfy his epicurean taste, or shall prove to have been suitable only for the sea-going omelet; but he must not err in the more delicate classifications which separate the family egg from the fashionable boarding house egg, the fashionable boarding house egg from the plain boarding house egg, and these from the "cooking" egg, the egg utilized for raw material in various arts and industries not culinary, and the egg that is bestowed as a token of displeasure by the audiences whom the entertainments have failed to please.

The more this subject is considered, the more important does it appear that the professional egg tester shall be a man of uncompromising sobriety. Let the Union adhere to its position, and it shall receive the moral support not only of all total abstainers and all who are temperate in their temperance, but even of those whose conduct falls short of the temperance standard of the Egg Testers' Union.

In The Toronto World of Monday last was published an interview with a local bank director regarding the curse of over-competition. "Even the saloon business is overdone," said he. "The wholesale dry goods business has been pretty well weeded out, and the houses now in that line are making money. All kinds of shop-keeping is overdone. If we had half the butcher shops, half the bakeries, half the groceries, etc., that line our main business streets, all would be occupied by happy and contented citizens." In regard to a remedy he suggested that some system of doubling up should be adopted.

As far as bank director's views go re evils of over-competition no one will dispute with him. They are apparent to everyone. But with the remedy he suggests it is different. It is all right in theory, but it loses all its plumes when viewed seriously. There are a thousand and one obstacles in the way of its ever advancing beyond the theoretical stage. Jones on this corner and Smith on that could be no more induced to double up than could a canary be induced to mate with an eagle. Smith, for instance, may have a good business and plenty of capital, while Jones may not have much to boast of in either particular. But even take it for granted that merchants here and there would join issues, what is to prevent Brown from stepping in and taking possession of the store made vacant by one of them? Nothing. The last state would then be worse than the first. No, it is just as possible to dam the Niagara as to try by such methods to regulate the number of stores. Nor can it be accomplished by statute. Popular opinion would resent any such interference with the liberty of the subject. There is only one feasible way by which limitations can be placed on people going into business. That is by closing up some of the avenues which now make access to business so comparatively easy. Let wholesalers set a higher standard with regard to capital and experience for those with whom they will open up accounts; inaugurate shorter terms of credit; and offer greater inducements for cash payments. Then it would not be so easy for those to start into business whose qualifications often consist of little else beyond an ambition to be a merchant. It is of little use to talk about reducing the number of business houses while the way into business is so easy of access. What is wanted is to nail up some of the entrances. Then when a weak merchant succumbs it will lessen the possibility of his being replaced by one equally as weak.

When the grocer sees his wife getting her new spring bonnet he can take it for granted that it is time he got his stock into spring trade shape.

If it is the early bird that catches the worm, it is the live and progressive merchant that catches the most customers. People appreciate the novel, and the business man who caters to this taste does not, other things being equal, go unrewarded. A grocer in an English town seems to recognize this peculiarity. At all events he has adopted a novel method of extending his trade. A demand for his teas is what he aims particularly to cultivate. These teas, he claims, are of a superior quality, and, to convince people of the truthfulness of this, he has issued a standing invitation to whosoever will, to come and drink tea with him, or, to put it in his own words, enjoy a cup of really good tea! The tea is dispensed at a side table decorated with plants and fairy lamps. Biscuits were also on the bill of fare. An idea of how well the free lunch was patronized may be gathered from the fact that a policeman had to be detailed for the special duty of keeping the crowds moving that congregated around the store waiting to partake of the grocer's bounty. It does not appear that the grocer was notified to appear before a magistrate for maintaining a nuisance, as was done in Ottawa a few years ago, when a pushing shoe dealer was fined for attracting a crowd to his store by means of an automaton placed in the window. Occasionally one runs across a retailer who complains that business is not all it might be. How would it be for some of these to turn their hand to imitating the English merchant? Who will try it?

Notwithstanding the high position Canadian cheese occupies in England its reputation has been more or less affected by inferior makes of American cheese, reputed to be Canadian, which have been placed on that market. This fact has been known for some time, but nothing practical in the way of preventing the imposition being continued has been done. Now, the cheese committee of the Home and Foreign Produce Exchange has taken the matter in hand, and it is to be hoped that some good may result. In a letter addressed to Prof. Robertson, the committee suggests as a simple remedy that the branding on the skin of the cheese the words "Canadian Produce" and also the date when made be made compulsory. Where there is the counterfeit there must be the real. And while it is a source of satisfaction to know that Canadians possess the real, yet a good deal of the sweets are taken from it when by reason of the spurious the reputation of the original is tarnished. So important has the matter become that one would fancy the cheesemakers would voluntarily attach the brand as suggested by the cheese committee.

The City Council at its meeting Monday night deferred action on the report of the Property Committee recommending a decrease in pedlars' licenses from $30 to $10. The retail merchants of the city have thus another two weeks in which to marshal their forces in opposition. Whatever may be said in regard to the street limitations, there seems to be no question about the righteousness of the $30 fee. There are other places that charge more. If the pedlars only realized it, a substantial license fee is a benefit to those who are already in the business. Competition among pedlars is as excessive as in every other line of business. A fee, therefore, that is something more than nominal will naturally tend to regulate the number of pedlars. With a fee purely nominal there will be what may be termed interant peddling. Fruiterers, grocers, etc., for instance, who, in the hot weather, may find themselves with a large quantity of fruit and vegetables on hand and which are likely to remain so, would be induced to load up their waggons and send out boys to peddle the stuff from door to door. In fact, some of the grocers threaten to do so anyhow if the recommendation of the Property Committee is concurred in by the Council.

Montreal business men have been assured by the Quebec Government that interest and taxes not yet paid, in accordance with the demand of the business tax, would not be collected, and that amounts already received as costs of legal notifications would be refunded. The business men of Montreal have had a hard fight to obtain this assurance, and they are to be congratulated upon the result. It shows what business men can sometimes accomplish if united.

THE SPRING GREEN FRUIT SALES.

The spring trade in green fruit is much quieter than usual so far as ordering for future delivery is concerned, scarcely half the amount of direct orders on Canadian account having been sent to primary markets this year for lemons and oranges as was placed a year ago at the same time. The brokers in Montreal explain this by saying that buyers seem to prefer to take their chances this year on consigned lots and that of the quality to come forward from the Mediterranean this spring almost all of it will be consigned fruit. At present the American markets rule very low both on lemons and oranges, and this fact is expected to divert a lot of fruit to the steamers now picking up cargoes on the Mediterranean for Montreal especially, as prices there have been satisfactory during the past year. The anticipations, therefore, are for a much larger quantity this season than last, although of course nothing definite is known about it or will be until the first boat has passed through the Straits of Gibraltar. Already four of the Reaford boats are chartered on this account. The Tremona is now loading at Messina, and after leaving that port will touch at Palermo and possibly Soreato. She will leave Messina very shortly. The Drocona is expected to arrive at Catania this week, and when she is finished at that port will also touch at Messina, Sorento and Palermo. The Escolona and the Avlona are now on their way, but their cargoes will consist largely of wines, as they will only take a small proportion of fruits.

In connection with these fruit sales a good deal of talk is caused among Montreal fruit brokers by an agitation going in New York to have the sales at that port conducted on the same basis as here, viz., prompt cash. Some of the New York men seem to fear that a change from the thirty day rule at present in vogue there to a prompt cash arrangement will tend to drive trade away from New York to other ports. The Montreal men admit that it may possibly drive some cargoes away from the big port, but after having an experience of both systems in Montreal they hold that the cash basis is far and away the best. It conduces to business on a more healthy basis and prevents speculative buying by weak holders who take a flyer in the hope of turning over their lots before the 30 days are up, and when they can't are in a regular hole, besides entailing loss on the seller. In New York the fear seems to be that it will drive people out of the green fruit business, but this is more of a blessing than an evil, at least Montreal dealers look at it in this light. Speaking of the matter the N.Y. Commercial Bulletin says: "The adoption of the cash system would undoubtedly prove of great benefit to those who are abundantly supplied with capital, as it would lessen materially the number of buyers at the public sales, and there would be less to contend with in the shape of competition upon the "street." A very considerable portion of the green fruit dealers are merchants whose means are limited, and who would be unable to meet cash exactions and at the same time allow their customers the usual 30 or 60 days' credit. Some in the trade are free to confess that their means would not permit them to remain in business if the payment of cash was obligatory upon the purchase of each line of goods that was necessary to keep their assortments intact or when an opportunity was presented to take up stock upon exceptionally favorable terms. The more prominent houses, or those who are backing the cash proposition, claim that the trade of the country can be educated into buying its fruit upon short time, and that within a year the old time system of 30 and 60 days will have been entirely forgotten. The question arises, however, would all neighboring ports adopt the same policy, or would Philadelphia, Baltimore, Boston and New Orleans take advantage of the system here, and, by increased importations, seek to undermine the trade of New York by granting time to interior buyers. This question certainly deserves serious consideration, as the country is an open market, free to competitors from any section that may have fruit to offer. Without anticipating the action of the auction house to whom the petition is addressed, it is hardly reasonable to expect that the proposition will meet with favor. The petition, however, is yet out for signatures, and we understand has now gone to other markets for the consideration of those who possess auction credit, so when it returns and is presented, the trade will learn how the subject is viewed by the principals to whom it is addressed."

COFFEE IN HAWAII.

On the mountain sides a brilliant scarlet berry on a small, dark green, small-leaved bush will attract an observant eye. Break open the berry, and imbedded in each half will be found a white seed with a line running lengthwise through the flat exposed surface.

In this unfamiliar guise it will not take you long to recognize coffee, which is indigenous to the soil. Some exports have been made of this product, and it is found in the Honolulu groceries under the title of Kona coffee. Connoisseurs have pronounced its flavor and aroma equal to the Mocha.

It would doubtless be cultivated to advantage. Successful experiments have also been made in the cultivation of the olive. Limas grow in great profusion and to a fair size.

CHATS WITH BUSINESS MEN.

"No, there is not the rush of customers that there used to be Saturday nights," said an old east-end retail grocer to me the other day. "People are getting more into the habit of leaving their orders or doing their shopping Fridays, and so by the time Saturday evening comes around we have the greater part of the orders delivered, and where we often used to be compelled to keep open till close upon midnight Saturday nights, we now get through from one to two hours earlier."

"Yes, and I don't see why stores should not be closed every night in the week much earlier than they are," chimed in his good lady. "Say seven o'clock every night except Saturday's when it might be made 10 o'clock. I'm sure we would do just as much business. And then look how much nicer it would be. If we closed at seven o'clock we would be given a chance of spending the evenings in social enjoyment or improving the mind. Now we have no time for either one or the other."

"But say. Hold on a minute," called out the Man of the House as I placed my hand on the latch, "there is another thing that I have noticed, and that is that people don't eat as much as they used to years ago. But I know they dress better. So I suppose they stint their stomachs for the good of their backs."

"That's so," remarked the Lady of the House as she leaned over the counter and peeped at me from around the corner of the show case. "But then I don't know but that they ate too much in the days gone by. People are beginning to find out that they can live just as well—in fact better—on less food than they used to. John, tell Mary to broil a couple pounds of beef-steak for supper," she added, suddenly turning her attention from me to give the message boy the order referred to.

"I think some change is necessary in regard to the stamping of weights and measures," said a grocer to me the other day, with some warmth. "Two years ago the inspector came around and stamped my measures, and to-day he came around and did the same thing. As a result of this frequent stamping holes have been punched through in some of the measures. I maintain that it is not necessary to keep on stamping the measures. If the inspectors were to periodically visit our stores and satisfy themselves that we had nothing but properly stamped measures in our possession I think the interests of the public would be just as well protected as they are at present. But say," he remarked, after hesitating a moment, "did it ever strike you that some of these inspectors may be interested in destroying the measures? By Jove, they might."

"Well, I'm to get my dollar back at last," said an up town grocer.

"What dollar?" I asked.

"Why, that dollar I was telling you the other day that I had paid out some months ago for a milk permit. Don't you know I told you that I and several others who had paid a dollar to the city for a milk permit had not yet been able to get it back, notwithstanding that we had since taken out the required license. Well, we've been notified that it will be refunded to us," he explained, as he picked up a currant, threw it in the air and caught it in his mouth.

I had a talk with Chas. B. Watt, secretary of the Dominion Millers' Association, the other day regarding the export flour trade to Great Britain. "I got a letter a few days ago," said he, "and they told me that there was practically nothing doing over there. Do you know that there are thousands of people in England and Scotland that are not eating flour. Owing to the strikes they can't afford such a luxury as flour. O, the outlook over there is not good I can tell you," he added as he buttoned his coat collar around his throat and moved off rapidly.

BYSTANDER.

CANADIAN FLOUR IN JAMAICA.

Mr. N. Weatherston, western freight and passenger agent of the Intercolonial railway, furnishes the following report from a prominent baker in the West Indies on the relative merits of Canadian and American flours, which will be interesting to Canadian millers, who will now be in a position to compete more successfully with flour from the United States. The White Light, Knickerbocker and St. Lawrence are well known brands of American flour which have hitherto had the call in West Indian and South American markets. The Canadian flour on which the baker's report is made is indicated by the private marks N.W., I.C.R. and T.—the brands are withheld for obvious reasons. The following is the report:

"Concerning the Canadian flour. I have used 10 barrels N.W., 5 barrels I.C.R., 5 barrels T. As far as looks go I should choose N.W., before White Light. But when it comes to test the flour thoroughly I must confess that I prefer White Light and the reason I do so is that the White Light flour has more spring and gives a far larger loaf than N.W., and also is better in crust. As to the color I believe I should prefer N. W., the bread being in my opinion a shade whiter than White Light flour bread.

"I have also carefully tested the other flours and find they produce a whiter bread than either Knickerbocker or St. Lawrence and very nearly the same as Victorioso. As regards spring they are about equal to the above mentioned flours. Had I to choose between I.C.R. and T. I should prefer the latter, for the simple reason that it has the most spring of the three flours used, though it is in my opinion the least white.

"More or less spring means that the same quantity of flour will produce a larger loaf than another flour.

"The flour was worked up with sugar as well as hop yeast of various strengths. The latter is not in use in this colony as a rule.

"I shall test the remaining flour next week, when it will be drier and may work better; still I have my doubts, as fresh flour generally works better than flour that has been in the colony some time. It is not the first Canadian flour that I have used, and I must say that I should like to find out the real cause of its not being so satisfactory, as the flours look remarkably well. First, I thought it was caused by the flour not being packed tight enough in the barrels, but now I feel inclined to think the flour contains too much gluten.

"Anyhow, I shall give the remaining flour another thorough trial, and make an experiment with potato yeast."

It's a long lane that has no turn, and perseverance and study will gradually turn the attention of Jamaicans to Canadian flour.

CAN CANADA GROW TOBACCO.

There is considerable discussion among tobacco and cigar manufacturers in Montreal as to whether a grade of tobacco suitable to the manufacture of medium grade cigars could be grown in Canada. There are two parties, one who maintain that it can, while another, and by far the largest body, maintain that it can't. There are reports, however, that the minority, despite the fact that they are in the minority, intend, with some other people interested in the growing of tobacco, moving to have the present excise tax on manufactured tobacco abolished, and an import tax on all foreign raw leaf imported imposed instead. They hold that such a course will encourage Canadian farmers to raise a better class of stock, for at the present time no cigar manufacturer who used imported leaf was allowed to make use of the domestic growth at all, nor did they care to do so, owing to its quality. The parties in favor of the new move, however, say that this can be obviated, and that there is no reason why Canada should not grow and cure a better quality of leaf. On the other hand, the manufacturers opposed to the new move characterize it as ridiculous, and say that it will never amount to anything at all. The idea that tobacco fit for the manufacture of cigars can be grown in Canada they characterize as preposterous and absurd. It does seem a Utopian idea on the face of it, but the people behind the new move claim to be in dead earnest about bringing the matter before the Government.

CUTTING PRICES.

Now that all the grocerymen are out on the road, and as the columns of this paper are more particularly devoted to that branch of the Knights of the grip, we think it a seasonable time to drop a word or two of advice about the evil of "price cutting." We presume some of our friends will be unkind enough to rise at this point and remark that "example is better than precept," but as we are not in the ring at present, and can afford to sit back and criticise the follies of previous years, we will accordingly treat you to a few leaves from the chapter of our experience. We are taught to believe that "self-preservation is the first law of nature," and although you may here query as to what that has to do with selling sugar an eighth below list price if you follow the text a step farther we will endeavour to explain. Every wholesale house in regulating the yearly salary of their representatives must as a matter of business, affix the amounts according to the rates of profits derived from their individual sales. For instance Mr. A. who sells $60,000 worth of goods at a net profit of 5 per cent. over and above travelling expenses, is a more valuable man from a monetary point than Mr. B. who sells $120,000 with only 2½ per cent. net margin.

It does not follow that because one man sells $1,500 worth of goods in a town where a competitor only sells $750, that the former is the more capable salesman. Any man can give goods away, and imagine he is doing a big business, but the man who can meet the head of the firm without feeling sheepish over the fine price he sold "granulated" at last trip is the man that holds his situation with each year a raise in salary. That is why we argue that self preservation is applicable to this case, and the sooner a regulation of profits is arrived at among travelling competitors, just so soon will employers see their way to an advancement in each man's salary.—Traveller.

THAT FRENCH TREATY.

The provisions of the new treaty between Canada and France, which are now being considered by Parliament, do not commend themselves to the judgment of the people of this country. By these provisions France agrees to admit certain articles free and others at a minimum duty, which, according to the trade of the year 1891, would sweep away duties amounting to $30,000 per annum. According to the provisions of the treaty Canada agrees to place French wines upon the free list. The duties imposed on these wines amounted in the year 1891-92 to $80,000. This looks very much like jugg-handled reciprocity. At any rate the advantages of the treaty are largely on the side of France. One clause in the treaty is practically the last nail in its coffin. It provides that in the event of Canada arranging a treaty with any other nation, granting greater trade privileges than those provided in this treaty, France is at once to be placed in the same position as the nation with which the new treaty is made. This virtually kills the treaty, for everyone in this country, from the most pronounced Tory to the ultra Radical, believes that reciprocity between Canada and the United States must sooner or later come, and no Canadian Ministry would for a moment think of jeopardizing the chances of such a reciprocity for the small advantages that are to be gained by the treaty now under discussion.—Critic, Halifax.

RETURNED CREAMERY BUTTER.

Referring to the creamery butter reported by us about three weeks ago as being on the way back from England, one lot has been received from Glasgow and one lot from Liverpool. The butter is said to have been well kept, although the tubs look as though they have been knocked around considerably. Sales however, of these returned goods are being made in this market at 20c. to 21c. to the trade in jobbing lots. One lot of this creamery is said to be selling for owner's account on the other side, some of which cost 23c. per lb., and will show a smart loss after paying freight and charges both ways. Still, such are the risks which attend the butter trade. These lots will no doubt realize more on this market than in England.—Trade Bulletin.

CANNED VS. FRESH APPLES.

The finest apples grown in the United States are raised in New England and the Middle States. Those from New York and New Jersey are of exceptionally fine flavor, so that we may say that the finest canned apples are those put up in the Empire State and its little neighbor. The thorough canner uses selected fruit generally—a Baldwin or a Rhode Island Greening. Packers of high grade apples sort their fruit and use the greatest care in paring and coring, so that a high grade can of apples should show fruit that is firm in texture, white and of good flavor. If there are bits of core or skin attached to the fruit it should count as of lower grade. The flavor of apples is largely dependent upon climate. The largest apple orchard in the United States is in California, but the fruit is small in size and lacks flavor, and is either shipped to Australia or else made into vinegar. The trade has at command apples packed in gallon cans and in No. 3 tins; also in the shape of apple sauce, which should be put up with the best granulated sugar and made of high grade fruit. Canned apples can be used for any purpose for which fresh apples are used. Naturally, they require less cooking than the fresh fruit, so that they are readily available at almost a moment's notice for pies, puddings, tarts and dumplings, and for this reason are in great favor with housekeepers, many of whom claim that a gallon tin of apples at 35 to 40 cents is much more profitable than fresh apples at 30 cents a peck. They also save the housekeeper time, trouble and fuel, aside from all risk of decay.—N. E. Grocer.

MACLAREN'S IMPERIAL IN THE SOUTH.

Told in the Toronto Telegram: "The Canadian never knows how much national sentiment he has bottled up in his heart until he hears his country slighted in a foreign land. A few Sundays ago I was dining with a friend in Baltimore. Among the guests were four naval cadets from the Annapolis Academy and a judge of the Supreme Court of Maryland. We had some of that Canadian cheese for dessert. It comes from Stratford, and is a first-class article, although I don't go much on cheese.

"But the judge, he was in love with it, and when he tasted it, said: 'What I can't understand is how, in such a poor country as Canada, you can produce cheese so much better than ours.'

"Well, that started me. 'Poor country,' I said, 'I like that. Why, I never saw a poor country until I travelled in the States.' We then had it good and hot, and those naval cadets seemed to think the more of a fellow for standing up for his own country. And I was right in what I said about the poverty of the Southern States. So far as I can see the poor wretches who have to live in such a country are to be pitied. Eating liver and bacon continually is not living high any more than feeding on hominy is luxury. Down in the South they have hard enough work getting that, and would not get it except on the profits of what they squeeze out of northern visitors and Canadians. Don't tell me any more ghost stories about the prosperity in the United States."

DEEP SEA FISHES OF THE PACIFIC.

About 190 species of deep sea fishes have been obtained by the Albatross in the depths of the ocean on the continental slope of California. These creatures are, as a rule, very soft in body, almost black in color, and many of them covered with phosphorescent spots, by which they can see their way in the darkness. They live in the open sea, from two to five miles below the surface and their soft bodies at this depth are rendered firm by the tremendous pressure of the surrounding waters. In their native haunts the light and heat of the sun scarcely penetrate; the darkness is almost absolute, and the temperature of the water is at the point of freezing. The creatures living at these great depths are not, generally speaking, descended from the shore species of the same region. They constitute groups by themselves, and forms very similar are found in all parts of the ocean from the poles to the equator.

AUTHORITY FOR SMOKING.

A good story is told by Bishop Williams on Bishop Seabury, the first bishop of Connecticut, in Tobacco.

All who knew him will remember that he was a great smoker, and always travelled equipped with a large tobacco pouch containing a noble supply of his favorite tobacco, and he always carried a wooden case specially made to hold three long clay pipes. He would have as soon forgotten his books and vestments as his smoking impedimenta.

Among his ardent admirers was an elderly lady of the diocese, a good, charitable soul, but who could not stand the tobacco smoke surrounding the bishop like a halo, and, after mature consideration she determined to tackle her friend on the matter. Finally, one day when he was blowing a great cloud from his pipe, she mustered up courage and said: "Bishop, how can you smoke? It is an unclean habit, ungodly and dissipated, not becoming to a minister and a good man like yourself."

The bishop looked up in well simulated surprise: "Why, my good woman, I thought you read your Bible, and believed its teachings."

"I do, Bishop," was the reply, "but I never saw anything in the Bible which countenanced smoking."

"What?" cried the Bishop, "did you never read the passage which exhorts you to praise God on the pipe? Impossible?"

The old lady's face was a study as she replied: "Law, now, Bishop! I've read that passage over and over again, but I never knew what it meant before. Dear me! dear me! I must go right away and explain that passage to Mrs. Blank, who has often condemned your smoking out of sheer ignorance of rightly understanding the scriptures!"

JAPANESE BEAN CHEESE, OR TOFU.

In a series of papers on the leguminous plants of Japan, contributed to American Gardening by C. C. Georgeien, of Kansas Agricultural College, is an interesting description of bean cheese, or tofu, made from the soy bean. It is as follows:

"For making bean cheese the Shiro-mame, or white soy bean, is commonly used. The beans are soaked in cold water for 24 hours, then, while still wet, they are ground between two small millstones, turned by hand, the product being not flour, but a thin paste, which is collected in a tub below. To this more water is added, and it is then boiled in a large kettle for an hour. On being removed from the fire it is strained through a bag to remove the hulls, the filtrate running into a tub or vessel of suitable size. Water is stirred into it, and a small quantity of 'bitter brine' (refuse from the salt works, consisting chiefly of chloride of magnesium) is added, about a quart of 'bitter brine' to every two gallons of dry beans. This causes the legumin to be precipitated; when it has settled to the bottom of the tub, a little pressure is applied by means of a lid, which fits inside the vessel, and is weighted somewhat. When cool the water is decanted off, and the tofu or curd is cut in slices, and is now ready for market. In this condition it is a spongy yellowish white substance, resembling cheese-curd. It is peddled from house to house, and is universally esteemed; but it is always roasted, fried, baked or cooked in some way before it is served."

THAT EXPENSE ACCOUNT.

That strict surveillance some houses keep on their road salesmen is as derogatory to their interests as it is harassing to their equanimity. To require that a detailed statement, accounting for every cent spent on the trip should be submitted to the scrutiny of the house, is doubtful policy. It implies that a low view of the status of the traveller is taken, whereas the sort of service the traveller is engaged to do, and the extent to which he is thrown upon the guidance of his own judgment, justify the belief that the wholesale trade have a rather high conception of the nature of a traveller's work. He is no mere servant with a specified limited commission to carry out. If he were, it is probable the ways and means whereby he should proceed to do the thing directed to be done would be as clearly defined as the duties themselves. He is an executive agent, entrusted with some of his principals. He has to decide for himself in as many cases as they have to decide for themselves or their agents. His house must delegate some high authority to him, in the same way as the country must delegate authority to its government, and—to bring the parallel a step further—while he must render an account of the money he spends and receives—as a ministry must—so, like a ministry, he should be allowed to put the details of some classes of expenses under the general entry of secret service outlay. There is no doubt the traveller has to be diplomatic in his methods. With one customer expenditures pay in an altogether different direction than that spent in company with his neighbor, and it takes a good deal of human nature to discriminate when a mistake is apt to mean the loss of an order. There is no need to indicate more closely some very necessary expenses that probably, if made self-explanatory or justifiable on paper might wrongly be deemed more condemning than justifying.

All this is said upon the supposition that the traveller has a creditable record that is well known to his firm. If he has, he ought to be allowed to lump his secret service expenses in one entry. The test of whether or not he is worthy of this confidence will be found in the returns from his work, and it is by this criterion that his expenditures should be judged.—Ex.

EVAPORATED APPLES EASIER.

The market for evaporated apples, after remaining inactive for a long time, took a sudden jump in January last, and prices were advanced to a dangerously high point, which checked demand more or less from all quarters, but holders were in most cases confident, and the fruit was held at extreme figures, notwithstanding outlets to a great extent had been narrowed down and almost closed in some cases. The situation remained about this way for a month, when some holders, especially in the interior, commenced to lose confidence, and with increased quantities offered, holders here could not sustain prices, and they have steadily weakened, falling at a very rapid pace. Within a few days past, prime, which were held as high as 10c. a week or ten days ago, have had sales at 9c., and holders in some instances have been unable to obtain that figure, while a large block has been moved at 9c., the fruit grading better than prime. Some dealers are not inclined to meet the lower ideas of buyers and are asking much higher prices than generally quoted, with the result that they are doing little actual business, and it seems as if further reduction would not be improbable, although the lower prices prevailing has caused some speculative demand to develop, and is likely to create a wider consumptive outlet, which would quickly increase demand sufficiently to check the decline, and might cause a reaction, but as a rule March and April are dull months for dried fruit, and the immediate outlook is not considered favorable. The depression extends to other grades of dried apples, but supply is so moderate that they have not materially declined as yet. Dried raspberries and other small fruits are in light supply, and, while the demand is somewhat limited, considerable strength is shown in some lines, especially raspberries, peaches and fine cherries.—N.Y. Bulletin.

"YELLOW" WILL COME LATER.

The Delaware peach growers cannot find anything in the present winter to grumble about. The cold periods have been long and the warm ones short, and from present indications the peach buds have not developed sufficiently to endanger them if exposed to severe cold during the early spring. Besides, it is quite likely that the severe cold has destroyed the insects that prey upon the fruit, and the heavy coating of snow has been beneficial to the earth by the promotion of fertility. The outlook, therefore, is that the customary cry of a failure of the peach crop will not be heard this year, and that the luscious fruit will be abundant and cheap.—N. E. Grocer.

FRESH LOBSTER IN TINS.

Familiar as are consumers with canned food, they have an imperfect idea as to the economic value of many articles that are preserved in tin cans, fresh at the source of supply; meats, fruits, vegetables, and particularly canned salmon and lobster. It is not generally known to consumers or to retail dealers that it requires the choicer parts of six lobsters of legal size, viz., 10 1-2 inches, to fill a one-pound tin. Formerly two were sufficient. If these six fish were bought at retail in any of the city markets they would cost from $1.25 to $1.50. The difference which may be saved between the cost of a one-pound tin of lobster and a like quantity of meat, as bought fresh in the open market, in the shell, may be set down in the neighborhood of $1. When consumers have a keener idea of the saving of time, trouble and expense to be effected by using many sorts of preserved food, they will realize more than ever the extra good value they get when buying tinned lobster at 25 cents per can, rather than its equivalent quantity of fresh lobster. They will have greater confidence in the article when made acquainted with the recent improvements adopted by the canners to keep the fish in the best condition both as to quality and appearance. The best packers are now lining the cans with fine parchment paper, besides soldering the tins on the outside, so that the contents of the can will open without show any signs of discoloration. This will disarm that unreasonable prejudice, which occasionally asserts itself, that the meat is liable to become impregnated with mineral salts through coming in contact with the tin and solder.

The restrictions placed upon the lobster fisheries within recent years by the Canadian government, Newfoundland, and some of our own States, has so narrowed the fishing season that it now covers a period of from four to six weeks of actual working time. The opening of the season is often delayed by the ice, so that frequently fishing does not commence until the middle of the third week in May. If Sundays and stormy days are deducted the packers are left with barely four week's time in which to put up canned lobster. This short season also results in higher prices being paid to the fishermen. In view of these things it is really surprising that canned lobster can be put up and sold at such low prices as now prevail. It is another illustration of what science and skill and steam can do to cheapen food.

The value of the lobster fishery in Canadian waters is about $2,250,000 annually. In 1891 the pack of lobsters aggregated 14,285,157 pounds, of which 6,323,628 pounds are credited to Nova Scotia, 3,330,120 to New Brunswick, 960,995 to Quebec, and 3,670,014 to Prince Edward Island. The official report states that in 1891 138,000 traps were used about the last named island, with an average production per trap of equal to 26 1-2 one-pound cans.—American Grocer.

THE PLEBEIAN PEANUT.

"Peanuts unaristocratic," exclaimed a fashionably dressed, bright eyed young miss to her pretty companion in a Walnut street car the other day. "Well, what if they are? I'm going to have them served at our dinner party salted, and they are perfectly lovely. Salted almonds aren't in it. All you do is to buy the green or unparched peanuts, parboil them, rub off the red envelopes, spread the blanched nuts on a tin dish, treat them to butter, then brown them for half an hour in a baking but not quick oven, and when they are a light snuff color take them out at once and salt them while hot. Just try that recipe when you get home, and the lowly peanut will become exalted 100 per cent. in your eyes."—Philadelphia Record.

CANDY WITHOUT COOKING.

To make a delicious candy, break the white of one egg into a large flat dish. In one end of the dish put about one pound of the very best confectioners' sugar carefully sifted. Beat the egg, taking up a little of the sugar at a time and beating steadily for about ten minutes. Before all the sugar is in add a large teaspoonful of some preferred extract, vanilla, lemon, or rose, the first being most generally liked. Beat or stir until the sugar is all in. When done it should stand up in a firm lump and should settle but very little if left standing. Then dust a little fine sugar on a pastry board, cut off with a sharp knife a part of the beaten sugar, lay it on the board and roll it under the hands until perfectly soft and smooth, then make into a roll about as large as a 25 cent silver piece, cut off little round cakes of this about half an inch thick, pat this between the hands until smooth, then place the half of an English walnut on the prepared pat of sugar and press it a little to bring the twain in close contact. Have ready a plate rubbed over with a bit of buttered paper. On this place the candies as fast as made.

They may be set in the oven for a minute or on a shelf above the fire. Many persons put them on buttered paper, but they sometimes stick and tear the paper which adheres to them, and which is objectionable when the confection is eaten.

Sugar prepared in this way may be used to coat fruit. Blanched almonds are rolled in little cakes of it, care being taken to press and roll the sugar so that the nut is entirely covered. Various sorts of nuts chopped fine may be mixed in with the sugar or fruits, such as citron shredded, seeded raisins cut up fine or candied, and preserved fruits of any sort, care being taken that they are not too juicy, as this would prevent hardening.

Fresh fruits may be put up in this way. If grapes are dipped in the beaten white of an egg and allowed to dry, then rolled in this same beaten sugar, they are delicious. Sometimes the confection is made quite soft, then placed in a hot oven for a moment and allowed to remain until thoroughly scalded through, care being taken that it is not browned. In this way it gets the elastic, firm quality so much liked in what are called French confections.—N.Y. Ledger.

NEW DODGE FOR THE COLLECTION OF DEBTS.

Recently a scheme for collecting debts from delinquents has been devised and used by a collection agency in the Western part of this State. I am told that it has been very successful. The accounts are placed in the hands of the agency, with a certain amount for postage (and if the merchant is green, a membership fee as well), and a series of letters sent out to the delinquents. The letters are similar to those used by hundreds of associations throughout the country.

The succeeding steps, however, are different from those usually taken and show the cunning hand of someone versed in the byways of the law.

If the accounts are not settled when the series of letters has become exhausted, the collection company proceeds to acquire the ownership of the accounts by assignment.

It then begins suit for these accounts in places far distant from the domicile of the debtor, and to ensure the presence of the debtor to prove the claim, issues a subpoena for him.

The debtor usually treats all suits at law with contempt, and expresses his feelings in this way usually: "Let 'em sue and be d-d! I haven't got anything."

In this case, however, he finds a vast difference. In case he does not show up an order of arrest is granted for contempt of court, and that has always brought about a settlement, I believe, up to date. It can readily be seen that this is a great scheme to circumvent the bad debtor.

But alas! some friend or client of Senator Parson has been hurt, and he has introduced a bill to do away with this terrible injustice to the much abused delinquent!

So much for the prayers of the faithful! The delinquent has always a friend at court, and never, apparently, lacks one at Albany. We shall watch with interest the course pursued by this bill, and shall be glad to report such progress as it may make.

It is yet in committee, and will probably remain there for some time to come.—Harlem in National Grocer.

CRITIQUES ISSUE MARCH 24.

A druggist of my acquaintance is very bitter against grocers and all such trespassers on certain preserves. His attention will be drawn to the article on the proposed legislation to make drug selling a sure and certain gold mine.

Our dapper little friend, Mr. Seyler, has laid us under obligations, in that he has, perhaps inadvertently, borne out the truth of our remarks on a late occasion regarding the over use of adjectives in advertisement writing. We commend the whole matter to the common sense of all interested.

Where, oh where, is the cigar trade gone which used to be a very profitable branch of the trade! That the manufacturers have peddled it out of existence is perhaps the truth; nor have they benefited, for of the many boasted industries of our land, this is one which oftenest changes hands.

Now-a-days "bargain days" and "one price" are the strangest bedfellows. A little firmness in the matter of holding to a fixed price when once made is a good, rare quality, and one of a successful business' best props. When you want to have a cheap cut select goods requiring to be sold, and make a fixed price for them till sold.

The Quebec merchants' tax troubles them very much, and thoroughly bears out the old political (Canadian) saying that "Direct taxation does not go in Quebec."

The French treaty muddle is the biggest set-back Canada has had for a decade. While the various conditions are interesting political situations, the fact remains that Canada's commercial independence has received a very serious check in its onward progression. Where Tupper's preferential duties deal with the Motherland was, while he was engaged on this treaty, none venture to say.

Even the particular family which dislikes solder so much is using canned vegetables freely this season.

We read that mackerel is not considered dangerous property at present prices. They will never be dangerous as sellers, although perhaps they may be as eaters.

The native wine men are surely entitled to every consideration. Theirs is an industry which, making use of the pure juice of the grape, offers to the public the finest, best, and least intoxicating of the beverages. If we must have liquor, let it be pure light native wine.

"Anyone who has purchased 'milk sugar' for a struggling baby at their druggists will appreciate any threatened increased supply, in the hope that such increase means a decrease in price.

A combination of that story anent rats and eggs and the articles on beans and egg testers would make a good composite story if there was room, but we refrain. Meanwhile we say "next yarn."

STRAIGHT MOYUNE.

THE TEA EXPERT.

The scene was an uptown grocery store. A number of samples of tea were in the cups, and a number of travellers were standing over them sipping and tasting. Just then a city traveller entered, and he was invited to taste and pass his judgment. He accepted. After some hesitation he picked out one or two as being the best, but, according to the judgment of one or two of the others, his judgment was pronounced to be incorrect. While they were discussing the different points of quality in the different teas another city traveller entered.

"Hello," said one of those already in the store, "you are just in time. Let's have your opinion on these teas."

He accepted the invitation. (He is one on whose judgment much reliance is placed.) While they are all eagerly watching him he advances towards the cups, takes them up one by one, smells them and lays them down again, but makes no attempt to taste, at which they are all surprised.

"What is the matter?" said one.

"The teas are spoiled," he replied, turning round, "and I cannot tell which is the best."

"Why; how is that?" they all exclaimed.

"Someone who has previously been tasting had been smoking," he answered.

"What nonsense," they said; "none of us have been smoking—well, except Jack here, and he has just come in."

"Well, then, it must be Jack," rejoined the tester.

"How do you know I've been smoking?" said Jack, in an excited tone; you never saw me smoke."

"No, sir, I have not," replied the expert, "but I could swear if what the rest of the gentlemen here say is true, you have done it."

"Well, if you never saw me, how do you know?"

"Simply enough," answered the expert. "The smoke has adhered to your lips and moustache, and from them it has been washed off into the cups, thus permeating the whole of the teas. The other men here, if they are not addicted to the use of tobacco, will detect it as quickly as I. If you will put some fresh tea into fresh cups I will tell you which is the best tea."

A POPULAR MUSTARD MAN.

J. J. Colman, M.P., of Norwich, England, seems to be as popular in his constituency as the mustard he manufactures is famous in the world. This was demonstrated in a practical manner on the 7th inst., when he was presented with the freedom of the city which he has represented for so many years in the British House of Commons, and has also served in the capacity of mayor.

The scene was a brilliant one, and after laudatory speeches had been made, the roll conferring the freedom was presented. The parchment was deposited in a satin-lined solid silver casket. The casket is a beautiful work of art. The form is oblong, with a square pillar at each corner resting on ball feet. The front panel is richly chased in the Italian style, two female figures being introduced to support the shield engraved with the arms of Mr. Colman. The back panel is similarly chased, only the supported arms are those of the city. The end panels are chased in keeping with the others. The handsome cover is mounted with scroll shields bearing Mr. Colman's monograms. The casket panels are of a soft, white, satin-color, while the shields and arms, the cover, pillars, and other parts are bright polished, making a pleasing contrast. It stands on a velvet plinth on which is a silver shield engraved with the Norwich Arms, and the following inscription:

City of Norwich.

ALEXANDER ROBERT CHAMBERLIN, Esq., MAYOR.
Presented

With the Honary Freedom of the City,
By the Corporation, to

JEREMIAH JAMES COLMAN, ESQUIRE, M.P.,
7th March, 1893.

Mr. Colman, on rising to reply, was received with hearty applause. After a few introductory remarks, he said: I have been so long connected with the city of Norwich that I hardly know how it is I have not been a citizen before. I find the name of Colman on the register of the freemen of the city some few centuries ago. I cannot say whether this was one of my family; but at all events there were some Colmans on the roll of freemen some three or four hundred years ago. If it is quite true it has been on other rolls, and if I had thought of it perhaps I could have brought here a book in which I could find a relative of mine put down as voting in the early part of this century in a ward in Pockthorpe. Probably, too, I could have found an ancestor of my friend, Mr. Patteson, in the same ward, but I should not have looked for him in the same column. (Laughter.) We have heard of late of the existence of a body of freemen, and I am glad to know that though it is not with any pecuniary interest, I shall be enrolled amongst that ancient and honorable body. It is now some 35 years since I began political life as a representative of one of the wards in this Council Chamber. I thought after a time, when other duties and occupations increased, that it was desirable I should retire, not having sufficient time to devote to municipal affairs. I sometimes wonder whether it would not be a good thing if the Municipal Corporations Association would get introduced to Parliament a bill to confer honorary membership, or something of that sort, on members of Parliament connected with their different localities. I think such a move might be better for our municipal life in the long run.

I cannot, in looking back, but be struck with the enlarged sphere of the work undertaken by town councils. There are now many things which corporations undertake that formerly were not part of their duty, and I must say the tendency seems to be to increase and not to diminish them. In my judgment it is very desirable that it should be so. Then there is the acquisition of various private undertakings which have been acquired by some corporations, and which, in some instances, at all events, have worked very well. There are town improvements which were not thought of fifty or sixty years ago, and could not have been carried out if they had been thought of, but which are now entrusted for the benefit of the community, to our own corporations. In order that this work may be well accomplished we need the co-operation of all classes of our fellow-citizens. For this work I am sure we will need all classes of our fellow-citizens. There has been a disposition I think among some of the leisured and wealthy classes to leave local self-government, but I hope the time will come when we shall see all classes in our town councils—the wealthy and leisured classes not excluding those who are less well off in this world's goods, and those that are poor having no other desire than that the wealthy and more wealthy should be with them. Nowadays there seem to be more bazaars to open, more lectures to attend, and I suppose it is thought the presence of the mayor is desirable to increase the value of those functions in public. There is another thing I notice the mayors have to perform to-day which did not arise when I was mayor. I notice that the mayor is supposed occasionally to perform that operation which I dare say some of you know more about than I do, namely, to "kick off." (Laughter.) If I were mayor I should assume the sheriff was a younger man and that that duty might fall to his share. I believe the only athletic thing I ever had to do was to sit on a horse and see a review of volunteers, and I remember being profoundly thankful when the march past had taken place and I had not fallen off my horse. (Laughter.) It seems to me that our corporations and the city generally are looking a little more to the physical training of their citizens, and to the opportunity of physical enjoyment, and therefore are seeking the good of the bodies of men as well as their minds. In the present day there is a very proper desire that our corporation should do more than they have done in former years to provide for the physical welfare and well-being of the people. Perhaps some of these days the mayor will be called upon to take a plunge into a new swimming bath or to ride a bicycle, and, indeed, I am correct in saying that at the present time the London county council has so far looked after the physical enjoyment of the inhabitants of London that they have provided sand-holes in which the children may go and enjoy and amuse themselves, and I am sure they are better occupied that way than in rolling in the mud in the gutter. It seems to me that all this is very desirable work. I am not going to undervalue churches, chapels, or mission-rooms, or anything that improves or adds to the religious welfare of the people, but I am quite sure we ought not to stop there, and it is through town councils and bodies of this kind that movements on behalf of the well-being of the bodies of the people can be best promoted. But I will not ramble on. I thank you heartily for your kindness. I feel that in belonging to this ancient and honorable city I have a distinction which I highly value, and I thank you from the bottom of my heart. (Applause.)

RICE YIELD AND ACREAGE.

The rice crop in Louisiana this year amounts to about 7,500,000 bushels, of which 6,000,000 bushels have already been received, while the annual receipts at this market, says the Savannah News, are about 60,000 bushels. The receipts up to March 1 this year show a large increase, however, over those received at the same date last year. The comparative mill statement, as received by Mr. W. G. Morrell, shows that the receipts up to March, 1892, were 408,678 bushels, while this year they amounted to 540,131 up to the same time. There is also a proportionate increase in the amount pounded and the amount still on hand. The outlook for the coming year indicates that the crop will be fully as large, if not larger, than that of last season. The greater portion of the ground has been ploughed and harrowed, and is about ready for receiving the seed. Reports from the planters indicate that there will be a somewhat increased acreage this season, though at present it is difficult to estimate exactly what it will be. Planters in this section estimate the yield at about 40 bushels to the acre. The average annual yield is put by the dealers at 55,000 bushels, which would require about 13,750 to 14,000 acres, although it is estimated that the acreage will be somewhat greater than that this season.—Charleston News and Courier.

MORE ABOUT PEPPER.

Recently we intimated that some of the contract deliveries of pepper had given much dissatisfaction on account of poor quality. Singapore growths were due on tenders, but the stock in some cases delivered is said to be made of a large percentage of lower grades and other inferior stuff, out of which very little of useful character can be obtained. The same trick has been played by the shorts on cloves, who, unable to meet their contracts with standard goods have imported from London a mixture of stems and exhausted cloves, nicely colored and doctored, and with these goods made delivery on maturing engagements. The effect is unsettling to the market, and there is a good deal of denunciation of the sharp practice, with a possibility that legal methods of redress may be resorted to.—N.Y. Bulletin.

A BUSINESS VAGABOND.

A very dirty and bedraggled specimen of a tramp strolled into a grocery store on Queen street the other morning, and the first man he met was the proprietor. "Can you gimme a dime?" asked the visitor meekly.

"I can, but I hardly think I shall," was the cheerful response. "Why in thunder don't you go wash yourself?"

"I can't afford to," whined the tramp.

"Can't you, indeed? Water's plenty, and soap doesn't cost anything."

"Don't it?" queried the tramp.

"No, it don't."

The tramp edged over toward the door.

"Well," he said, with his hand on the latch, "If it don't, I'd like you to figure out for me what your per cent. of profit is on every bar you sell to your deluded customers," and with that he dodged outside and disappeared.

Credit is often too cheap and overbuying far too common. Don't be guilty of the one, and don't abuse the other.

One thing in particular should be impressed upon clerks—the necessity of careful attention to small customers

A Mitchell man advertised a $20,000 stock, but when the assessor called he said pedling from door to door absorbing the vitality which ought to go to sustain the heavy rent paying and tax paying business men of the city like me. What good are they to Toronto. They live in hovels and pay no taxes. They don't spend their money here but absorb it like a sponge. They make their endship it over to their own country, and in time they away themselves to live on the honey they have gathered here. I have known as many as thirty of these people to live in one house with six rooms, both sexes. Here's a case for your new made health officer. The fruit and vegetables they have been pedling all day lying in the midst of them, absorbing the poisonous cases which rise from their persons. The bananas are sometimes put under the bed in order, I suppose, to ripen. One lady told me that she got two bed bugs on a handfull she bought from one of them. The pedlars are making it so that a business man can't live and pay the rents and taxes they are expected to do. The consequence is that many of our good business people are leaving the city, and what are we getting in their place? A lot of good for nothing loafers and spongers on the city.

"That is one of the reasons there are so

Stokes struck a well that pumps a good twenty barrels, and a week or so ago Mr. W. C. Mackenzie struck a well at the west end of the town that threw oil clear over the derrick, and is now pumping twenty-five barrels a day.

The business men of London the Less are again happy.

John Forbes Michie has applied for permission to keep a lot of lazy, good-for-nothing women from going out to get the fresh air by going out shopping. One of our worthy aldermen is credited with having said that since he has lived outside the city limits he has changed his mind and thinks that they are a great convenience. What good is that man to the city? I would like to know what the aldermen are placed in the Council for, anyway. I always, from a boy, was led to think that they were put there by the people to look after the best interests of the city. But I defy any one of them to show me where by reducing the pedlar's license they are benefitting the city in any way whatever. They are not even going to benefit the pedlars in the long run. "The Italian pedlars are skimming the cream and sending it to their own country. One of these men, I am told, took three thousand dollars with him and came back to make another two thousand. Where I used to sell four barrels of coal oil I now only sell two, and I could give you similar instances right around me. The way business is done in this city is rotten. One of our worthy aldermen says that he has petition with four hundred names of business men on it praying for a reduction. I would like very much to know who those business men are. Some of the fruit men might want them on the main streets again. Their being on the main streets does not materially matter. It is on the back streets they do the harm. They catch the customers before they get on the main streets. Now, so far as the four hundred names goes the secretary of the Grocers' Association could give you two thousand names of business men who want the license raised. What the Council ought to do is to let it stand at what it is. Let it be thoroughly understood that the next time anything is done in the matter it will be raised. That would put a stop to this yearly pedlar nuisance."

TRAVELLER.

C. A. Young, secretary of the Ratepayers' Association, has written Secretary Corrie of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association promising him the support of that organization in opposing the reduction in the fee for pedlars' licenses.

The effect is unsettling to the market, and there is a good deal of anxiety maintained that they come from places where cholera is prevalent at the time. Not a single instance was noted in which cholera was disseminated by either oranges or lemons.

BEGINNING BUSINESS.

When the clerk enters into business on his own account he is in a position to appreciate the value of a good reputation for industry, economy and morality, writes a correspondent of Merchants' Review. So long as he remained an employee it mattered little how or where he spent his spare hours, or whether his personal habits were economical or extravagant. But unless he is in a position to buy entirely for cash, these points will be considered in the mercantile agency reports, and upon the latter will depend the amount of credit that is granted him by the wholesale trade. If he visits the race track or other resorts of sporting men often, the fact is noted, and the least appearance of slowness in settling an account makes the creditor cautious about granting further credit. Similarly if his personal expenses reach an unusual figure, or if he is late in opening the store or in appearing there in the morning, argus-eyed agents of the mercantile information bureaus take note of the fact and report it, to the detriment of the beginner's credit with those whom it is good policy, if not of vital necessity, for him to stand well with. It is not only that future applications for credit may be thus affected; creditors press for the moneys due them, and if circumstances prevent a prompt settlement by the debtor when accounts become due, it is well nigh impossible for him to get an extension of time. Of course all these possibilities will be avoided if the beginner possesses an ample capital, but how many clerks on beginning business in their own names have sufficient means to buy for cash? Perhaps not one per cent. of the total number, hence the necessity of the beginner paying attention to the points mentioned, which, as we have already said, become of vital importance as a rule only when the ambitious clerk becomes the proprietor of a store.

DRY GOODS.

(From the Dry Goods Review.)

Sorting orders are coming in with more briskness than during the past two weeks, and the market has a merrier tone. Some of the houses report a rather dull week ending on the 25th. Others again declare that their experience was a fair trade, with a tightness in collections.

Wm. Parks, of Wm. Parks & Son, cotton manufacturers, at St. John, N.B., has been in the city for a few days. He has been trying to secure a higher price for cotton warps. Dealers will find in this a warning concerning these goods.

Latest reports from London show that ribbons continue firm and manufacturers are not anxious to sell at present prices.

Mr. Burton, of Caldecott, Burton & Spence, is on the continental market at present. He reports an enormous demand from the United States for two tone guipures.

W. R. Brock, of W. R. Brock & Co., is now travelling in Egypt and Palestine. Copies of the Dry Goods Review were sent to catch him at Jerusalem.

John Macdonald & Co. report $10,000 of an increase last week over the business of the corresponding week last year.

NOTES

Two special lines in heavy blue serges in dress goods are shown by John Macdonald & Co. They have also to hand a special shipment of colored surahs. Both these lines are in good demand at present. Shot effects, reps, whipcords, and silk figures are the leading things in dress goods, and this house has a stock fully equal to the demand. Repeats of different lines are continually coming to hand, and stock is kept full and well assorted. Victoria lawns, muslins, Nainsooks, and other midsummer goods are in good exhibit, and prices are low, notwithstanding the recent advances in these lines.

Caldecott, Burton & Spence have received another shipment of guipure laces in creams, beiges and two tones. Their black Spanish and black and cream guipures are moving very fast these days, and dealers seem to recognize that they have the latest novelties in these lines. Oriental laces in white and creams are also moving freely with this house. Their assortment of laces is varied at all seasons, and now when laces are in special demand they are making a successful effort to keep their stock fully assorted with all the latest patterns, colorings and qualities. In guipure laces they carry a full range of widths at different prices; in two-tones they have an especially large stock.

W. R. Brock & Co. have a new range of floor oilcloths in the different widths and qualities. They do not carry a very extensive stock, but enough to give their customers a good selection. They are showing a large range of spring and summer top-shirts, which has been extremely successful in catching the trade. Mills are now off this class of goods, and hence stocks are limited, a fact of which buyers should take note.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling are opening repeats of their prints in all classes. Their lines have sold exceedingly well and repeats are heavy. Linen goods are coming to hand regularly; their sales for these lines are increasing.

John Macdonald & Co. are doing a good trade in carpets, curtains, rugs, and other house furnishings. The demand for these goods at this season of the year was never better than it is at present. They have some special patterns in best Brussels which are especially suited for the better class of trade. They are showing a new rug which has the effect of the finest Axminster, but at a much cheaper price. These rugs will undoubtedly be an excellent leader for dealers in this class of goods.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling have just opened a job line of Irish Pointe laces in creams, beiges and two-tones. The prices of these are exceptionally low; they claim that these goods are 30 per cent. below regular prices. Guipures, Torcons, Valenciennes and Orientals are shown in good range. Black Chantilly laces are shown in full ranges and all qualities.

Caldecott, Burton & Spence are showing a very complete range of ladies' waterproofs. Their lines with long capes are very taking; in fact their whole exhibit is marked with freshness and fashionableness.

An enormous shipment of 2,000 dozen of absolutely stainless black ladies' and misses' cotton hose has just been received by W. R. Brock & Co. The ladies' sizes are designated "Buster," the name signifying the quality of the goods as a leader. They are full fashioned, and can be retailed 3 pairs for 50 cents.

A long range of top-shirts is shown by Caldecott, Burton & Spence. They are quoting close prices.

W. R. Brock & Co. are preparing for April showers with fresh shipments of ladies' men's and children's waterproof coats, mantles and Inverness capes. A special line of ladies' Fife mantles to retail at $1.50 is worthy of the attention of live merchants.

A phenomenal silk trade is being done by Caldecott, Burton & Spence. Their assortment has a reputation as have also their values.

W. R. Brock & Co. have just received a line of imitation celluloid collars and cuffs that they have control of on the Canadian market, and which can be retailed at 10 cents each for collars and 20 cents for cuffs per pair. The collars are called "Ohmy," the cuffs "Myoh." They are sending sample dozens to merchants at request.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling are showing some choice lines in dress trimmings in all the latest novelties.

Strap bow ties are the latest in men's neckwear, and Gordon, Mackay & Co. are showing a very handsome line in light and dark fancies, an assortment of which every merchant up to the times ought to carry.

The Eclipse brand of hosiery is sold by Wyld, Grasett & Darling. They carry an immense range, in which may be mentioned fast black, fast cardinal, fast tans and fast greys in ladies' and children's. Cardinals and tans are shown also in cashmere.

A special line of black laced kid gloves to retail at one dollar is shown by Wyld, Grasett & Darling.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. are showing two exceptionally good lines of ladies' gauntlet kid gloves in the popular brown and tan shades, also in black, which they are offering at $6.50 to $9 per doz. As this style of glove is in great demand orders should be placed early to avoid disappointment, as leading sizes are selling freely.

WRITE FOR PRICES.

[As there is often inequality in the prices of the various sellers on this market, owing to differences in buying conditions and other circumstances, and as prices are modified by both quantity and quality, the quotations given below and in our Prices Current necessarily take a wide range.]

TORONTO MARKETS.

TORONTO, March 30, 1893.
GROCERIES.

The feature of trade this week is the excited condition of the sugar market consequent upon Saturday and Monday's advances of $\frac{1}{8}$ and 1-16c. respectively. Outside that particular line business has not developed any specially new features. The movement of merchandise is still hampered by the broken condition of the roads. The markets continue to be characterized by a firm tone. Merchants are all in good spirits and regard the outlook as bright. The advance in sugars has stimulated the demand somewhat, but the volume of business doing in this commodity is still small. While coffees are at the moment quiet and steady, there is some uncertainty regarding them. In dried fruits the position remains much about the same as it has for some weeks past. The same applies to syrups and molasses. Teas are scarcely so active, although there is still what might be called a fair business doing in them. Canned goods continue in fair demand, with corn seemingly still receiving the most attention from buyers. Green fruits are picking up somewhat, and oranges and lemons are stiffening. Payments, while not bad, might be better.

COFFEES.

Quiet and steady. Business is confined to small lots for the satisfaction of immediate wants. The market is at the moment in a somewhat uncertain condition, and there is considerable difference of opinion in consequence, some holding that prices will rule higher, while others hold to the contrary. In another week or so the atmosphere will probably be clearer. In the meantime there is no speculating in large lots. There are not many good coffees on the spot and demand is light. Good Rios are still quoted at 21 to 22c.

DRIED FRUIT.

Nothing particularly new has developed during the week. Prices rule steady to firm and demand is light. The market for Valencia raisins is strong but there is not much doing in them; prices range from $4\frac{3}{4}$ to $7\frac{1}{2}$ c. the outside price being for layers. Currants continue in fairly good demand and firm at from $5\frac{3}{4}$ c. up. Prunes remain firm and in fair demand; they are quoted at $7\frac{1}{2}$ in casks and from 8c. up to 10c. in cases, the outside price being for fine cases. Dates are quiet and unchanged at $5\frac{1}{2}$ to $5\frac{3}{4}$ c.

RICE AND SPICES.

Rice continues quiet and unchanged at prices ranging from $3\frac{3}{8}$ to 10c, outside figure being for genuine Carolina; goathead, finest imported, is quoted at $5\frac{3}{4}$ to 6c.

Spices are without change. Ginger is firm at 25 to 27c. for pure Jamaican and 16 to 18c. for African.

SUGAR.

The sugar market has ruled strong and excited all week. Saturday last the refiners announced an advance of $\frac{1}{8}$ c. on all grades. On Monday evening they followed this up with another of 1-16c., making a total advance of 3-16c., and prices are firm at these figures. Even at the advance refiners will not make contracts. In consequence of the advance there has been a little more sugar selling within the last few days, but the amount of business doing in them is still small. Local wholesale houses quote granulated $\frac{1}{8}$ c. higher at $4\frac{7}{8}$ to 5c., Paris lump at $5\frac{1}{8}$ to $5\frac{3}{4}$ c., extra ground at $5\frac{3}{8}$ to 6c., powdered at $5\frac{3}{8}$ to $5\frac{1}{2}$ c.; yellows sell at from $3\frac{3}{8}$ to $4\frac{1}{4}$ c., according to quality. Prices of refined are proportionately lower in Canada than anywhere else, and refiners say that the recent advances have been made on account of higher prices in both cane and beet.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Syrups are in fair demand at steady and unchanged prices. A fair quantity was bought during the week at $3\frac{1}{4}$ c. merely to test the market, and dealers are getting from $2\frac{1}{4}$ to $3\frac{3}{4}$ c. a pound.

Demand is also fairly good for molasses, principally at prices ranging from 32 to $37\frac{1}{2}$ c. per Imperial gallon.

TEAS.

Prices firm and demand continues fairly active, although not so much so as a week or so ago. Low and medium grades seem to be still the ones most in demand, particularly for Ceylons and Assams.

According to the latest advices the London tea market continues to show a strong demand for low price grades of all kinds. Medium to fine remain neglected. A feature of the market is that as common teas harden finer teas become weaker. All the lower sorts of Indian, Chinas and Ceylons are very firm. It is worthy of special note that when really fine teas are to be had at about 2d. per lb. more than the commonest descriptions, common Congous that are barely clean are ruling at 7 to $7\frac{1}{2}$ d., common Indians and Ceylons at 8d. to $8\frac{1}{2}$ d., at the same time you can obtain teas of good quality for only 10d. to 11d. Second and 3rd Young Hyson are decidedly firmer and have shown an advance during the last week. The probability is that they will go still dearer as they are getting into small compass.

BUTTER AND CHEESE

The butter market at the moment is strong. There is a scarcity of all kinds and demand is good. About all the old stock of creamery butter that has been selling at 20c. is cleaned out. Good creamery tubs sell at from 24 to 25c. a pound, rolls at 26c., and pound prints at 27c. These prices, however, are too high for the popular taste, and what people are mostly looking for is dairy butter that sells around 20c. Good dairy tubs are quoted at 20 to 22c. and large rolls at 19 to 20c. Bakers' butter is still scarce and wanted. What they want is a low grade butter at 15c., but failing this bakers do not hesitate much about paying as high as even 20c.

The cheese market continues to rule dull. Stocks are not large, but dealers are anxious to get rid of what they have. Prices range from $11\frac{1}{2}$ to 12c. a pound, but few seem to be getting the outside figure.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—There are a few small lots moving at $1.40 to $1.45. A car of medium hand-picked in barrels was purchased jointly by some of the dealers at $1.45. Bushel lots sell at $1.50 to $1.60.

DRIED APPLES—Offerings are more liberal than for some time, while demand has fallen off. Dealers are paying 5 to $5\frac{1}{2}$ c., although there is not much inclination to pay the outside figure. Dealers' selling prices are $5\frac{1}{2}$ to $5\frac{3}{4}$ c.

EVAPORATED APPLES—There is still some enquiry heard for car lots, which are not obtainable; 9 to $9\frac{1}{2}$ c. would be paid for car lots.

EGGS—Supply was little short of the demand in the early part of the week, and the feeling was rather steadier in consequence. Demand is good at 13 to $13\frac{1}{2}$ c.

HONEY—There is no material change. Some fairly good sales of buckwheat honey in 3-lb. tins are reported at 5c., but the market continues dull. Dark is quoted in sections at 10c. White is quoted at 8c. in 50-lb. tins and at 15c. in sections.

DRESSED POULTRY—The market remains dull and unchanged. Chickens are quoted at 65 to 75c. per pair, ducks 85c. to $1 per pair, turkeys at 14c. per pound, and geese at 9 to 10c. per pound.

POTATOES—Steady and unchanged, car lots selling on track here at 85c. and bags out of store at 95 to $1.

ONIONS—Dull and easy at $1 to $1.25.

HOPS—The market is still difficult to fathom. Small lots of one, two or three bales sell at 18 to 20c. Yearlings are quoted as before at 15 to 16c. The demand is limited. Brewers have fair stocks on hand and in view of the dull market they do not appear inclined to do anything.

HOGS AND PROVISIONS.

The market for dressed hogs is dull and easy. There are not many coming in and not many are wanted. No car lots are offering. The ruling price for market hogs is $7 75, and this price would probably be paid for car lots. Hogs continue in good demand at firm prices.

BACON—Long clear $10\frac{1}{2}$ to 11c. Smoked backs are $12\frac{1}{2}$ to 13c., bellies $13\frac{1}{2}$ c., rolls 10c.

HAMS—In good demand and firm at 13 to $13\frac{1}{2}$ c.

LARD—Pure Canadian is $13\frac{1}{4}$ c. in tubs, and $13\frac{1}{2}$ c. in pails. Compound $10\frac{1}{2}$ to 11c.

BARREL PORK—U. S. heavy mess is $20.00 to $20.50. Canadian short cut $22. Canadian heavy mess $20 to $21.

DRESSED MEATS—Beef forees are $4\frac{1}{2}$ to $5\frac{1}{2}$ c., hindquarters 7 to $8\frac{1}{4}$ c., veal $6\frac{1}{2}$ to 8c., mutton 7 to 8c., lamb 8c. to $8\frac{1}{2}$ c.

GREEN FRUIT.

The weather of the past week has rather favored the green fruit trade and business is a little more active in consequence. Demand for oranges is good and prices have appreciated for Valencias, while Floridas are scarce. The market for lemons is stiffening for good desirable stock, especially for 300's, which size is scarce. Bananas are in good demand and supply is fair. We quote Valencia oranges at $3.00 to $5.50 per case, Jamaicas $2.50 to $2.75 per box, Floridas $3 to $3.75 per box, Palermos $2.50 per box; Messinas $3 to $3.25 per case; lemons $3.50 for 300's and $3.25 for 360's. Bananas $1.50 to $2.25; pineapples 20 to 30c.,

"KENT" Bottled Pickles

FISH AND OYSTERS.

This being the last week of the Lenten season trade shows increased activity. Supply is good. About the only change in prices is a decline of $\frac{1}{2}$ c. on haddock, which is quoted at $5\frac{1}{2}$ c. Oysters are lower and about one half of the dealers here have stopped handling them for the season. We quote as follows: 7 to $7\frac{1}{2}$ c. for trout and ordinary whitefish, $7\frac{1}{2}$ c. for Manitoba whitefish, $4\frac{1}{2}$ c. per lb. or \$3 per hundred for frozen Lake herring, \$2.50 per hundred for frozen sea herring, 10c. for mackerel, 13c. for B.C. frozen salmon, and 17c. for fresh ditto, 5 to 7c. for smelts, $5\frac{1}{2}$ c. for haddock, 4 to $4\frac{1}{2}$ c. for market cod, 9c. for steak cod, 5c. for flounders, $6\frac{1}{2}$ c. for skinned and boned codfish, \$3 per half bbl. for Labrador herring, \$2.75 per half bbl. for shore herring, 11 to $12\frac{1}{2}$ c. for Digby herring, 4c. for boneless fish, 7 to 8c. for boneless cod, 7c. for pike, 7c. for pickerel; ciscoes \$1.50 to \$1.75 a hundred, black bass 10 to $12\frac{1}{2}$ c. a pound; finnan haddie, 9c.; oysters, \$1.25 for stds., and \$1.75 selects.

HIDES, SKINS, WOOL, TALLOW.

HIDES—Market unchanged, carlots moving as before at $5\frac{1}{4}$ c.; No. 1 cows' is quoted at $4\frac{1}{2}$ c. Demand is good and supply is about as usual at this season.

SKINS—There is not much doing in sheepskins; supply has fallen off and nobody is anxious to buy and prices are easy, $1.40 being the outside figure. The supply of calfskins is increasing but demand is good and prices higher at 8c.

WOOL—There is a fair demand from the factories, chiefly for small lots. There is no speculative tendency and prices are steady. Reports from the Old Country markets speak of an advance of 10 per cent. in some grades of fine wool. Pulled wools unchanged at 22 to 23c. for supers and at 26 to 27c. for extras. No. 1 and black are unchanged at 20 to 21c.

TALLOW—The market is easier. There is not much business doing, views of buyers and sellers being apart. Dealers are selling odd barrel lots of rendered at $7\frac{1}{2}$ c., but much less would be taken for carlots; they are paying $6\frac{1}{2}$ c. Rough is $\frac{1}{2}$ c. lower at $2\frac{1}{2}$ c.

SEEDS

A good active business is being done in all lines and prices are without material change. Red clover is being jobbed out at $8.60 to $9.50. A fair jobbing trade is being done in alsike at prices ranging from $5.50 to $8.50, the outside price being for fancy seed. Prices for timothy range from $2.40 to $2.90, the outside figure being for flail threshed and unhulled, but the chief demand is for the prime to choice article, which is being jobbed at $2.50 to $2.65.

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.

The position remains much about the same as a week ago. Demand keeps fairly good and prices firm. Tomatoes still sell at 90c. to $1, and demand is fairly good at these prices. Further enquiries are reported from England, but the ideas across the Atlantic are still too low for dealers on this side. Peas are in good demand and firm at 90c. to $1. Corn is in active demand this week at prices ranging from 90c. to $1.25. Some jobbing houses are making enquiries for lots of corn to replenish their stocks. The salmon situation is strong. Stocks are lighter, but demand at the same time is light. There is no particular feature, in fact there is no movement to create it. Lobster for the season is in good demand, that is for the better grades. Prices are firm and likely to remain so; they range from $2 to $2.10 for talls and finest quality and $2.50 for flats. Canned peaches are getting scarcer, and demand is good. The range of prices is $2.10 to $2.25 for 2's, $3.25 to $3.75 for 3's. Canned apples are being more enquired after, and stocks of these too are getting low. Prices are firm and range from 85c. to $1 for 3's and gallons from $2 to $2.25. Stocks of all fruits are on the light side and prices are firm with demand fair.

MONTREAL.

So far as spot business is concerned the canned goods market is extremely dull. Several large sales of salmon are reported for future delivery at \$4.40 to \$4.50 at the coast, which with freight means \$5.10 or \$5.20 delivered here, or \$1.27 $\frac{1}{2}$ to \$1.30 per dozen. Dealers came to an agreement Friday last also not to sell Canadian sardines at less than \$5, which it is hoped will put a stop to the wholesale cutting which has been going on of late. Corn, beans and peaches are lower, but prices are somewhat nominal.

TORONTO MARKET NOTES.

Granulated sugar is quoted higher at 4½ to 5c.

China teas were a little lower at last sale in New York.

Marbot walnuts are higher in Bordeaux and good quality is about exhausted.

Gold medal washed Turkey figs, in bags about 6 pounds, finest grade crown, are selling at 6c.

Sloan & Crowther have just received a carload of Bowlby's preserved apples in fancy quarters.

T. Kinnear & Co. have a few barrels of Labrador herrings, which they are offering at lower prices.

Carlo, Neemack & Co., of Leghorn, advise P. L. Mason & Co. that indications point to lower prices in candied peels this season.

Smith & Keighley have worked off a considerable quantity of raw sugars in bags at 3½c. as a result of the higher prices on refined.

Clemes Bros. are receiving two carloads of Uncas brand of Florida oranges. The fruit is fancy, heavy and juicy and sells at $3 to $3.75 according to size.

New maple syrun is expected to arrive on this market next week. In the meantime last year's make is selling fairly well at 75 to 85c., the inside price being for large lots.

There seems to be quite a difference of local opinion regarding the condition of the market for evaporated apples, but most reliable information goes to show that the "bull" interest have the best of the argument. The "bears," however, are pounding the market vigorously.—N. Y. Bulletin.

Gorman, Eckart & Co., London, Ont., in order to introduce their fine quality of baking powder are presenting each customer with a fine steel engraving or an etching for every pound purchased. They report large sales. The orders booked in one week for one-lb. tins only was five tons, or 10,000 tins. Send them a trial order.

Jas. A. Skinner & Co., Toronto, report that owing to orders coming in so rapidly for the New Era Glassware from all points of the Dominion, that they have, up to the present, been unable to fill all orders promptly, but as the manufacturers have put out extra hands, they hope in another week to be able to supply the demand.

Grocers requiring an assortment of brooms for the spring trade will find a large variety to select from in the different lines manufactured by the well-known firm of Chas. Boeckh & Sons, Toronto. The brushes and brooms made by them are well known throughout the Dominion, both to the trade and consumers, and their goods are always reliable and as represented. Special attention is given to the grading of their stock, and their lines are suitable for every class of trade, from those requiring extra fine carpet brooms down to the common grades for ordinary house or factory use. The workmanship is guaranteed to be first-class in every particular and their brooms are always of uniform size, weight and quality. Dealers will recognize the value of having reliable brands which they can always depend upon. Orders sent through any of the leading wholesale houses will be promptly filled, and buyers should specify Boeckh's brushes and brooms. A price list, fully illustrated, showing the various lines manufactured by this firm, will be sent by mail on application, and special attention is given to letter orders.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

MONTREAL, March 30, 1893.

GROCERIES.

Business in general groceries is quiet for the reason that most buyers have supplied themselves pretty well for shipment after the 3rd of April when freight rates are reduced. The country roads in this and some other sections also are not settled yet, and on the whole it is a sort of interim spell. There is nothing very new in the conditions either, values generally ruling steady, while it is said that the sugar refineries have decided not to do any further business on the decline mentioned last week, but stipulate for the former price. It is possible, however, that round lots have been moved this week at the concession. Coffee rules firm and is scarce, while tea is quiet on the whole, but the firm position of values is fully maintained. In molasses Barbadoes has declined to 12c. first cost at the Island. With Lent almost over the fish market is dropping into dullness, while canned goods rule dull, but considerable activity is to note in salmon for future delivery. Dealers have also agreed on a uniform price for Canadian sardines, with a view of stopping the cutting.

SUGAR.

Advices to brokers here quote the raw sugar market firm and refined as strong in New York. In fact sugar has been selling for less proportionately on this market than anywhere else, and refiners say they will accept no more orders at the concession mentioned last week, but it is possible that a round lot could be had still at 49-16c. Yellows are quiet and unchanged.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Good bright syrups are in fairly good demand. American selling at 18c. to 21c. and Canadian at 13-4c. to 2c. per pound.

There is very little business doing in spot in molasses, in fact, practically all the stock has been closed out. Prices now rule at 30c. A decline of 1c. is reported in Barbadoes at the Islands, the latest quotation being 12c., which is about 29c. here. Between 4,000 and 5,000 puncheons have been sold on this basis.

TEA.

The market has been quiet during the week between jobbers, no large lots having changed hands, still there has been a fair amount of orders received from the country, and sales of Japans are reported at 12 1-2c. to 14c. for low grade, 14 1-2c. to 18c. for good common to medium, 19 1-2c. to 21c. for fine, and 23 1-2c. to 31 1-2c. for finest. Black teas are steady, and several invoices have been sold on English account at 7 1-2d. to 1s. 1-2d. Greens are in fair request at steady prices.

COFFEE AND SPICES.

The coffee market remains very firm, and most of the offerings have been picked up at about last week's prices. Very little if any Rio can be had under 20c., and we quote 19c. to 21c., Maracaibo firm at 20 1-2c. to 22c., and Java and Mocha 24c. to 28c. These prices are for wholesale quantities.

Spices remain firm, and we quote black pepper 8c. to 9c., Pimento 6 1-2, and nutmegs firm at 50c. and 52 1-2c. to $1.

RICE.

The rice market does not show any change of importance, a fair jobbing movement being reported at unchanged

FLOUR AND FEED.

TORONTO.

The flour market continues to rule dull and easy. Feed is offering more freely, and prices are easier in consequence.

FLOUR.—City millers' and dealers' prices are: Manitoba patents, $4.35 to $4.50; strong bakers' $3.85 to $4.10; white wheat patents, $3.50 to $3.75; straight roller, $3.15 to $3.30, low grades, per bag, $1.00 to $1.25; Ontario family $3.35 to $3.85.

Car prices are: Toronto freights—Manitoba patents, $4.30 to $4.50; Manitoba strong bakers' $3.90 to $4.25; Ontario patents, $3.25 to $3.50; straight roller, $3.00 to $3.20; extra, $2.90 to $3.00; low grades, per bag, $1.10 to $1.25.

MEAL—Oatmeal is $4.00. to $4.20 Cornmeal is $3.25 to $3.50.

FEED—Bran (ton lots) $17, ditto (on track) $15.50, shorts (ton lots) $17 to $18; mixed feed $20 to $22, feeding corn 57 to 58c., oats 33½ to 34½c.

HAY—Baled timothy, demand is good and supply fair at $9.25 to $9.50.

STRAW—Plentiful and demand limited, at $5.50 to $6.

MONTREAL.

The flour market is dull and quiet, while quotations are more or less nominal for business here. We quote as follows: Winter wheat $4.00 to $4.25; spring patents $4.25 to $4.35; straight rollers $3.50 to $3.75; extra $3.10 to $3.25; superfine $2.60 to $2.90; city strong bakers' $4 to $4.15; strong bakers' $3.90 to $4.00.

DRIED FRUIT.

The market for dried fruit is quiet and unchanged. Stocks are moderate and prices well sustained in the absence of demand.

FISH.

The fish market is quiet. Stocks generally are small. Haddocks are in fair request. We quote: Haddock, 4c. to 4 1-2c.; lake trout, 7c.; whitefish, 7c. to 7 1-2c.; pickerel and dore, 9c.; dried cod, $5.50; No. 1 green cod, $7; Labrador salmon, $13 to $14; No. 2 mackerel, $12; do. halves, $7; C. B. and N. S. herring, $4.50 to $4.75; fresh herring, $2 to $2.20 per hundred; haddies, 7 1-2c. to 8c.; Yarmouth bloaters, $1.50 to $2; frozen mackerel, 7c. to 8c.

BEANS.

Stocks of beans are much reduced, and prices are higher in consequence at $1.60 to $1.65 for choice, and $1.25 to $1.50 for ordinary.

HONEY.

Honey is dull and unchanged at 12 1-2 to 13c. for comb, extracted 5 to 7c.

MAPLE SYRUP.

A few cases of new stock are arriving and sell at $1 per gallon. Old sells at 50c. to 60c.

HOPS.

Hops are dull and easy on time at 15c. to 18c., and growers are consigning with freedom in hope of a sale.

POTATOES.

There has been a steady demand for potatoes, but prices are somewhat easier, although receipts still run light. The softening factor is the prospect of several large lots arriving from the west. We now quote 95c. to $1.05 in car lots.

EGGS.

The egg market shows further easiness as compared with a week ago. We quote 15c. as the top.

BUTTER.

Butter is quiet and steady. We quote as follows: Choice fall creamery, 23c.; creamery seconds, 21c. to 22c.; Townships dairy, 21c. to 23c.; Morrisburg and Brockville, 20c. to 22c.; Kamouraska stock, 00 to 20c.; Western, 20c.

TO EXTEND THE USE OF CRANBERRIES.

A meeting of the Cape Cod Cranberry Growers' Association was held at Middleborough, Wednesday. The principal object of the meeting was the discussion of "The Foreign Market." The association proposes to make a display at the World's Fair, and it was also proposed to present the principal restaurants and hotels at the Fair with a supply of berries to be served guests free of charge. An agreement is being largely signed whereby growers will place three per cent. of their three years' crop in the hands of a committee, who will introduce them into foreign markets, together with pamphlets telling their use and preparation. Thus far three per cent of nearly 300,000 barrels have been pledged. More definite action will be taken at the annual meeting in Middleborough in July.

THE RAGE FOR CHEAPNESS.

In an editorial comment upon the manner in which the English food laws are enforced the London Grocers' Chronicle discusses "the rage for cheapness" as a potent cause of the prevalence of adulteration in the grocery trade. It says:

The public, especially the poorer classes, want cheap provisions, and the grocer, in his eagerness to supply the demand, buys goods of a quality that can be sold at low price. Indeed, as we have seen over and over again, he even sells below cost price, as he says, to cope with the competition round him. To take only a few instances: There is a large demand for tenpenny and shilling coffee. It must be abundantly clear to any who will consider the matter, that they cannot buy the pure article at such a price, so a mixture of coffee and chicory is produced, which can be sold at such prices, and yet when the seller is summoned, he is most uncertain how the magistrate will decide the case, it very often depending, as Alderman Barrow once said, upon his lordship's liver. Again, a grocer is often asked for sixpenny or eightpenny cocoa. Such an article cannot be sold pure at that price, and so we have prepared cocoa and chocolate powder, manufactured articles, to meet this demand, but the inspector pounces down and tried to get a conviction against the seller, for, as he says, selling to the prejudice of the purchaser, when the latter ought to know that he can only get quality by paying a fair price.

Then again there is our old friend, margarine, which we are glad to see the Glasgow Wholesale Provision Dealers' Association is so vigorously defending against another threatened attack. Now it ought to be and, no doubt, is well known that eightpenny, tenpenny and shilling butter cannot be obtained in winter time, and yet we are safe, we believe, in saying that in working class districts particularly not one-half the purchasers ask for margarine. They do not like the name, and so they ask for butter even though they do not pay butter price. The fact is, in these and similar goods which rang among the necessities of life, certain classes of consumers cannot afford to pay the price for the genuine article, and fall back on cheap substitutes, but persist in applying the names of the originals when asking for them. The provision dealer and the grocer know this state of affairs exists. They cannot afford either the time or the risk of offence which the continual explanations would cost, and so they have to go on selling with the haunting dread of being trapped by some "wily" inspector, and then lectured by the magistrate and fined. We must confess we are not quite prepared to say that the law can be amended so as to prevent such unfair prosecutions, and certainly no amendment could be proposed to check inspectors, whose ingenuity and cunning will always find means of laying traps to catch the unwary, even though innocent traders, unless it be the total abolition of inspectors—a proposal which we fear is too late in the day now that the world appears to be fast resolving itself into two classes of persons, the inspectors and the inspected. And yet the grievance is a very real and common one. The public demand a low-priced article, and know they get fair value for their outlay, but enterprise in supplying that demand often leads to the police court.

This rage for cheapness is not peculiar to European countries, but exists in the United States, and explains the attitude of the retail grocers of the State of Ohio on the pure food question. The fact that it does not exist here also furnishes the trade with a good excuse for objecting to pure food legislation which does not recognize the responsibility of either the consumer, the manufacturer or the jobber, but makes the retailer the scapegoat, demanding from him a vigilance that is impossible and a degree of intelligence and skill that only the educated chemist or highly paid expert can supply.

But while we oppose oppressive and unfair laws for the prevention of the sale of adulterated food, we advise retail grocers not to weakly surrender to the demands of the public for cheap and inferior goods, but to use every opportunity to elevate the standard of quality, if only by infinitesimal degrees, until a better grade of goods is universally demanded. There are three courses open to the dealer. First, he can adopt a neutral attitude, selling the kinds of goods that are demanded, without seeking either to raise or lower the standard of quality. Second, he can stimulate the rage for cheapness by offering cheaper and still cheaper goods, excusing his course with the plea of irresistible competition. Third, he can push the sale of better goods, pointing out their greater relative cheapness, and thus prove a benefactor to his species as well as a most sagacious and far-sighted merchant. The first plan is that which is followed by most small grocers in the large cities. Many grocers, especially the city cash dealers, adopt the second course of action, and are responsible for much of the adulteration that exists, their orders for inferior goods forming a solid foundation for the businesses of a number of manufacturers of proprietary brands of undoubted purity and merit, who are not above putting up goods for retailers under labels of the bogus order. The third plan may appear to be impracticable, but there are few really first class retail grocery businesses of many years' existence in which it is not followed, and it is to the steady adherence to this system of doing business that the success of the leading retail grocers of the country is chiefly due. Disregard the rage for inferior goods, and other things being equal, the foundations of a large and profitable business can be laid. Succumb to it, and you fill a position which any person of moderate capital and inexperience can occupy equally well, and one which forces you into competition upon equal terms with dealers who have no special claim upon the public and whose business careers are with few exceptions, of the briefest.—Merchants' Review.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mrs. William Parkkill continues to improve.

George Musson has returned from New York where he has been on a business trip.

The wife of E. J. Henry, grocer, 781 Queen street west, who has been ill for some weeks, is convalescing.

J. Outhet, butcher, 748 Queen street,, is away, and some of his friends are anxious to learn his whereabouts.

Inflammation and congestion was the cause of the death of James Bielby, grocer, Dundas street, which occurred last week. His death was sudden. Mr. Bielby had been in business on Dundas street for several years.

Mrs. Forman, Rainham, Halton county, is dead. Deceased was the mother of C. F. Forman, grocer, of Vancouver, B.C., and of John and A. O. Forman of this city.

Mr. C. C. McPhaden, one of Cannington's progressive merchants, was in the city last week. He reports business quiet in North Ontario, and that the farmers are complaining about the low prices they are getting for everything except clover and pork.

W. Matthews, Toronto, agent for Nixey's, London, has received samples of blue and knife polish which he will show to the trade in Western Ontario shortly. His Nixey's black lead has long had a name for itself in Canada for its excellence, and this should greatly assist the sale of those products of this firm which are new to this market.

The Y.M.C.A. quartet, of which R. M. Corrie, secretary of the Retail Grocers' Association, is leading tenor, sang on Sunday last in the Metropolitan church during the service that was being conducted by Crossley & Hunter. The daily papers spoke highly of the quartet's performance.

Deputy Reeve Caldwell, Barrie, of the "Star" grocery in that town, spent a few days in the city last week.

A DRUMMER'S DIFFICULTIES.

The following amusing sketch of a rehearsal scene between a Yankee "drummer" or commercial traveller, and one of his employers, is extracted from the Boston Commercial Bulletin: One of these gentlemen, who has recently returned from a trip for Thistle & Co., of this city, did not show a very large exhibit of orders to balance the liberal 'expense' account allowed him by the firm, and Mr. Thistle, after looking over his returns, said: "Mr. Rataplan, I am afraid you did not approach the dealers in the right way. I used to be very successful in this line. Now, just suppose me to be Mr. Bigher, of Sellout, Illinois, and show me the way you introduce the house." Accordingly Rataplan stepped out of the counting room, and re-entered, hat in hand, enquiring, "Is Mr. Bigher in?" "That is my name," answered Thistle, urbanely. "My name is Rataplan, sir. I represent the house of Thistle Brothers & Co., of Boston." Thistle, in his character of western merchant, here rose, offered the salesman a chair, and expressed his pleasure at meeting him. "I am stopping with Overcharge at Stickemhouse, and have a fine unbroken lot of samples which I should like to show you. I think we can offer you some special advantages," etc., Rataplan delivering himself in a neat little speech in professional style. "Very well, very well," said Thistle, "I don't see but that you understand the way to get customers." "Excuse me, Mr. Thistle," said Rataplan, "I am afraid you do not understand the style of western merchants. Just now suppose you exchange places with me, and we repeat the rehearsal." "Certainly," said Thistle, and, picking up his hat, he stepped out. Returning, he found Rataplan with his chair tilted back, hat cocked fiercely over his right eye, his heels planted on Thistle's polished desk, and a lighted cigar between his teeth. Thistle looked a little staggered, but, nevertheless, he commenced: "Is Mr. Bigher in?" "Yes he is," responded Rataplan, blowing a cloud of pure Connecticut into Thistle's eyes; "who the deuce are you?" "I represent the house of Thistle Brothers & Co.," said the astonished employer, coughing about a quart of smoke from his throat. "Are you of that concern, then?" "No, sir, I'm not," said Thistle. "Well, it's lucky for you that you are not, for I've had two drummers to one customer in my store for the last two months; and if I could get hold of one of the fools that sent 'em out here at this time I'm darned if I wouldn't boot 'em clean out of the town of Sellout." "That'll do, that'll do," Mr. Rataplan, said Thistle. "I have no doubt you did the best you could for the interest of the house. Trade is a little dull."

NICK-NACKS IN THE GROCERY STORE.

There are a good many articles of small intrinsic value which the average city grocer could easily put in stock, but does not, perhaps, because the idea has never occurred to him, and which would be of great assistance in meeting the competition of dry goods bazaars. There is no need to enumerate such goods; a visit to any dry goods store of large dimensions will furnish the grocer with the required information, and he would discover that the list is quite large. We mean articles that take up little room, that do not present too startling a contrast to groceries, yet sell almost on sight and afford a fair profit.—Ex.

TRADE SALES.

The stock of Stickles & McBride, general storekeepers, Lisle, was sold at 65c. on the $ to J. P. McKay, of Toronto. The stock of John Smillie, tailor, Queen street west, was sold to Nicholas Smillie for 62½c. on the dollar.

It is rumored that the new postmaster general of the United States will require all newly appointed postmasters to devote the whole of their time to the business of their offices. In the States as here, country post-offices are usually conducted by general storekeepers.

WHAT HAVE YOU FOR SALE?

Have you something that will go off like hot cakes? Look about you for quick articles that will be snapped up the moment they are offered.

That's the stuff you want—something which you can get in early and which will have a splendid run. Booksellers made a great deal of money out of Gen. Grant's book. So many families were hungry for it, and the salesman who got up with the sun and started out early for orders came home handsomely repaid for his venture. Some books are slow, others are fast. The same thing is true of men. He has a gift who can figure out now what is going to be in demand months hence. The smart journalist is ready with a big cheque for early information which will astound when made public. It is understood that the office is always ready to pay well for all early information; so the thing comes to them, and next morning they have its exclusive use. They have something for sale which none of their competitors have. They control the market. Gould, they say, used to pay liberally for secrets which enabled him to "get there" before the other fellow. The first and most important question with all trades should be: Will these goods sell if I take them? Can I turn them over quickly at a profit? Styles and fashions are very short lived, and the short seasons whimsical. The motto is, "Quick or you'll miss it." Unfortunately, everything one buys does not go off like hot cakes or go up in price. Many things stay, stick and torment—easy to buy and hard to sell. The traders who are here are numerous. This nation and others spend a good deal of money in the secret service business. To be well posted they pay largely. With the individual it isn't very much different. We have to be on the watch or our enemies will tumble us and trample us under foot. Trade and competition are so cruel. No one is figuring specially for your prosperity. There is a wise way of looking out for number one. There is no sin in thinking and planning for to-morrow. If you buy a pig in a poke you'll rue it. Be careful. Be on the lookout for bargains that have the go in them. An author writes twenty books. Only one of them had the hot cake stir in it. The demand was universal. You get hold if you can of the universal articles. Trade in them.

"Never pass my door," said a city man once to a farmer, "when you have more of those good turnips for sale." They were the best we ever had on our table, and his butter and eggs were also number one. Here the demand was greater than the supply, and the sales were quick. This farmer doesn't need to linger in the market the most of the day offering his produce. Once bought and tasted his goods were wanted evermore. He has the trick. You can cash his bill. Just imitate him, that's all.—The Michigan Tradesman.

SUGAR WEATHER.

When snowballs pack on the horses' hoofs
And the wind from the south blows warm,
When the cattle stand where the sunbeams beat

And the moon has a dreamy charm;
When icicles crash from the dripping eaves.
And the furrows peep black through the snow.

Then I hurry away to the sugar bush.
For the sap will run, I know.

With auger and axe and spile and trough
To each tree a visit I pay.
And every boy in the countryside
Is eager to help to-day.

We roll the backlogs into their place,
And the kettles between them swing,
Then gather the wood for the roaring fire
And the sap in pailfuls bring

A fig for your arches and modern ways,
A fig for your sheet-iron pan,
I like the smoky old kettles best,
And I stick to the good old plan.
We're going to make sugar and taffy to-night
On the swing pole under the tree,
And the girls and boys for miles around
Are all sworn friends to me

The hens are cackling again in the barn.
And the cattle beginning to bawl.
And neighbors, who long have been acting cool

Now make a forgiving call.
For there's no love feast like a taffy pull,
With its hearty and sticky fun.
And I know the whole world's at peace with me,
For the sap has commenced to run.

P. MCARTHUR.

TRICKS IN TRADE.

Now, for instance, let us suppose you have put up $10 on ten shares of Manhattan. Forty-nine other customers have done the same. That makes $500 in the bucket shop.

Manhattan is a fairly lively stock, we'll say, and it closes several points higher than it opened, yet you and your fellows in misfortune lose.

How is that?

Simple enough, my dear fellow. The bucket shop man goes to a member of the stock exchange and tells him that it will be worth his while to break the price of Manhattan one point.

The broker quietly sells 100 shares of Manhattan at one point below the opening price, regardless of the fact that it has since risen one point. This transaction cost him $200, or two points a share. The bucket shop man pays him this and $100 more for his trouble. Thus the bucket shop man loses $300. Subtract that from his $500 and you see he is still $200 ahead. Had he allowed the prices to go their course he would have had to return to the customers their $500 and $1,000 more, but the quotations on the ticker show his broker's transaction and so the customers can't kick when their margin is wiped out.

TO SMOKE HAMS.

First smoke a barrel thoroughly, as follows: Place a barrel over a pan of coals, keeping a smouldering fire of cobs, from six to eight hours, for a strong smoke. Smoke for four hours if you do not like strong-smoked hams. Prepare a brine as follows: For thirty pounds of meat take two pounds of salt, one and a half ounces of saltpeter, one pound of brown sugar, pepper and other seasoning if wished. Cover your hams with this brine in the smoked barrel, and at the end of four weeks your hams are ready for use, smoked evenly throughout and with no waste. Place a weight on the hams to keep them under brine, and they are good all summer. If they are not kept in a very cool place in hot weather, scald and skim your brine, and when cool pour over the hams again.

THE CURRANT POSITION.

The following is the report of one of the largest currant merchants, dated Patras, March 10, and will show the position of the market at that time:

"Owing to the severe financial crisis which has affected our market during the past month, and to the constant fluctuations in the rate of exchange, business has been very difficult to combine. Shipments have only amounted to about 3,000 tons, the principal portion of which has gone to the north of France, whence a fair demand has prevailed at about 33.50 to 34.50 fcs. c.i.f. per 100 kilos. About 15,000 to 18,000 tons still remain in Greece, mostly French Staple, and it is expected that the best portion of this stock will find its way to France during the next six months. With the United Kingdom a little business has been done on the basis of 15s. to 15s. 6d. c.i.f. for good average Provincials in cases. The United States have bought nothing during the past month, but the north of Europe has operated to some extent in Provincials and Pyrgos at 15s. to 15s. 3d. c.i.f. barrels, Island fruit at from 17s. to 17s. 6d. c.i.f. barrels, and has also taken the last lot of Patras remaining on this side at from 21s. 6d. to 23s. 6d. c.i.f. cases. The quantity shipped up to date to the United Kingdom, as compared with last year, shows a decrease of 11,000 tons, and it is therefore to be expected that a better demand will prevail during the coming spring in the London and Liverpool markets. The French Senate has the currant bill under discussion, and it is expected that this will pass, and bring about a greater development of the currant trade with that country.

Unpromising indeed is the outlook for the currant growers of Greece. And a variety of influences seem to be working together to make certain what is almost assured. On the Island of Zante the conditions are particularly unfavorable. Last season the terrible little insect peronospora, played sad havoc with the currant crop, and most of the 15,000 tons or thereabouts that now remain is of poor quality. To still further increase the misery of the inhabitants the Island has been visited by earthquakes that are estimated to have damaged property to the extent of some two and a half million dollars, one half the towns being destroyed. It is now a question whether growers will be able to find men enough to cultivate their vineyards for the coming season. The condition on the mainland can scarcely be said to be any better than it is on the islands. There it is expected that the attack of the peronospora will be renewed, and that the crop will turn out worse than even last year. Now the country is also passing through a financial crisis, and banks and capitalists are not disposed to make advances to currant growers, and on the mainland, as on some of the islands, it looks as if not a few of the vineyards will be left to take care of themselves. Unfortunately it takes a much longer period to undo than to do the damage caused by the peronospora. A gentleman who is somewhat of an authority on such matters informs THE GROCER that it will take some years, it being, as a rule, necessary to graft on new shoots. It is the general opinion among the trade that currants are at the moment pretty good property.

Some retail grocers seem to have lost sight of the fact that they are in business to make money. In the race for patronage they fix their eyes on the customer just as the runner does his on the tape measure which he is striving to breast first. It is a storekeeper's duty to get all the customers he can, but it is possible to pay too dearly for them as well as for experience. When there is too much eagerness to obtain the patronage of this and that consumer there is a tendency to overlook two important things. When a man goes into business for himself it is with the purpose of making a living. And in order to make a living he must have profit. This is one of the things that sometimes seems to be forgotten. A grocer should try to make a profit on everything he sells. Of course there are times when with certain goods of a perishable nature it may be necessary to sell them at a sacrifice in order to prevent incurring a total loss. But the same plea will not suffice to justify the selling of soap, sugar, and other such staple lines at or even below cost. Not only does it demoralize trade, but the practice is unjust both to himself and to his creditors. The other thing often lost sight of is in regard to discriminating as to who shall and who shall not be given credit. It is better to have a small and profitable business than a large and unprofitable one, and to have one good paying than half a dozen bad paying customers.

The action of the Toronto City Council in referring back to the Property Committee the report recommending a two-thirds decrease in the license fee, and removing restrictions as to street limitations necessitates the work being gone over afresh. And the Property Committee resumed its share of the burden last week. But the report it will recommend to the Executive is changed, and that materially, from that previously submitted. In the first report the Council was asked to make the fee on one-horse rigs $10 instead of $30 as at present, and to disallow the restrictions preventing hawking in the centre of the city. Now they propose to make the fee $20 and to allow the restrictions to remain in force. Since the committee conceived the idea of reducing pedlars' licenses some of its members have apparently received a little education regarding the subject, it having taken no less than eight divisions to carry the motion favoring a reduction in the fee. Why the fee should be interfered with at all is not plain. The privileges secured for $30 are cheap from more points than one, and the pedlars, if they only knew it, are injuring themselves by advocating lower fees. The Council will probably deal with the matter on Monday night.

The condition of the hotels in some rural districts is anything but satisfactory. And commercial travellers, more than any other class of the travelling public, know it to their sorrow. In one the sample-room accommodation is inadequate; in another the lavatory probably consists of nothing better than a pump, a dirty pail, and a towel as black as coal. In others the sanitary condition is bad by reason of the filth that abounds. Here and there the food supplied the table is bad, and the sleeping accommodation on a par with it. The bar, it is almost needless to say, is usually well supplied. The responsibility for this condition of affairs lies largely with the license inspectors. The Government regulations call for certain conveniences to the travelling public in order to secure a license, but that these seldom obtain is evident to everyone who has occasion to "put up" at a rural hotel. Even "in towns and villages of respectable size there is often a lack of proper accommodation. Patience has long ceased to be a virtue with the commercial travellers. Some time ago the Commercial Travellers' Association of Canada took the matter up and decided to lay their case before the Ontario Government. In pursuance of this plan a deputation waited upon the Provincial Treasurer, Hon. Mr. Harcourt, a few weeks ago, and how well it presented its case may be gathered from the fact that last week instructions were sent out to all license inspectors to more rigidly enforce the regulations. The commercial travellers may just as well, however, disabuse their minds of any idea they may have that there will be anything more than an isolated improvement here and there. Experience teaches this. Now that the Government has stirred up the inspectors, the "commercials" should see that the inspectors stir up the hotel-keepers and specify instances where they do not. They now seem to have got the ear of the Government, and they should not hesitate to make good use of it.

Toronto needs a fruit market. Long before it became the fruit centre that it now is was the want felt. More than once have the fruit men started an agitation for one, and more than once have they been on the point of securing the desideratum. Another of these periodical agitations has again materialized, and one day last week a deputation representing wholesalers and growers waited on the Property Committee of the City Council asking for the establishment of a fruit market. What is desired is a market that would be both adjacent to the railways and to the steamboats, and it seems that the fruit men have in view such a site just west of the foot of Yonge street. It is owned by the city, and is no doubt the best obtainable for the purpose, and there would be no need of curtailing the space for there is room enough and to spare.

The Patrons of Industry are extending their operations in the Province of Quebec. The Grand Trustee was in Montreal a few days ago negotiating with salt dealers for the supply of Liverpool salt to all the associations of Eastern Ontario. How easily some people can be gulled may be gathered from the fact that the Patrons around Belleville alone recently contracted to take 5,000 barrels of salt a year for three years!

ADVANCE IN STARCH.

An all round advance of about one cent per pound is announced in starch. An agreement between the manufacturers seems to be the cause. Something like a year ago the understanding between the three manufacturers in the Dominion fell through on account of one of the parties to it selling direct to retailers instead of through the wholesale houses as formerly. From then until the present each was for himself. Now they appear to be acting in unison again. At any rate the notice issued Thursday of last week withdrawing quotations was signed by the three manufacturers, and all were of one mind in regard to announcing an advance.

"There has been a loss on almost all lines of starch made by the Canadian factories since the agreement fell through last year," said a Front street man to THE GROCER, "and they found it absolutely necessary to recover this. Today's prices are not higher than those charged prior to the break in the agreement," he concluded.

These are the manufacturers concerned in the agreement: The British America Starch Company, Brantford; Edwardsburg Starch Company, Montreal, and the St. Lawrence Starch Company, Port Credit. The list just issued is subject to change without notice, and freight is prepaid on ten-box lots assorted.

CHATS WITH BUSINESS MEN.

"Yes," said E. G. Williams, of Warren Bros. & Boomer, to me Saturday as he tucked away his samples, "the roads are still in a terrible condition. Yesterday I was driving in four feet of snow, and sometimes the wheels would be right down to the hubs in the ruts. Occasionally you'll strike a place where you'll find a little sleighing, but it's rare I can tell you. How do I find trade? Oh, not so bad. One thing I know, and that is that a good many who were careless about buying sugar a few weeks ago are now getting anxious," he concluded as he closed his valise with a click and placed it on a stool with a thud as if to emphasize what he said.

"I was just thinking," said a coffee man to me Saturday as he emerged from his lavatory, towel in hand, "of the peculiarities of the coffee consumers of this country. Now up among the German population of Waterloo and Berlin, and in the Mennonite and Icelandic settlements in the North-west Brazilian coffees are most used. They like strong coffee, and I can tell you they know how to make it. They buy their coffee green, and do their own roasting and grinding. In the cities the people go in more for mixtures and the milder grades of coffees. They won't go to the trouble of roasting and grinding. Oh, pshaw, city folks don't know what good coffee is," he added, giving his hands a vigorous rub and throwing the towel over his shoulder.

Saturday I ran against a gentleman who is interested in the Lakeport Preserving Company. "I might tell you," said he in answer to a query, "that our manager, H. J. Matthews, has just returned from a trip down through the Eastern and Maritime Provinces, and he says that dealers generally are pretty well cleaned out of canned goods, and that"—

"What kind of canned goods? All kinds?" I interposed.

"Just such kinds as these," he replied, as he adjusted his specs, drew a sheet of paper from a drawer, and ran his finger down the list. "Tomatoes, peas, corn, apples, and so forth and so forth. And he says the prospects are favorable for good prices."

"I hear a good deal of complaint these these days from people who have recently started into business regarding seizures of tobacco," remarked a city traveller to me a few days ago. "For trivial, and often unintentional, infractions of the regulations, they have had their tobacco taken from them, and some of those who raised opposition were fined in addition. Of course the regulations must be enforced, but there is a right as well as a wrong way of doing so. What I claim is that with regulations so complicated the Inland Revenue Department should issue instructions more frequently than it does regarding them to those selling tobacco, cigars, etc."

"Do you know," said a grocer who had been denouncing pedlars to me, "that we can frequently buy oranges, lemons, bananas, and such like cheaper from the Italian pedlars than from the wholesale houses? I have done it myself, and have seen others do it. How is it?"

"I don't know. But I suppose you are aware that they sometimes club together and bring in a carload themselves," I remarked.

"By Jove, that's so. I had forgotten that. And I guess that's how they do it," he resumed, the perplexed look vanishing from his face.

BYSTANDER.

CANNED GOODS GOSSIP.

Some brokers intimate that local buyers are endeavoring to bear the market for canned tomatoes, but in one or more instances buyers claimed that bids were solicited for good-sized lots at prices slightly below current quotations.—N.Y. Bulletin.

The organization of a company for the purpose of establishing a canning factory at Natchez, Miss., is about perfected. A factory with a capacity of 20,000 cans daily will be build in time for doing some work this season in vegetables.

A. W. Habersham & Co., Baltimore, Md., writes as follows regarding the market for canned tomatoes: "A sharp advance is threatened; the near future may find them scarce at any price. For ten days we have been paying alternately 1.10 less the discount and 1.10 net. At this moment can offer a choice brand at 1.10 sixty days, or cash less 1-2 per cent f.o.b. country."

Those cheap lines of standard canned tomatoes, about which there have been whisperings latterly, have failed to materialize on the market thus far. To all accounts $1.15 is still bottom price for sult standard goods.—N.Y. Bulletin.

The Columbia River salmon fishermen have combined on $1.15 per fish. The canners have not combined. At $1.15 per fish the cost of the canned article will be on ordinary calculations about 45c. per case higher than it was last year.

A London report, date of March 18th, says: "California canned fruits are now experiencing a flat market, and apricots in ordinary standards, which is the kind most dealt in where business is concluded, can be had at 6s. to 6s. 3d. per dozen without attracting many buyers, while pears are offering at 7s. 6d. to 8s. 3d., and peaches at the latter price."

The Alaska Packers' Association is still busy getting vessels off loaded with supplies for the salmon canneries.

A new canning factory is soon to be started at Leonardsville, N. Y. A company has been formed with a capital of $10,000, and the stock has all been taken. A building will be erected 30x80 feet, with two stories above a basement. The building will be located near the U. V. railroad depot. Two hundred acres of corn are called for by the company for this season, after which they will begin canning fruits, vegetables, etc.

Opening prices for Clover Leaf brand Columbia River salmon, 1893 season pack, have been fixed by Delafield, McGovern & Co. at $1.40 f.o.b. Astoria for tall tins and $1.55 for flats in car load or larger lots. One-half of the probable pack under the Clover Leaf label has already been placed, with the guarantee of protection to buyers in the event of any decline in price of the brand. The limited selling prices heretofore prescribed continue in force. Cheaper rates of freight permit the salmon to be delivered in the East at last year's cost, although the f.o.b. cost prices are somewhat higher. A new and elegant Clover Leaf label will be used this year, and the contents of the cans will be of as high class as the label. Orders will be taken for the goods with key opening attachment at 5c. per dozen advance on the prices above quoted.—N. Y. Bulletin.

Most reports are to the effect that orders for 1893 season pack Columbia River salmon have largely run on flat tins thus far, and the surface indications are that tardy buyers will likely be inconvenienced later on.—N.Y. Bulletin.

The Alaska Packers' Association have fixed opening prices for 1893 season pack salmon at $1.05 f.o.b. San Francisco for prime red fish. At present rate of rail freight that price is equivalent to $1.13 3-4 landed here. On spot stock, however, $1.15 is the popular quotation.—N.Y. Bulletin.

Some of the Maine papers mention the opening of half a dozen new sardine factories along the coast, and suggest that sardines will be likely to be low. Information received here indicate the new concerns are small affairs and not capable of committing a great deal of mischief.

At least 2,000 cases of gallon canned apples, Maine and New York packs, have been picked up during the past few days, and, to present appearances, there is nothing in the way of desirable stock on offer at less than $2.70 to $2.75. Some authorities intimated the supply is now closely concentrated.—N.Y. Bulletin.

The N.Y. Bulletin says: "There was some evidence of a little awakening on coming season pack of canned tomatoes. In any event a number of orders for ordinary standard goods were placed at 90c., and some for fancy stock at $1 per dozen, delivered.

San Francisco papers at hand by latest mails confirm previous reports of failure of the attempt to combine the salmon packers on the Columbia River. Private accounts and the newspaper reports are in accord. In the natural course of events the failure to combine is likely to lead to what may be termed an enlargement of spleen, which, on the Pacific Coast, is paramount to vindictiveness on the part of aggressive canners, and opportunity for fishermen to exact fancy prices for raw stock that is almost certain to be made the most of. Hence the cost of new pack Columbia River salmon is shrouded in more than ordinary uncertainty, with the probabilities that nothing short of heavy run of fish will prevent an advance on last season's cost. The Alaska canners, unless they deviate from plans already laid out, will pack no greater quantity than was distributed last year. The British Columbia canners have also decided upon a limited pack. In short, there seems to be a nice opening for the Columbia River people, since spot stocks are low, and the restrictions upon packing in Alaska and on the Frazer River sufficient to divert more attention to Columbia River fish. Thus far, opening prices are about the same as those that ruled at the beginning of the 1892 season.—N.Y. Bulletin.

The Baltimore Trade, in its weekly review, says: "This year it seems as if there would be wisdom in any jobber buying at reduced prices on present quotations, for there is a real scarcity of canned goods in nearly every line, and retail prices will certainly hold for all that they can secure. The desire of the packer to sell out at this time is natural, and is altogether different from such a desire in the fall. It is the chance for the dealer, for, as we have said, sacrifices are often made at this time to clear out for new season, even when there is steady call for the goods. We believe it would be a good thing if there could be about this time auction sales to dispose of all goods of previous season in packers' hands. It would let the country know just how much was on hand; it would compel the jobber to take what he wanted, and know he could not get them cheaper before new packing began; and if an excess of goods was developed it would tend to prevent overpacking in the line that was excessive. The trouble is that packers will always believe that they can get a better price through keeping the public ignorant, than by giving the people full information. But, somehow the packers do not get this advantage from ignorance; the only privilege they have is to learn that an excess will not prevent prices breaking from weight of supply—this comes inevitably, sooner or later, and the jobbers make nothing by waiting till confidence is quite gone from the supply. The only articles which can be sacrificed this season would be some fruits, and few of those, with many months of good request before they will be in market in the form of fresh fruits. Any break in the price of vegetables is negatived by the lack of goods."

The last Havana mail reported as follows upon the tobacco market: "A quieter tone has been prevailing since the American buyers have now completely retired from the market, leaving our stores pretty nearly empty of both Remedios and Partidos leaf, only some few lots of these descriptions remain unsold. Of Vuelas stocks are still plentiful; however, of such tobacco to suit buyers there is not much to be met with; fine good burning fillers are in demand at prices ranging from $35 to $45 qtl., according to quality and size. No change can be reported so far in regard to the new crop; some rain would come apropos for the filler part of the yield still uncut on the fields."

PINE-TREE SUGAR.

The monograph by Dr. Wiley on Pine-Tree Sugar, was printed in October, 1891, in the Journal of the American Chemical Society. The Sugar Beet says: "The Pinus lambertiana, from which sugar has been obtained, occurs in the Oregon Cascade and coast ranges, also near the Mackenzie River and the valley of the Rogue river. The question of pine-tree sugar had been examined by Berthelot in 1856. Considerable difference between the rotatory power of the product called Pinite by Berthelot and the pine-tree sugar analyzed by Dr. Wiley, determined the latter to make further investigations. In the meantime a paper was written in France under title of 'A New Sugar with an Aromatic Nucleus.' The product called Beta Pinite melts at 186 to 187 deg. F., and when purified by a second crystallization from weak alcohol, melts at 246 deg. Dr. Wiley says that the product called Beta Pinite should be known as Pinite. A very interesting fact relating to this sugar has been pointed out by Girard, i.e., that from Madagascar Caoutchouc a sugar may be extracted which is identical with the several pine-tree sugars above mentioned. The subject is so interesting that further original research is to be made by the chief chemist of the Agricultural Department at Washington."

THE KIND OF CLERK HE WANTED.

A Minneapolis merchant says that he never allows a clerk to say, "Anything more this morning, madam?" giving as a reason, that it is a stereotyped phrase which has become wearisomely familiar and a bore, adding, "I don't want a clerk to make himself interesting to my customers; I want him to make my goods interesting, and if he can't do that, I have no place for him. There are scores of clerks in this town in demand, because it is believed they carry trade with them. In many cases there is too much of the aroma of the 'masher' in the atmosphere around them young men. If I ever get one of these on my pay-roll, he either reforms (and reformation in such cases is as rare as a thunder storm in midwinter) or he goes—quick. The best clerks I have ever had are men whose chief interest lies not in themselves, but in the goods they sell; men who inform themselves about the stock and can give the customer not merely the points of value in the goods, but the reasons why they are points of value; men who talk the goods as if they believed in them and loved them, and men who can, therefore, interest a customer, because they themselves have the unction and the influence that come from enthusiasm in their business."

THE DRUMMER'S STORY.

The drummer had heard several very interesting stories, and finally someone suggested that he tell one himself.

"I'll do it," he said, "and one of my own experience some years ago in New Mexico, and I want to say here that I have an affidavit that goes with this story if anyone disbelieves it. We were going along in the stage one day when out popped two masked men from the chapparal, and in a minute or two we tumbled out of the stage and stood along in a row with our hands up. There's no need to go into particulars, as these fellows went into our pockets; suffice it that in a few minutes a transfer of property had taken place; we were hustled back into the stage, and the driver ordered to get along fast. We were all congratulating ourselves that we had got off with our lives, and in some instances that a few dollars had been overlooked by the highwaymen, when dashing after us came the robbers, and we were stopped again, and this time we were badly frightened. As soon as the stage stopped one of the men rode up, and, pointing his gun at me, asked me to step outside a minute. To say that I was scared doesn't half express it. I wouldn't have insured my life for $50,000 for a cent less than $49,999.75 premium, but I stepped out. I was one in the party to whom a few dollars had been left. In fact, there was $250 there in my sock, and about $25 in a small pocket in the lining of my coat. The robber was polite.

"I am sorry to trouble you," he said, 'but I believe I got this paper from you,' and he handed me a note for $200 at four months, which one of my customers had given me in part payment.

"Yes," I said, 'you did. Is there anything the matter with it?'

"No," he replied, 'I think we can collect it, but you will observe that it has four months to run. The interest for that time at 10 per cent., our usual rate out here, is $6.66 2-3, and if you can kindly fish out of your clothes, say $6.65, I don't care about the change, you will do me a favor. I am sure in the hurry a few minutes ago we left you something, or, perhaps, you can borrow it from some of your friends who were not thoroughly searched. Be in a hurry, please.'

"And wasn't I in a hurry? I went through the crowd myself, and gathered together small change enough to make $6.70, which I handed over, and the robber thanked me and rode off, and that evening, when we reached our destination, I blew in that $25 in my inside pocket on the crowd."

"Let me see the affidavit you said goes with the story," remarked the hotel clerk, as the drummer finished, and he brought forth a paper that was so soiled and worn it could scarcely hold up its own weight.—Detroit Free Press.

GLAD WE LIVE TO-DAY.

"Recall," said a speaker the other day in Philadelphia, "the raw sugar with which our forefathers were obliged to be content, and in the grinding of which the poor grocer's apprentice was permitted to meditate upon his sad lot, and prove to his own satisfaction the percentage of sand in the sugar. Compare this old combination of questionable ingredients with the beautiful white crystals of pure granulated sugar of to-day, and which, like the product of the great flour mills, is turned out at the rate of thousands of barrels per day, and is cheap enough to be used by the poor. Glance at the table of Americans of to-day, and we see, in the very heart of winter, delicious fruit, wholesome vegetables and nutritious meat and fish, many of which were unknown a century ago to even the wealthy, but which, because of the skill and the cheapness of the canner's art, have become a part of the daily bill of fare of the American mechanic."

PALERMO ORANGE CROP.

A correspondent of the San Francisco Bulletin, writing from Butte County, Cal., says: "The greater portion of the Palermo orange crop has been picked and shipped. In Mr. Braselton's small orchard, consisting in part of olive trees, peach and prunes, there are a half dozen or more orange trees well decorated yet with the golden fruit swinging in the wind and in the rain. Many of the orange trees hold on to their golden fruit with as strong a grip as the miser does his gold. You can see the ripe and the green fruit, as well as the white scented blossoms at the same time, dwelling in harmony under the same green roof. The owners of the groves here are well satisfied with the yield of their young trees this year. There will be some new groves set out this year. Preparations are now being made, and a few trees are already planted. The rains will necessarily delay work. Rain commenced falling early to-day, and has been steadily coming down. The workmen are not at all amiable when it rains, although well-housed, and they wait anxiously 'till the clouds roll by.'"

In the House one day last week Dr. Borden said that the Maritime Provinces imported their coal oil in bulk by water and not by rail, so that they would not be benefited by the change in the duty on coal oil to the same extent as the other provinces. Indeed, the change was a discrimination against the Maritime Provinces. The people imported very much more coal oil per head in the Maritime Provinces than in Ontario, and it was unfair that they should not have the full benefits of the change. He would like to know what relaxations the Government intended to make to remedy what he pointed out.

SUCCESS IN BUSINESS.

A very small percentage of all who enter upon a business life succeed. The end comes soon after the beginning in most cases. Moreover, most successful business men fail finally. These unchallenged statements suggest the need of a careful enquiry as to the possibility of learning the principals on which success depends. It is certain that to some men success seems easy of achievement, while to others it is apparently unattainable.

If there are men who by natural inaptitude are disqualified for business life, who by organization are foredoomed to failure, it would benefit humanity to so accurately describe them that all such might easily recognize themselves; or that they might be known by their friends and by them prevented from useless effort. How much suffering would be saved the unhappy subjects of experiments predestined to be abortive! Insanity often results. How beneficent a study that would prevent such a dreadful effect of an endeavor that, in the nature of the case, could have had no other conclusion! Many men unable to endure the pain of discomfiture rashly terminate life by suicide. What woe results to all connected with them! If men whose success is impossible could be designated by a commission or taught to discover in themselves the sure prophecy of failure, their lives in many cases would be saved from wreck, and all connected with them from untold anguish. For this reason such journals as Trade should be read and carefully studied by all young people, and their lessons conscientiously learned. The columns of magazines of this character should be filled with the best thought of men qualified by endowment and experience to write for their fellows truths practical and helpful.

It is a common enough remark among business men that there are men in all the professions who are by nature disqualified for the work they have undertaken. A business man, who, at the time of which we speak, was proprietor of a large foundry, but who soon afterwards made a disastrous failure from which no effort could rescue him, once said of a young candidate for a prominent place: "He knows about as much of the business as a beast knows of preaching." The remark was true, and failure was inevitable. All the world knows that there are lawyers and physicians whom all the angels could not make successful. But it seems to be believed that anyone who can get money can succeed in mercantile or manufacturing life. This is a mistake. Success in a small way, indeed, may be won by many whose endowments are moderate. But for eminent success most men, as at present trained, are not prepared. To hold one's own in the arena of business life was never as difficult as now; and it is becoming more difficult every year. Business is practically an intellectual game. It is a conflict on a large scale where giants contend. For the majority of men to go into this arena is simply to become food for powder; or, to change the figures, it is to go as lambs among wolves. That it ought not to be so is as certain as that it is so now and likely to remain so for some time to come.

To those who lack the capacity, it is useless to say more than the emphatic word "Don't!" when they propose to undertake some business venture. Better far to be industrious and economical and save their earnings, investing them on good bond and mortgage, so as to have something ready for a rainy day. They will surely lose all they venture in business enterprises, and inflict untold sufferings on themselves and their friends.

There are many men who have, naturally, qualities which would make great success possible, were they properly trained. Many such will fail, because they depend too much on their native sharpness. Conscious of power, they are over-confident, and rush into the thick of the fight only to fall easy victims before the prowess of those who have more science or skill. To this class it is necessary to speak words of counsel and instruction, concerning the need of adequate preparation.

Preparation for success in any and all lines of business is both general and special. Either of these alone is inadequate to secure the highest measure of success. A foreign writer has recently said, that "the women of America are better informed than the men." He adds that "the men are so intent on making money that they have no time for reading, while the women, having leisure, profit thereby to store their minds with knowledge." The remark has too much foundation in fact. It has too long been thought unnecessary for a man intending to devote his life to "business" to acquire a good general education. Of what use, it is asked by young men, would a college training be to me? I propose simply to be a manufacturer, or a merchant, what need will I ever have for culture? It is supposed that knowledge of the special business about to be undertaken is all-sufficient. But that this conclusion is a fatal mistake many have discovered when too late. Business, we have said, is largely an intellectual rivalry; he that is best trained intellectually always has the advantage where other things are equal. The brightest mind, quickest and most reliable in all its processes, is the best fitted for business.

Education is a process of brightening the student's mind. It is a skillful process of evolving latent forces and freeing them from embarrassment. The well-educated man is a mental gymnast, and has all the superiority implied in such a significant fact. When the New York Seventh Regiment went southward at the outbreak of the rebellion they came to a place where the railroad had been torn up. Those citizen-soldiers, all unused to hardships, were compelled to descend from the train and make a forced march in the hot sun. A participant told the writer that many were overcome and fell swooning to the ground. But a number of the boys were gymnasts. They had faithfully trained their muscles for years. To these there was no hardship in the exposure and in the unexpected demand upon their resources. They were not even discomposed. This suggestive incident illustrates an important truth. To the business man there will come many a forced march, many an emergency when, for a time, he must work up to the top of his bent without flagging, and always doing accurate work until the crises is past. To do this he will need a development such as may be most easily secured at college, and more cheaply as well.

It is not forgotten that many young men cannot secure this more elaborate preparation. Nor is it denied that in the hustling of boyhood and youth, a very good training of the mental powers is often obtained. Some of the grandest of men have had no other chance; easily holding their own at the head of the moving columns of successful men, they are a most encouraging illustration of the possibilities within the reach of men rightly constituted. It is admitted also that some of the saddest failures are of men who have enjoyed first-class advantages. One of the most conspicuously successful business men of Philadelphia can scarcely do more than write his name. It is said that he never wrote a letter and never read a book. He looks somewhat like a ward boss, but he is at the head of a great business built up by himself, and utilizes the education of subordinates, whose energies his money commands. The writer knew of a man in the southern part of the city of Philadelphia, who could neither read nor write, nor make figures, but who did an immense business in a general produce line, and whom no man could ever cheat in accounts. He always knew every account. On the other hand many college men are employed as street-car drivers or conductors, and others are wholly unable to make a livelihood in any way. But these exceptions do not prove the rule. It remains true that the best outfit for success in any calling of life is a thoroughly developed and finely trained mind; and that the easiest and cheapest way is to secure this outfit at school, under competent teachers. Perhaps this article will reach more parents than youths. If so, well. Parents are generally responsible for the mistakes made by their boys. The opinions of the young folks on practical matters are but the reflex of opinions expressed by the head of the family. Every man who is responsible for the bringing up of sons should accustom his offspring to these truths. He should begin early to impress their minds with the fact that the coming business man will be an educated man with all his faculties sharpened by the best training under the best teachers. He must get his boys to see clearly that to compete on such a field with such antagonists, they will need all that the most painstaking drill can do for them. They will need acute perceptive and accurate reasoning faculties, besides which they will need power to endure fatigue; to bear great strain without exhaustion. This is a sober truth, and happy is the boy whose father recognizes and acts upon it.

An important part of a good general preparation for a successful business life is a knowledge of the history of business. Such a review of the past would be an education in itself. No thoughtful man could inform himself on the history of manufactures, commerce, finance, without filling his mind with seed thoughts from which would spring a harvest of profitable ideas. He would learn the futility of many an undertaking on which men in successive generations waste energy which otherwise applied would render valuable returns. Many a secret of success hidden from careless eyes would be made clear to them. It is pitiful to see men possessed of some energy exhibiting a good deal of force in attempts to do what a little wisdom would enable them to see could never be done. A common example is the poor fellow who is sure he will yet produce a "perpetual motion." Another is the man who hopes to navigate the air with an ordinary balloon as the basis of his air-ship. Flying machines, perhaps there may be; navigable balloons, not till water runs up-hill.

Another essential element of success in business, is a knowledge of the principles of business. Of these a few geniuses seem to have had intuitive knowledge. Knowledge worth millions comes to them in their dreams. They see things without instruction that are fundamental, and that some men never can be taught. In all callings there are illustrations of this fact. Patrick Henry was eloquent by a kind of instinct. He could not have told how he produced his effects, at least he could not have told how he knew what would be effective in speech. Tennyson never was taught to be a poet but by Nature. Summerfield was born eloquent. There are kings of finance to whom come by Nature the intuitions on which their success depends. McClellan could never have learned the art of winning battles, though he knew far more than Grant. The latter did not at West Point the art of winning on the bloody field. The eternal principles of victory were as clear to his mind as the multiplication table. Some men have been almost born physicians, and could hardly tell how they proceeded in diagnosis of disease, while others are merely well educated quacks who work in the dark all their lives. If the patient gets well, it is by Nature's power he is healed. Edison was a born inventor. No school can claim him.

Most men, however, must proceed patiently to discover the laws on which depends the success they covet. Without a knowledge of such principles they will never achieve permanent success. This knowledge ought to be secured early in life. As a rule, it may be obtained by all who work for it. Much of it lies on the surface within easy reach. Much may be learned from the experience of others. There is a philosophy of success to be learned. It is true that circumstances must be taken into account. Under some conditions no man could achieve what under other other circumstances would be of easy accomplishment. Still it is the case that under all conditions those who work in harmony with fundamental laws of business life will win the highest measure of true success. This being the case, it is certain that wisdom urges to constant study of principles.—By George K. Morris in Trade.

PERMANENCY OF LOCATION.

It is but seldom that any advantage is gained by moving from one location to the other or by selling out your business at one place with the purpose of commencing business elsewhere. Permanency of location is as much a gain to a young merchant as is the profit he makes on the goods. With some young men it has become second nature to be ever dissatisfied with the location in which they are engaged in business. They are either looking for a place to start a new store or else they are looking for a purchaser for the one they already have. In this manner, they constantly continue until their money is gone, and then they find themselves without either store or credit, as even the wholesale merchants who have formerly supplied them with goods lose faith in their stability and consider it too great a risk to extend credit to them.

In proof of the injury that a constant moving about is to a storekeeper, one needs only to follow up some of those who practise it. Men who were formerly in the grocery business may be found in every walk of life, but when one is found who is poor, very few questions will have to be asked before it will be ascertained that he belonged to the class that believed in frequent changes of location while he was in the grocery business. Those who have made a success of the retail business will generally be found to have started business in a certain location and remained there until they amassed sufficient wealth to either go into the wholesale business or else retire altogether and live upon the fruits of their early labors.

Though at the first start the receipts may be small, and business may even continue slow for some time, as is generally the case when a business is first commenced, it is far better for a young man to remain in the one place and do the best he can in the way of gaining the good will of neighbors and probable customers than to be always changing stores, thereby lessening his chances of ever establishing a permanent trade and ruining his prospects of eventually obtaining the confidence of wholesale merchants, without which no retailer can ever expect to become successful in his business.—Retail Grocers' Journal.

CALIFORNIA CANNED FRUIT.

Some California papers, it is observed, persist in misrepresenting the statistical position of canned fruit in Eastern centres of distribution. They assert that the supply here is small, and go so far as to venture the statement that stocks will be worked down to a very low point before fruit of the coming season's pack is ready for delivery. On the latter point their statements may be questioned, but the allegation that stocks are moderate in the East is without the slightest foundation. The plain fact is that supplies here are very heavy, and that round lots can be placed only at more or less sacrifice in prices. In addition to the large stocks on the spot there are about 50,000 cases afloat on sail vessels destined for this port, no small portion of which is unsold. As some of our California friends claim, the Coast may be well cleaned up, but it would require nothing more than reference to private letters to discover proof that there are still a few more left at the primary points. As a matter of fact, there is a superabundance of California canned fruit, and not a little stock, the aggregate of which is, in the estimation of well informed handlers of the goods, more than sufficient to supply a full average demand during the next few months. That ruling prices are low is the fact, and it may be admitted that a heavy western consumption of green fruit may inconvenience canners to greater or less extent. Still it is a matter of record that there was a great hue and cry last year about insufficient supply of green fruit for canning purposes, and later records make it plain that the canners put up more goods than they have been able to sell up to the present time.—N.Y. Bulletin.

WILL RETAILERS EVER AGREE?

The above query, though only composed of a few words, means considerable to the grocery trade in general, and the longer a merchant revolves the same in his mind the more will he become convinced that the retailers ought to agree much better than they have done for years past. There was a time when the downfall of one or the other merchant was regarded by his neighbors as a blessing to them, inasmuch as they expected to gain some of the patronage he had enjoyed. That envious feeling does not at the present time exist so generally, and instead of pitying the unfortunate merchant after his failure, incidents have happened where one merchant has given the other substantial financial aid, so that the dreaded calamity might be avoided.

Such favors, however, will never be extended to those who conduct their affairs on the "dog eat dog" principle, nor should such be done. This class of merchants are possessed of a selfish nature, and imagine that their business can only be extended through the failing of others. What a fallacious idea for men of business to build upon. Every failure brings into the field a healthier and at times much more dangerous rival, who will stop at nothing to gain trade from his opponents, so that he might not have to close his doors as others have done before him. Perhaps this time the formerly victorious storekeeper gives way to the new comer, and so it continues from one to another, until now many of the grocers, with capital invested and working long hours are barely able to meet current expenses.

This state of affairs does not exist because there are too many grocers engaged in the business, but is the result of this constant desire on the part of a few to be contrary and unwilling to join with their brethren in elevating the standard of the grocery trade, instead of bearing it down as they are invariably doing. There is no difference between men engaged in other trades. In mental ability as much is required of the grocer as is of other men engaged in any line of commerce, and about the only difference there is at all noticeable is that it requires more grocers to serve the needs of a community than other lines of business. This, however, ought not to bring about the intense antagonism that exists among them.

Would it not be an advantage to many storekeepers if their entire volume of business was reduced by at least one-third, and that they should receive a profit on the two-thirds remaining? As it now reminds one of the story where a merchant informed a purchaser that the goods were sold below cost, and on being asked how he could afford to sell at a loss he blandly answered, "I sell so much, you know." The storekeeper who figures to make up in quantity of sales at cost the profit that he ought to make will not be in business for any length of time, but still he will be there long enough to injure the trade. Retailers can agree if they choose. Those who claim the contrary are too weak-kneed to be engaged in the business, and are a detriment to those who believe that the laborer is worthy of his hire.—Retail Grocers' Journal.

A BUSINESS MAN'S CREED.

Blessed are the merciful.

Blessed are the pure in heart.

Rejoice and be exceedingly glad, for great is your reward in Heaven.—St. Mathew, v., 7, 8, 12.

The average clergyman and the average business man have very different views of what is necessary in order to get to heaven. The secular mind, disciplined and trained by practical experiences, underestimates the theological dogmas which the church deems so important. The church responds by appraising the qualities which underlie all commercial transactions at something less than their intrinsic value.

Business and religion are not en rapport, don't pull together, are not on intimate terms, and haven't entire confidence in each other. The business man spends his time in trying to make money and the pulpit tells him every Sunday that money making imperils his soul. So religion and business bow to each other with polite courtesy, maintain an outward attitude of mutual respect, but never to go arm in arm up the broad aisle or down the street.

While the man of affairs is tugging to draw his loaded sled up hill, the minister remarks that this world ought not to occupy his attention. The reply is that he has boys to send to college, girls to fit for a position in life and a family to support. Whether or no money is the root of all evil he and his loved ones will have a rough time unless he gets some of it. There is an element of sarcasm in his added statement that the very man who denounces money making requires a large salary to meet his personal and domestic wants. You have, therefore, this curious anomaly—that the church was built with money, that it is maintained with money, that the occupant of the pulpit is constantly calling for money to support charities and missions, and yet the sermon warns the givers of these gifts not to devote their years to making money, because it can't be carried into the next world.

Hence it happens that the church has a creed which the merchant regards as of minor importance, and the merchant has a creed which the church looks upon with more or less disfavor. What the former is has been made known by the various conventions where heresy has been discussed; what the latter is may be told in a very few words. If you were to ask a thoughtful business man what he thinks necessary to salvation he would tell you in a trice as follows:

First, commercial integrity. It is the rankest kind of heterodoxy to believe that trickery in the acquisition of wealth will pay in the long run. The man who grabs at everything will probably be buried by contributions. There is such a thing as a business conscience, and it is possible to conduct business on the principles which conscience lays down. Thievery is not a short cut to success, neither is it necessary that someone should be made poor in order that you may become rich. The strongest firms are those in which the business world has confidence, and whose word is the equivalent of a bond. Commercial deviltry ruins your credit, and if you kept it up for twenty years you will be poorer than when you started. There is nothing so much to be prized as sterling honesty in your various transactions, and if the goods you ship are not like the sample, you may think yourself smart, but you are a fool. The best kind of religion is that which makes you a square man and then keeps you square.

Second, a recognition of your duties to your fellows. If you have something you ought to give something. There are many institutions, such as charities, hospitals, retreats, asylums, which the State cannot be reasonably asked to support. They are absolutely necessary in a self-respecting community, but they must depend upon the generosity of the rich. If fate or good fortune has singled you out and given you much instead of little you are under certain serious obligations whom the Master spoke of as your "neighbors." The welfare of society depends partly upon you, and if you are niggardly suffering will be increased, because it will not be allayed. Riches and duties run side by side in double harness. The man who is rich and mean is a heretic, and should be consigned to the stocks to be jeered at and pelted. The man who has money and gives it is the ideal citizen, the thoroughly orthodox citizen, whose creed is true blue.

There are other details which we might mention, but if you start out with the determination to be rich, honest and charitable, you will have all you can attend to for some time to come. With these qualities of character forged in the hot fires of competition, and shaped by the hammer of persistent struggle, you need have no fear of what may happen in the next world. There isn't an honest man in hell and there isn't a sneak thief in heaven. These two facts form the basis of ethical philosophy. If you will accept them you will begin right, and if you govern yourself accordingly you will keep right to the end.

That is the business man's creed and it is worth thinking about.—New York Herald.

EXCITEMENT IN SUGAR AT MONTREAL.

The sugar market, both for the raw product as well as the finished article, has been decidedly interesting of late, and the Montreal market has been no exception. A short time ago, to the surprise of a good many, considering the steady upward trend shown by the raw sugar markets all over the world, Montreal refiners marked down their prices 1-16c. It transpired immediately, however, that this was only a move on their part to induce some demand, but they were only moderately successful, and now it looks as though the over cautious buyers who declined to take advantage of the concession had been over prudent, for the Montreal refiners have marked up their prices three different times, and all within the space of a fortnight. First they announced about a week ago that the cut of 1-16c. above mentioned had been withdrawn, and this was followed quickly on Thursday last by the announcement that prices were 1/4c. higher, and finally this was supplemented on Monday with the news that another 1-16c. had been tacked on, making a clear gain of 4-16c. from the lowest level. This sharp gain has naturally alarmed buyers and the result is an increased business at the advance, especially as all the indications point to a still higher level of values, and this has led, in addition to the regular demand, to considerable speculative purchasing.

The chief reason for the strength of the market is the news that the crop in Cuba will be 15,000 to 200,000 tons short, which, coupled with the position at other primary markets, has placed refiners everywhere on the qui vive about supplies, and the fact has led to a sensible stiffening in values. In New York centrifugals have advanced to 3 9-16c. and the Trust are said to have taken over 150,000 bags at these figures. Beet root sugar in Germany, which on the 1st of March stood at 14s. is now quoted at 15s. 7 1/2d. for immediate shipment and 15s. 10 1/2d. for May. In Cuba naturally the advance has fully kept pace with the foregoing. London advices quote Java firsts at 17s. 1 1/2d., while fair refining has advanced 3d. to 15s., and latest instructions from Iloilo quote £12 to £12 5s. 3d. for steamer cargoes and £11 16s. for sailing cargoes, quotations being subject to approval. In fact, from all over the world the conditions indicate remarkably strong values in sugar, and buyers both in Montreal and in the West, by their actions this week, seem to realize the fact.

THE AMERICAN SUGAR TRUST.

The N. Y. World of Monday last devoted five columns to an attack upon the sugar trust. It accuses that monopoly of robbing the people of $15,000,000 a year, and calls on the new attorney-general, Richard Olney, to make it his first duty to "smash this trust." It quotes the portions of the Democratic platform and of Mr. Cleveland's inaugural address in relation to trusts and monopolies, and the text of the trust law passed by Congress in 1890. It gives a history of the sugar trust, and seeks to demonstrate that the law has been constantly violated.

W. F. Buchanan, Winnipeg, who has a number of good agencies has taken B. Gordon, Victoria, B. C., at one time Hudson Bay Co.'s buyer at Winnipeg, into partnership. With Mr. Gordon's through knowledge of the grocery and wine trade and his energy the firm expect to do a largely increase business. They are open for consignments and have excellent bond and free storage. The new firm will be known as Buchanan & Gordon.

BIG JUMP IN RUBBER GOODS.

The Boston Transcript says: "Prices on rubber goods have been advanced from 20 to 30 per cent. by the gigantic trust that controls that industry. It is called the United States Rubber Company, and is incorporated under the laws of New Jersey. The principal rubber companies that are still under a separate management are the Boston Rubber Shoe Company, whose factories are at Malden, and the Woonsocket Rubber Company, the former concern having a capital and surplus of $5,000,000, and the latter a capital of $1,250,000 or thereabouts. The jobbers in any relation with the manufacturers have all along been bound by a strict contract, which every jobber has to sign before he can purchase any goods. This binds him not to sell goods any lower than the price list furnished him by the manufacturer, nor to furnish goods to any other jobber without the consent of the manufacturer. The trust has now cut off the big retailers from their old privilege of buying at factory prices. Under the first head the average raise in the price of rubber goods is 30 per cent. Under the latter the three big rubber companies have pledged themselves to sell no goods to any retailer, no matter how big a customer he may be, so that the great firms who have been buying rubber boots and shoes in lots of one thousand and two thousand cases at a time from the manufacturers at the same prices paid by the jobbers, will now have to buy of the jobbers and pay the same price with the humble country retailer who buys six pairs of shoes a year. It is on sandals that the greatest advance has been made, amounting in some grades to 40 per cent. On boots the advance has been in most cases 20 per cent., and on the whole the increase will average up to 30 per cent."

MONEY SAVING.

Some men have the money getting, others the money-saving faculty; few have both. Those endowed with the former in its plenitude, and who exercise it to the utmost, often become rich while indulging in all expensive luxuries which sumptuous taste can suggest; but the colossal figure of finance, the giants of the "bank-note world," by whose side the half million and million fellows are merely respectable dwarfs, are generally rigid economists in their expenditures, and some people are discourteous enough to call them "screws."

Upon the whole, it is much easier to make money than to save it, and although we would not advise any one to be miserly, it is certainly the part of wisdom and prudence to set aside a considerable portion of a large income as a provision for the future, and so to invest this reserve fund as to place it, if possible, beyond the reach of all the ordinary contingencies of business. It is a pleasant thing, during one of these financial cyclones, which every now and then make shipwreck of innumerable fortunes, to feel that one has an anchor to windward that will not drag. Therefore, while you are making money save it, and as you save it put it where no monetary convulsion can bring yur "nobles to ninepence."—New York Ledger.

SHOW UP YOUR STOCK.

Everybody eats groceries.

Most everybody you sell to would eat the best grade of goods, if they understood that it is true economy to do so.

Do you display your stock in such a way as to attract the eye, make the mouth water, make the tongue order, and make the hand proffer the cash?

Good goods temptingly displayed often need no salesman.

Dry goods and notion stores have discovered this fact and are profiting by it.

Human nature is the same—at least the feminine side of it with which you have most to do—whether it is buying dry goods or groceries.

There is no excuse for not taking advantage of the fact. Attractive packages are abundant and varied in the grocery trade. You can visit and look around the stores that cater only to fine trade and learn the art of displaying both package and bulk goods.

Don't rely on fancy labels though. A flashy label may cover a multitude of unsaleable trash.

Have high-grade goods.

Show them up well.

Keep your assortments full.

Give good service.

Share profits with those who help you make them.

See your trade grow.—Commercial Enquirer.

SOCIETY IN BUSINESS LIFE.

A correspondent wants to know whether or not it pays a business man to go into "society" and what proportion of successful men take delight in going out evenings. We believe the census returns give very little light on the subject as far as statistics are concerned, but from casual observation and a slight experience we would advise a man interested in business to let society alone. In a small town it is necessary for a merchant to buy a ticket to every church fair or ten cent social that is given, to lend a hand in the lodge blow-outs and do whatever he consistently can to advance the happiness of the people on whom he depends for support. But this by no means signifies that he must lose his head over the social events of the place. He should give careful attention to business and keep constantly before him the business man's ethics of good behavior, which are, a friendly thought for everyone and a countenance that carries with it a sincerity of purpose. Don't be imposed upon, and don't impose on others. Merchants who follow these ethics, as a rule, are successful. In large cities the percentage of society business men is always larger, but in the end either business or society claims the ownership of the man.—Journal of Commerce.

THE REWARD OF ECONOMY

Someone has defined genius as "conscientious thoroughness." No key to business success is more reliable than such thoroughness and it is within the easy reach of all. We remember hearing the following story which illustrates this truth: It seems that a merchant had made up his mind to take a young man as partner in his growing business. While looking for the right man he chanced to overhear a conversation between two clerks somewhat as follows:

"Have you thoroughly cleaned the floor behind those barrels?"

"Yes; with the exception of a few corks which are of no consequence."

"That won't do. You must not waste even corks. Pick them all up."

That reply of the senior clerk made for him a fortune. The merchant made him an offer of partnership and a career of continued success followed closed only a few weeks ago by his death.—Ex

An Irishman accosted an Italian pushcart banana merchant. "Phat do yer be afther axin fer the loiks o' thim?" "Nlce-a banan eight a cent a dozen." "Eighty cints a doozan is it? Be-gob! I wouldn't give sivinty-foive cints fer yer hull cart load." "No a, no a. Irisher no a speak Italayon. Five a six a seven a eight a cent a dozen. Cheap a banan. Nice a ripe a banan." Pat let the day go by without any bananas.

COWAN'S COCOAS AND CHOCOLATES

Are Standard, and sold by all grocers.

[This department is made up largely of items from travellers and retailers throughout the Dominion. It contains much interesting information regarding the movements of those in the trade. The editor will thank contributors to mail copy to reach the head office Tuesday.]

The first cargo of salt for the season arrived at St. John, N. B., Monday.

The death is announced of Mr. McMann, father of L. McMann of Thorold. It took place last week and after a very painful illness.

The bankrupt stock of James Porteous of Galt, valued at $8,644, was sold by auction Monday to J. Howden, Galt, at 62½ cents on the dollar.

Four hundred tons of sugar for the Moncton refinery arrived at St. John, N. B., Monday from Barbadoes, also 50 puncheons of molasses for a city firm.

A. Whitelaw of Brandon, Man., has given Joseph Whitelaw and M. S. Festing an interest in his business. The firm will hereafter be known as the Whitelaw Trading Company. A. Whitelaw retains the management.

The regular meeting of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association will be held Monday night in Richmond hall.

Joseph Shields, grocer, of Broadview avenue and Elliott street, this city, wants $5,000 for damage to his buildings by the great flood of June, 1892, and a writ has been issued against the city on his behalf.

Thos. Ballantyne & Sons, of Stratford, are having plans prepared for the erection of a cheese and butter factory at Black Creek during the coming summer. It will be used for a cheese factory in the summer and a butter factory in the winter. It is to be ready for the butter-making season next fall.

The wine manufacturers of Essex are jubilant over the decision of the Government that the treaty with France will be withdrawn, so that the admission of French wines for the present will be under the old duty. They are confident that when it again comes up in the House the clause admitting French wines free will be eradicated.

H. & A. Allan, of the well known steamship company of that name, are looking forward hopefully to the opening of navigation. Ice permitting, the Mongolian will be the first vessel to sail from the St. Lawrence on Wednesday, the 3rd May, followed by the Sardinian on the 6th. The Parisian has sailed from Liverpool with 1,000 emigrants to be landed at Halifax and Portland. These are all British and Scandinavians. No continental emigrants will be booked this season.

A cheese factory is being established at Aurora, with William Reynolds, president; A. G. Nicol, vice-president, and A. Lve, secretary. A substantial brick building has been secured, and the work is progressing as fast as possible. The present intention is to continue work throughout the year, making butter during the winter.

When the item to meet the expenses under the Adulteration of Food Act was reached in the House last week Sir Richard Cartwright suggested that in view of a possible invasion of cholera skilled officers be instructed to inspect samples of water throughout the country. The Controller of Inland Revenue said he would be glad to act upon Sir Richard's hint.

The National Provisioner says: "A beef famine is coming, at least prices are going to be higher for years, if the opinion of a very intelligent cattle buyer who travels Ohio, West Virginia, Kentucky and Indiana is worth anything. In addition to a personal knowledge of the stock on hand in those States the gentleman has an extensive list of correspondents in other States. He says that for five or six years the price of cattle has been so low that all the small farmers have ceased to raise them, and devoted their attention to other products. The result is that thousands of farmers who sold from 10 to 100 each year have now not a hoof. It is the discovery of this which has already sent up the price of beef. Unlike the hog crop the stock cannot be renewed in a few months, and therefore the price of cattle will advance a long time yet."

The London Grocer has the following: "The duties payable in gold which the Greek Government can offer as security for the service of the proposed loan are expected, according to the budget estimate for this year, to yield a sum of 8,610,556 drachmas. The principal item is the tax on exported currants, which is expected to produce nearly four million drachmas. The currant export trade has suffered from a partial paralysis during the last few months. The exports during last November shows a falling off of two and a half million drachmas as compared with the same month in the previous year. That a certain amount of distress exists among the currant growers is shown by the fact that the Government has authorized the National Bank to make advances to them amounting to two million drachmas, in order to assist them in procuring the requisite extra labor for the spring work in the vineyards. The prospects of the currant vintage, however, depend principally on the state of the weather in July and August, and there is no reason to apprehend a diminution of the demand."

A TRAVELERS' GLEANINGS.

"I detected a very smart trick," said a grocer to me the other day, "one of the cutest and most unprincipled tricks I ever saw or heard tell of. I could never get one of my customer's books to correspond with the ledger, and for a long time make it out. At last I began to get suspicious and to take particular note. Several times I had my wife to watch. We both kept track, and found out that she was in the habit of rubbing one or two articles each time out of the book. Next time she came in I accused her of it. She denied it for a while, but when I showed her the proofs of her own guilt she finally confessed. I suppose she must have gone through me for about $50 before my suspicions were aroused."

"I came upon a strange thing the other day," said one grocer to another. "A bar of soap, in fact two bars, supposed to be three pounds weight, were five ounces short. Each bar was put up by a different manufacturer."

BOARD OF TRADE TALK.

The Brandon town council voted $800 to aid the Board of Trade of that place. This the mayor vetoed. At the last meeting of the council another attempt was made to order the granting of the money but it failed.

Comfortable and extremely neat in appearance is what the new building of the St. John, N.B., Board of Trade is reported to be.

The Regina Board of Trade has resolved to submit United States silver to the following discounts on dollar, half, quarters and dimes respectively, viz., 75 cents, 40 cents, 20 cents, and 5 cents; nickels to be refused altogether.

Secretary Nelles of the London Board of Trade has been instructed to confer with the McCormick Harvesting Co., with a view to getting them to establish a branch in the Forest City.

A. Rolfe, Thos. Gillean, A. A. Campbell, W. A. Young, G. McLean and L. G. Fitzgerald have been elected members of the London Board of Trade.

DRY GOODS.

The latter half of last week was a dull time for some of the houses. This week promises better, as the brighter weather always causes a rush of placing orders from small dealers, and of repeat and sorting orders from the large retailers. Money is not very active, but, nevertheless, dealers are buying freely, considering the circumstances. There are no evidences of fear on the part of the retailers that they will not be able to meet all their engagements.

Letter orders are advancing strongly in mercantile favor. Cottons, prints, flannelles, and other staples are receiving strong attention from rural dealers. Samples to no end are being sent out by mail, and orders received in this way show an adequate return. Carpets are being ordered in this way to a considerable extent.

Among the special lines which are receiving attention is a line of delainettes mentioned below.

Lustres, shot lustres, delaines, muslins and other midsummer goods are receiving considerable attention by those buyers who are always first on the market, and who always get the best of the assortment.

Spool cotton has advanced a few points. Clark's Anchor is now $3.40 and Brooks' $3.20 for 200-yard 6-cord. The former prices were $3.20 and $3. This would seem to indicate an increased demand for these brands.

Silks are away up, and the retailer who comes on to the market to buy silks after the next two weeks will find a decided change. The advance is abrupt and decided, and the man who is carrying heavy stocks of good seasonable silks will make a wide margin, if he is shrewd enough to grasp the opportunity.

Velveteens are in good demand from all classes of dealers. This fabric is being extensively used for skirt and sleeve trimmings.

NOTES

A special line of lace curtains is being offered by John Macdonald & Co. This is a three and a half yard curtain which can be retailed at a popular price.

Alexander & Anderson have received a large shipment of fast black German cotton hosiery. These are special value. Black, tan and cardinal cashmere hosiery are also in stock, and they are prepared to meet the strong demand for these goods. Gloves, embroideries, parasols, ribbons, laces, etc., are also re-stocked, and the latest novelties are shown.

W. R. Brock & Co. have just opened out three lines of job embroideries, in case lots. There are lines which their travellers have found in strong demand, and which unfortunately were on board the overdue steamer Sarnia. Back orders have now been filled, and only a few cases of the stock remains.

In their woollen department John Macdonald & Co. are showing some mantling novelties in box cloths, fancy brocades, diagonals and serges. Fawns and drabs are the leading shades for spring mantlings. That peculiar drab called tan is also in strong favor. In men's woollens such as black fancy worsteds and serges they are showing some very neat lines.

W. R. Brock & Co. are placing on the market two special lines of ladies' kid gloves that can be retailed at a dollar per pair. One line has the dome fasteners, the other is a lace and hook glove. Samples of these are now in the hands of their travellers, and stock will be to hand before the middle of the month.

Delainette is a new material which is a substitute for prints. The particular beauty of the cloth is the manner in which it drapes suitable for blouses and many other uses. The colors are fast and washable. A full range is carried by Caldecott, Burton & Spence, in spots, florals and stripes. It is about equal in price to prints, retailing at 12 1-2 cents with a fair profit.

Cottons are moving freely with John Macdonald & Co. They report an extra heavy demand for their lines of grey and bleached. Cotton shirtings are in strong demand in all classes. Letter orders to this house contain numerous orders for these goods, as they make a specialty of sending samples of cottons, prints, etc., to those desiring to order by letter.

Venetians and whipcords are selling well for spring overcoatings. Wyld, Grasett & Darling have found these in strong demand, so that they have been obliged to repeat several times in order to maintain their stock. Their range in all spring overcoatings is very extensive, and seems to have found favor with the bulk of buyers.

W. R. Brock & Co. have certain lines of black worsted trouserings which are always in strong demand. The weight of these lines are suitable for all seasons of the year, and scarcely a week passes but they are receiving additions to their stock. The prices are popular, and every Canadian dealer who has handled their trouserings knows that this range is unexcelled. This is a well known special feature of their woollen department.

Alexander & Anderson have received a heavy repeat in prints, including dark grounds, navys, cardinal grounds, with spots and small figures. They have also received a large shipment of black and cream ground French printed delaines. These goods are choice and still in very strong demand. Some special lines in 6-quarter dress materials in low and medium prices are to hand. These are desirable lines for the midsummer trade. American challies and prints have been re-stocked, and their range is very attractive for the benefit of stocking season.

W. R. Brock & Co. have a novelty in the way of a wooden stand for showing parasols. It will show 25 parasols or umbrellas, and in such a way that every handle is shown distinctly. It is made of solid wood and is inexpensive, but does the work of a more expensive holder. Such novelties are invaluable in displaying goods; they pay for themselves five-fold in a week.

TORONTO MARKETS.

TORONTO, April 6, 1893.

GROCERIES.

The country roads are still in bad condition. In some districts they are practically impassible. Trade is decidedly quiet in consequence, and were it not for the excitement in the sugar market it would be lifeless. During the week the refiners have announced no less than three advances, and it looks as if the end is not yet. Coffees remain much about the same—quiet and unchanged, and devoid of any special feature. In dried fruits currants are about the only commodity for which the demand may be said to be good, although there is a fair business being done in prunes, while Sultana raisins are a little higher. Rice is in little better demand and spices are in fair request. There is a fair movement in syrups and molasses, and there is a fair business doing in medium and low grade Japan teas. A fair sorting-up business is being done in canned vegetables, and canned salmon continues firm with demand improving. Quiet as is general business at the moment, another ten days or two weeks will probably see a great difference. The country is rather bare of goods, and with better roads will doubtless come more activity. Payments, as with trade, are not as satisfactory as desirable.

COFFEES.

There has been no material change in the situation. The higher prices still continue to check consumption somewhat, and prices asked here have been up to the top of the outside market, but higher prices will have to be paid for goods now in transit. We quote as before: Rios 21 to 22c., East Indian 27 to 30c., South American 21 to 23c., Mocha 26 to 30c., Santos 21 to 22c. Demand is principally for Rios, except for grinding purposes, when South American and Santos are the most enquired after.

DRIED FRUIT.

No very marked features have developed during the week. Taking dried fruits all round, they are quiet, an active demand for currants being about the only exception. The demand for Valencia raisins is light at steady and unchanged prices. Layers as a rule sell at from $6\frac{3}{4}$ to $7\frac{1}{2}$ c. according to quality, and fine off-stalk at $5\frac{1}{4}$ to $5\frac{1}{2}$ c. Sultana raisins are getting higher. They have advanced about 2s. in Smyrna, and they are a little dearer here in consequence. We quote $6\frac{1}{2}$ to 10c. Currants are in active demand. Prices range from $5\frac{3}{4}$ c. for provincials up to 10c. for Vostizas; fine filiatras are selling at from 6 to $6\frac{1}{2}$ c. Prunes are firm and in good demand for the season. Bosnias are quoted at $7\frac{3}{4}$ to 9c., and Atlas brand from $7\frac{1}{2}$ to $8\frac{1}{2}$ c. Dates are quiet and unchanged at $5\frac{1}{2}$ to $5\frac{3}{4}$ c. for Persian in boxes. Nuts are quiet and unchanged.

RICE AND SPICES.

Rice is beginning to meet with more enquiry as the season advances, and prices as before range all the way from $3\frac{3}{4}$ c. for Ardcan to 10c. for Carolina.

Spices are moving fairly well without change in prices. Whole ginger is high, 20c. being asked, while ground is worth 20 to 25c.

SUGAR.

No less than three distinct advances, making in all a gain of $\frac{1}{2}$ c. here been announced by the refiners during the week, while wholesalers are holding granulated at 5 to $5\frac{1}{2}$ c., the inside figure being for the Nova Scotia article. On Tuesday the refiners advanced prices $\frac{1}{4}$ c. on yellows and 1-16 on refined and some of the local houses immediately wired their travellers to accept nothing less than $5\frac{1}{2}$ c. for granulated and 4c. for yellows, and prohibiting them from contracting for large orders. The feeling is strong and everybody anticipates further advances. The advances already from the lowest point are from $\frac{1}{2}$ to $\frac{3}{4}$ c. One refinery withdrew prices on Tuesday and others instructed their agents to limit their sales. Yellows are held here at from $3\frac{3}{4}$ to $4\frac{1}{4}$ c. The position of the market is strong. Stocks of sugar in New York on April 1 were 118,183 bags against 210,142 bags and 812 hhds. same date in 1892 and 162,041 bags March, 1893. The demand on the spot is not at the moment heavy and purchases of any size are confined to those who are fairly well supplied with capital.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Syrups are steady and unchanged at $3\frac{1}{4}$ to $3\frac{3}{4}$ c. a pound. A fair quantity is selling and supplies are not large. Molasses are in fair demand and unchanged at 32 to $37\frac{1}{2}$ c. per imperial gallon.

TEA.

There is really no new feature. Demand is fair particularly for low grade and medium Japans. With improved roads there would likely be a brisk demand, as stocks are not by any means large in the country. Demand is also fair for Indian and Ceylon teas and the consumption is increasing rapidly.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

The butter market still rules firm, with all grades scarce, and more so than is usual at this time of the year. Creamery is in fair demand and unchanged, tubs selling at 23 to 25c. and pound prints at 25 to 26c.; offerings are not large, and demand is principally for pound rolls. Good dairy large rolls sell at from 18 to 20c. and tubs at 20 to 22c., but it must be something nice to obtain the outside figure. Pastry butter continues scarce and wanted at from 15 to 18c. a pound.

The demand for cheese is nearly altogether of a local character, and prices are easy at $11\frac{1}{2}$ to $11\frac{3}{4}$ c.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—A few small lots are moving at $1.40 to $1.45. Bushel lots sell at $1.50.

DRIED APPLES—Market quiet and prices easy. Purchases have been made during the week by jobbers at $4\frac{3}{4}$ c. Selling prices are from $5\frac{1}{4}$ to $5\frac{1}{2}$ c.

EVAPORATED APPLES—Market steady and demand fair at 8c. for large lots. Selling price ranges from $8\frac{1}{4}$ to $8\frac{3}{4}$ c., and half a car load of good quality sold at outside figure.

EGGS—Demand is fair and there is plenty to supply it, although there is no accumulation; prices easy at $13\frac{1}{2}$ to 14c.

HONEY—Dull and easy. Dark is quoted in sections at 8 to 9c. White is quoted at 8c. in 50-lb tins and at 15c. in sections.

POULTRY—Young chickens of good size are wanted at from 60 to 75c. a pair, turkeys 13 to 14c. a pound and geese at 8 to 10c. There are no geese offering.

POTATOES—Demand is moderate only and lower prices will rule with the advent of more liberal offerings. Sales are reported at 83 and 85c. on track, while 95 appears to be the ruling price for store lots.

ONIONS—Quiet and unchanged. The range of price is varied being all the way from $1.50 to $2.50.

HOPS—Continue to rule quiet, demand being light and offerings small; '92's are quoted as before at 18 to 20c. and yearlings at 15 to 16c.

HOGS AND PROVISIONS.

The market for dressed hogs is still tending downwards. A few market hogs were taken at $7.50, but packers say they would not give more than $7 for carlots. Offerings are however not so liberal as a week ago and all that come in are taken care of. Bacon is quiet at the moment but the demand is good for smoked meats.

BACON—Long clear $10\frac{1}{2}$ c. Smoked backs are $12\frac{1}{2}$ to 13c., bellies 14c., rolls $10\frac{1}{4}$ to $10\frac{3}{4}$ c.

HAMS—In good demand and firm at 13 to $13\frac{1}{2}$ c.

LARD—Pure Canadian is $13\frac{1}{4}$ to $13\frac{3}{4}$ c. in tubs, $13\frac{1}{2}$ c. in pails and 13c. in tierces. Compound $10\frac{1}{2}$ to 11c.

BARREL PORK—Canadian heavy mess $20.50, Canadian short cut $21.50.

DRESSED MEATS—Beef fores are $4\frac{1}{2}$ to $5\frac{1}{2}$ c., hindquarters 7 to $8\frac{1}{4}$ c., veal $6\frac{1}{2}$ to 8c. mutton 7 to 8c., lamb 8 to $8\frac{1}{2}$ c.

MAPLE SYRUP.

New maple syrup is now arriving every day. Receipts are however light yet, and all offered finds a ready sale at from 80 to 90c. according to size of tin. Maple sugar sells at from 8 to 9c. a pound.

GREEN FRUIT.

The spring-like weather is having its effect on this line of trade, there being quite a brisk trade doing, particularly for bananas, which are coming in freely. There is also a good demand for oranges. Lemons are dearer, but are held to be still good buying for the next month or six weeks. In New York there has been an advance of from 50c. to 75c. Florida oranges are getting scarce and higher. California oranges are beginning to arrive, and the quality is better than last season, the weight running heavier. Messina oranges are also beginning to arrive. There is not much doing in apples. There is no improvement in the English market, and the United States rules weak. We quote: Oranges—Valencias $6.00 to $6.50 per case; Floridas $3 to $4 per box; Messinas and Palermos $3 to $3.50 per box; California seedlings, $3 to $3.25 per box; ditto Navals, $3.50 to $4; lemons, $3.25 to $4; bananas, $1.40 to $2.50; pineapples, 20 to 30c.; apples, $1 to $1.50 for market stock and $2 to $3 for good to fancy.

FISH AND OYSTERS

The demand for salt water fish, such as haddock, cod, flounders and herring, is over for the season. About the only kind of frozen white fish on hand is about four tons of Manitoba. The principal demand now is

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.

There have been no specially new developments in this line during the week. There is a moderately good business doing and the tone continues healthy, with prices steady. Tomatoes have been moving out fairly well, principally in sorting-up lots; in fact, no movements at all are heard of in large lots; 90c. to $1 seem to be still the ruling figures, although a fairly good article is offered by some houses at 85c. Prices remain steady. Practically the same remarks apply to peas as to tomatoes, the demand being good for sorting-up lots, at 90c. to $1 for ordinary quality and at $1.45 for fine sifted peas. The demand for corn is less active than a week ago, but there is still a good business doing nevertheless. Prices unchanged at 90c. to $1.25, the outside figure being for fancy. A slightly improved demand has developed for salmon during the past week and prices continue firm with stocks light. The ruling price is $1.50 for talls and $1.80 to $1.85 for flats. A good spring salmon, pale in color, can be obtained at $1.30. Lobster continues in fair demand for the better grades, with prices firm at $2 to $2.10 for talls and $2.50 for flats. Sardines are unchanged and in limited demand. Peaches are in good demand and stocks are getting low; $2.10 to $2.25 for 2's and $3.25 to $3.75 for 3's is the idea. Apples are meeting with better demand as the season advances. Prices range from 85c. to $1 for 3's and $2 to $2.25 for gallons. Other fruits are in fair demand at unchanged prices.

MONTREAL.

The local demand for canned goods is slow and what business is being done is generally on a cash basis or at a very small margin of profit. The stocks of tomatoes are large and indications point to an unsatisfactory season.

MARKETS—Continued

We quote:—Manitoba whitefish, 7½c.; fresh salmon, 20c.; haddock, 6c.; skinned and boned codfish, 6½c.; Labrador herring, $3 per half bbl.; shore herring, $2.75 per bbl.; Digby herring, 11 to 12½c.; boneless fish, 4c.; boneless cod, 7 to 8c.; pike, 7c.; pickerel, 7c.; ciscoes $1.50 to $1.75 a hundred, black bass 9 to 11c. a pound; finnan haddie, 9c.; perch, 3 to 4c., as to size; suckers, $3 per cwt.; oysters, $1.20 to $1.25 for stds., and $1.75 selects.

HIDES, SKINS, WOOL, TALLOW.

HIDES—Nothing specially new to note. Demand is fair and supply rather light. Car lots of cured have been moving as before at 5¼c. No. 1 cows' is unchanged at 4¼c.

SKINS—Calfskins are quiet and prices are 1c. higher at 9c. There are not many sheepskins coming in and prices are higher at $1.25 to $1.50.

WOOL—There are moderate enquiries from the factories for some grades of wool. Fleeces dull and prices nominal. Pulled wools are only in light demand at 21 to 21½c. for supers and at 26 to 27c. for extras.

TALLOW—Is lower, dealers paying 6½c. and selling at 7 to 7¼c. There is considerable offering, but buyers are not caring much about it.

SEEDS

Orders for red clover, alsike and timothy are numerous but small individually, buyers still pursuing a cautious course. Prime red clover is quoted at $8.85 to $8.94 and extra choice at $9 to $9.15. Alsike runs all the way from $7.05 for good to $8.40 for fancy. Timothy sells at $2.52 to $2.57 for prime to choice, and $2.59 to $2.64 per bushel for choice.

MARKET NOTES.

[Importers, wholesale merchants and manufacturers should send any items intended for this department so that they may reach the head office not later than Wednesday morning. The editor will always welcome such information.]

The Rio News of February 27 says: "The average receipts this month will be nearly 9,500 bags per day, against the estimate made early in the month of 7,500 bags; the high quotations sent from Rio have undoubtedly had a good deal of influence on planters, but whether receipts for the current crop year of 2,500,000 bags, with four months still before us, should lead to an expectation of an export of 3,000,000 bags is as yet a doubtful question."

Some of the New York grocery jobbing houses have reduced prices for dessicated codfish, owing to reduced cost of whole fish in the primary market.

The close of the week found a very unsettled market in New York for evaporated California peaches, but apricots looked firm and apples rather better than they were a short time ago.

"There has been no advance in refined sugars equal to the jump in raws, and it is reasonable to expect that refined will advance more in proportion to that of raw," was the way a broker put it Tuesday.

Eby, Blain & Co. report that their sales of Indian and Ceylon teas have increased 100 per cent. in twelve months.

The California oranges arriving on the Toronto market this season are of much better quality than last year, being heavier. The packers have also adopted a system of grading according to size, which is well pleasing to the trade. Heretofore California

FIRST-CLASS GOODS.

We respectfully ask the trade to recommend this brand to their customers:

oranges were merely known as seedlings and navels.

An exporter told THE GROCER a few days ago that there were still about 5,000 barrels of apples in store here.

New maple syrup is selling here at 80 to 90c. and sugar at 8 to 9c.

Clemes Bros. are receiving two more car loads of Uncas brand Florida oranges. This will probably be the last shipment for the season.

Sterling corn is having quite a sale, and Caverhill, Rose, Hughes & Co. of Montreal, are kept busy supplying the demand.

Tanglefoot is 25c. per case cheaper than a year ago, quotations now being: 1 box, double sheets and two holders, 60c.; 1 case (ten boxes), $5.25.

J. & J. Colman will supply the mustard to be used at the restaurants in the World's Fair grounds, the first order is for 5,000 lbs.

Crosse & Blackwell have received an order to supply 10,000 gallons English pickles to the World's Fair caterers.

For a new firm the Belleville Canning Co. have done remarkably well. Their entire pack is almost entirely sold and they are preparing to double their capacity the coming season. Messrs. Carson and Morden were in Toronto this week purchasing additional plant. Their experience proves that the canning industry may be made profitable if special attention is given to the quality of goods produced.

There will be several new canning factories in Ontario this season.

The West Lorne Canning Co. are advertising for an expert processor.

Perkins, Ince & Co. are advertising special lines in currants and Valencia raisins.

H. P. Eckhardt & Co. have a few cases of "D" Atlas prunes which they are selling at 7½c.

Davidson & Hay have a line of Roberts' English confectionery in stock. That in imitation of fruits, such as peaches and strawberries for instance, are exceptionally fine.

Latest reports from Calcutta via England are to March 15th, and show a tea movement "roughly 3,500,000 pounds less than for the previous season, which, with say 1,000,000 pounds lost, bring up the deficiency of this season's crop to 4,500,000 pounds, as against that of the previous one, whilst about 3,500,000 pounds less of the current crop have been disposed of than that of last year at this period, thus leaving about 1,000,000 pounds less to sell of the present crop than there was at this time last year for 1891-92 crop, the figures for export being cabled at 106,010,000 pounds (less 1,000,000 pounds lost), as against 109,490,000 pounds at corresponding date for 1892. According to the above estimate, there should remain, roughly, about 8,500,000 pounds, or say about 95,- 000 packages of tea not yet offered, to sell of the present crop, which will be varied according to further exports from Calcutta, which, it is expected, will be merely nominal."

Granulated sugar is higher at 5 to 5½c. and yellows at 3½ to 4½c.

Perkins, Ince & Co., Saturday last, received advices by cable that the Japan tea market was expected to open two weeks earlier than usual. This would mean three weeks earlier than last year, when the opening was a week late.

All the Canadian starch manufacturers have advanced prices about 10 per cent.

W. H. Gillard & Co., Hamilton, report steady increasing trade for their Mallawalla, Dalu Kola, Imperial Congou and Russian Congou, and that every customer who has tried them is delighted with the quality.

The Counter Tea Mixer advertised by W. H. Gillard & Co., Hamilton, sometime ago is being sent to every part of the Dominion.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

MONTREAL, April 6, 1893.
GROCERIES.

The week has furnished a good deal more activity in groceries in more ways than one. In the first place there was the reduction in freight rates which went into effect on Monday last, and this, in addition to the shipment of goods ordered some time ago, led to more new business, so that the week has been a fairly active one all round. Then there was the excitement consequent upon the two jumps in the sugar market, and the fact that it has led to an increased demand which contributed to increase the lively feeling, while other lines have furnished some interesting features also. Sugar is now 1-4c. higher all round, with indications pointing to still higher prices, and syrups and molasses show more steadiness also. Tea, coffee and spices are all firm, although business in them is not so great as in sugar still they furnish a fair turnover, and there are signs of increased activity in their case also in the near future. Payments are reported satisfactory with the grocery men generally.

SUGAR

The sugar market has been the most exciting feature in the grocery trade of the week, prices having jumped up on two separate occasions, and it seems likely that values will go even higher. The first advance came on Thursday last, when granulated was advanced to 4 3-4, and this was supplemented on Monday by a further advance of a sixteenth, to 4 13-16, and the market is firm at the higher level. In fact, buyers in the west at least seem to fear that prices will go higher, for refiners report a much freer demand on this account, and this fact, coupled with the fact that freight rates declined to the regular summer level on Monday last, has led to a more active business all round. Refiners' prices now are as follows: Granulated, 4 13-16c.; bright yellows, 4 1-8c.; and low grades 3 3-4c.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Syrups are moving along quietly under a fairly good enquiry, especially good bright stock, but prices are about the same, viz., 1 3-4c. to 2c. per lb.

The local movement in molasses is rather small, but the general position of the market is unchanged. The ruling price for spot goods is about 30c., but one large French house has sent out circulars offering molasses at lower figures. We quote as a nominal range for spot transactions 30c. to 31c.

TEAS.

There is no special activity to note in tea, and as dealers are said to have supplied themselves ahead pretty well, the trade here look for a quiet business in this line for a few weeks to come. Still the jobbers have been moving fair quantities.

FLOUR AND FEED.

TORONTO.

Flour continues dull and quotations are purely nominal. The demand for feed is dropping off somewhat, and bran and shorts are quoted a little lower on track.

FLOUR.—City millers' and dealers' prices are: Manitoba patents, $4.35 to $4.50; strong bakers' $3.75 to $4.00; white wheat patents, $3.50 to $3.75; straight roller, $3.15 to $3.30, low grades, per bag, $1.00 to $1.25; Ontario family $3.35 to $3.85.

Car prices are: Toronto freights—Manitoba patents, $4.30 to $4.50; Manitoba strong bakers' $3.90 to $4.25; Ontario patents, $3.25 to $3.50; straight roller, $3.00 to $3.20; extra, $2.90 to $3.00; low grades, per bag, $1.10 to $1.25.

MEAL—Oatmeal is $4.00. to $4.20 Cornmeal is $3.25 to $3.50.

FEED—Bran (ton lots) $17, ditto (on track) $15, shorts (ton lots) $17 to $18, ditto (on track) $16; mixed feed $20 to $22, feeding corn 57 to 58c., oats 33½ to 34½c.

HAY—Baled timothy, demand is good and supply fair at $9.25 to $9.50.

STRAW—Plentiful and demand limited, at $5.50 to $6.

MONTREAL.

The flour market has made very little progress during the week either in volume of business or in disposition to effect sales. We quote as follows:—Winter wheat $4.00 to $4.25; spring patents $4.25 to $4.35; straight rollers $3.50 to $3.65; extra $3.10 to $3.25; superfine $2.60 to $2.90; city strong bakers' $4 to $4.15; strong bakers' $3.75 to $4.00.

ST. JOHN'S N. B.

There is a fair movement in flour and prices are gradually weakening, as latest quotations will show: Manitoba, $5.10 to $5.20; Ontario high grade, $4.25 to $4.35; medium patents, $4 to $4.15. The oatmeal market is firm at regular prices, $4.40 to $4.50. No change in cornmeal, $2.75 to $2.85. In feed prices rule high and sales correspondingly small, at $24 to $25 per ton.

BURNHAM'S CLAM BOUILLON.

titles, one leading house turning over some 300 packages of Japans between Friday last and Tuesday of this week, which is a pretty good sign. We quote the following range: Low goods, 12c. to 14c.; medium, 15c. to 18 1-2c.; fine, 19c. to 21 1-2c.; and finest 23c. to 31c. Black teas are quiet but firm, and further sales are reported on English account at 7d. to 11 1-2d. A fair demand is reported for green teas at steady prices.

COFFEE AND SPICES.

The local coffee market is firm under a fair enquiry, and we hear of a sale of a round lot of Maracaibo to arrive at 21c. We quote Jamaica, 19c. to 20c.; Maracaibo, 20 1-2c. to 22c.; Rio, 19c. to 21c.; Java, 24c. to 27c., and Mocha, 25c. to 28c., these prices being for strict wholesale lots.

Spices are steady, and we quote pepper 8c. to 9c., Pimento 6 1-2c., and nutmegs 50c. to $1.

RICE.

There is no change in rice, which rules quiet and unchanged. We quote standard, $3.85; choice, $4; Japans, $4.25; Louisiana, $5.25, and Carolina, $7.50.

DRIED FRUIT.

A little better enquiry has been experienced for off-stalk Valencia raisins, good sound common selling at 4 1-4c. for round lots, with prime at 4 1-2c., but no jobbing lots could be moved at these prices. Valencia layers are quiet but steady at 6c., sales being mentioned at that figure. Currants are dull at 5 1-4c. to 5 3-4c., supplies being ample.

FISH.

The local fish market is quiet. The stocks are generally small. One firm has a comparatively large supply of haddock on hand which is not considered very desirable property, and some other holders have rather more herring in their stores than they would wish for, but as stated, the market is not clogged with stock. Prices are nominal under the slow demand. We quote: Haddock, 4c. to 4 1-2c.; lake trout, 7c.; whitefish, 7c. to 7 1-2c.; pickerel and dore, 9c.; dried cod, $5.50; No. 1 green cod, $7; Labrador salmon, $13 to $14; No. 2 Mackerel, $12; do. halves, $7; C. B. and N. S. herring, $4.50 to $4.75; fresh herring, $2 to $2.20 per hundred; haddies, 7 1-2c. to 8c.; Yarmouth bloaters, $1.50 to $2; frozen mackerel, 7c. to 8c.

FRUIT.

Oranges have been in good demand during the week on account of Easter, but there is no change in prices, which are as follows: Messina, $2.50 to $2.75; California, $3 to $3.50; Floridas, $3.75 to $4; Valencias, $4.75 to $5.

Lemons have met with a steady demand from the same cause as the above, and we quote: Fancy, $2.75 to $3; choice, $2.25 to $2.50; common, $1.25 to $2, as to kind and quality.

In dried fruit business has been small and unimportant, and prices are nominal as follows: Dried apples, 5 1-2c. to 6c.; evaporated, 8c. to 9 1-2c.; peaches, 19c. to 21c.;

Bananas are lower in price, choice bunches, $2.50 to $3, and fair to good, $1.25 to $2.

Cocoanuts are selling in round lots at $4 to $4.50, as to quality.

BEANS.

The market is firm but quiet. One or two car lots have been offered without takers during the week, and we quote choice picked $1.60 to $1.65; ordinary to good, $1.25 to $1.50, and inferior, $1 to $1.10.

HONEY.

There has been very little doing in honey, but one dealer has cleaned out all his comb stock during the week and the supply of it here is small. We quote comb, 12 1-2c. to 13c., and extracted, 5 1-2c. to 7c.

MAPLE SYRUP.

Receipts have been small, what little there is offering selling at $1 per gallon. New maple sugar in a small way has sold at 8c. to 8 1-2c.

The market is dull, and prices remain about as last quoted, namely, 18c. Brewers are well supplied, and holders will likely have to accept still lower prices.

POTATOES.

Car lots of potatoes have sold at 90c. to 95c. per barrel, and receipts rule light, but once shipments can be made without heating the cars they will increase, and prices are expected to go lower.

EGGS.

The egg market is still easier, and prices lower under heavy receipts, and a falling off in the demand. In fact 15c. was accepted to-day for moderate sized lots, and round lots could be had for less.

BUTTER AND CHEESE

Cheese continues featureless and uninteresting so far as business is concerned. British advices do not indicate any improvement and afford no encouragement on consigned lots, which no doubt will have to be parted with at cost, and possibly in some cases for less, which must be decidedly disagreeable, in view of the fact that a turnover of 1-2c. per lb. profit was possible during the winter months. This position must be discomfiting to those who held stock up west of Toronto, and it now appears that there is more unsold up there than at first supposed, later news to-day placing the quantity at 6,000 to 8,000 boxes, inclusive of the 2,500 odd which were sent forward last week. Under present conditions the possibility of a profitable turnover for this stock are very uncertain.

Butter remains without any particular change, but there is no improvement in the position, rather the reverse, in fact, owing to the advance in the season. The load here consists solely of creamery and attempts have been made to bolster up prices by purchasing, but it seems doubtful in view of the lateness of the season and the conditions elsewhere that this process will be successful. The best late made creamery sells at 22c. and small parcels at that. The fact that really fine dairy stock is practically worked off the market, and that receipts of new are not likely to be sufficiently large to have any influence for a fortnight at least gives holders some chance to lessen their stocks, but it is a slim one. Good dairy sold on lower province account at fully as high a figure as creamery. The news, however, that some 600 packages of Manitoba stock was on the way is disagreeable to holders, for it is not anticipated to be very high class, and will very likely be offered at a low figure, while no one is certain whether it is the last car load or not. We quote the following as about the range: Choice fall creamery, 21c. to 22c.; creamery seconds, 20c. to 21c.; townships dairy, 21c. to 22c.; Morrisburg and Brockville, 20c. to 22c.; Kamouraska stock, 20c.; western, 20c.

MONTREAL TRADE NOTES.

Representatives of the Edwardsburg, the St. Lawrence, and the British American Starch Companies came to an agreement on Saturday last for an advance of 10 per cent. on all starches.

The sugar refiners put up their prices $\frac{1}{2}$ c. on Thursday and another 1-16c. on Monday, making 3-16c. in all.

Western jobbers have been large buyers of refined sugar on the market during the week, both for granulated and yellows.

There are every indications of another molasses war between the French wholesale houses, one of whom has been offering molasses at considerably under 30c. The quotation appears to be hedged with certain conditions, however, and buyers have not taken advantage of it.

Western grocers have been buying maple sugar and syrup in the Eastern Townships pretty freely for forward delivery, sales of the former being quoted at equivalent to 8 to 8 $\frac{1}{2}$ c. here and of the latter at 60 to 75c. in nice small tins.

Chaput, Fils & Co. are offering some special lines of one-gallon tins of canned tomatoes, corn, apples, etc.

Caverhill, Rose, Hughes & Co. report canned goods quiet and prospects not encouraging, especially for tomatoes.

Regan, White & Co. offer some fine lines of Indian tea.

Tomatoes are a large stock on the market here, and Quintal, Fils & Co. are offering at 80c. per doz. some fine assorted cans.

Lightbound, Ralston & Co. have their usual complete assortment of Japan, Ceylon and China teas available to their large circle of patrons.

ST. JOHN, N. B., MARKETS

ST. JOHN, N.B., April 5, 1893.

Trade shows quite an improvement the past week, and with the opening of navigation on our rivers should still further expand. Sugar is quite firm at late advances. Flour somewhat easier. Provisions are steady. Teas more slow and are without change. Canned goods have a steady demand. Fish market well supplied and easier.

Sugar—The market shows an advance $\frac{1}{2}$ to 3-16c. per lb. and very firm tone. Stocks here are light, and some say price will be still higher. We quote: Granulated $\frac{1}{2}$ to 5c., extra C $\frac{3}{4}$ to 4c., yellows $\frac{3}{4}$ to 3 $\frac{1}{2}$ c.

Rice—The market here is some easier and is moving slow. The price quoted is 3 $\frac{1}{2}$ to 3 $\frac{3}{4}$ c.

Dried Fruit—Very little change in values. Off-stalk raisins are selling at 5 to 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ c., Valencia layers 6 to 6 $\frac{1}{2}$ c., prunes 7 $\frac{1}{4}$ to 8 $\frac{1}{2}$ c., dates 5 to 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ c.

Evaporated Apples—Are quoted at 9 to 11c., dried apples 6 to 6 $\frac{1}{2}$ c.

Eggs—Market well supplied, prices steady at 16 to 18c.

Butter—Offering more freely and is selling at 19 to 22c.

Cheese—Choice late make is getting scarce and selling readily at 11 to 11 $\frac{1}{2}$ c., some is offering at 10 $\frac{1}{2}$ to 11c.

Fish—The demand is light and prices have eased off some. Dry Cod, large, are selling at $4.50 to $4.75, medium cod, $3.90 to $4.25, pollock $2.25 to $2.40, smoked herring scarce and higher at 9 to 11c.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Col. McAlpine, the well-known tobacco manufacturer of New York, was at the Queen's hotel last week.

Lloyd Mewburn, of James Turner & Co., Hamilton, is doing the Prairie Province in the interests of his firm.

John Westren, of Westren & Jones, grocers, 419 Yonge street, has been laid up for several weeks with bronchitis.

W. J. Smith, who runs a large general store in Cannington, was in the city last week. He reports business good with him.

Mrs. J. Bond, wife of J. Bond, Gerrard and Seaton streets, has been suffering from a severe cold for two weeks, but is now improving.

J. S. Leighton, Orangeville, a leading merchant of that thriving inland town, was one of the prominent figures in the late Orange Grand Lodge Assembly.

Among the outside buyers who have been in the city during the week are: T. Ballyntine, of Georgetown; G. H. Falconer, of Streetsville; E. L. Farr, of Toronto Junction.

Robert Barron, ex-president of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association, left last week for a two months' holiday in Scotland. It is also his intention to visit a few of the leading grocery centres abroad.

Mr. Charles P. Clemes, an old Port Hope boy, but now a full-fledged resident of Gotham, was in town yesterday. Mr. Clemes represents Messrs. Frederick de Barry & Co., of 41 and 43 Warren street, New York, agents for G. H. Mumm & Co.'s extra dry champagne. Mr. Clemes bears out the old saying that Canadian boys make the smartest sales agents for U.S. houses.—Toronto World.

Green, Bowles & Co., of Orangeville, report that trade has increased to a very satisfactory extent. The Patron Store, established some months ago, does not seem to have affected the trade of this firm, and there as elsewhere it is only a question of time when consumers will realize that it pays them to deal with firms doing business on business principles.

George E. Church, general merchant, Burk's Falls, was in the city this week buying spring goods. They have had a fair winter's trade in all the northern country, but Christmas trade was not as satisfactory. He manufactures an improved cheese safe. It is octagonal in shape, six sides being glass and the other two perforated tin. It attaches to a rope and weight by which it is drawn up clear of the cheese. It is made of ash and sells at $5 packed in a crate.

Alexander Turner, of the firm of James Turner & Co., Hamilton, was in Toronto Tuesday. His mission was principally in regard to a portrait of the head of the Hamilton Provident. Between the puffs of his cigar he told THE GROCER that business in Hamilton, like that in Toronto, was quiet on account of the bad roads, but that a good trade was expected in a few weeks. Business, he says, has been on the whole fairly satisfactory the past winter with the retail merchants of the Ambitious City.

J. A. Killackie, who runs the grocery store at Parliament and Sydenham streets, formerly kept by Mr. Hall, has been laid up for a week or two with inflammation. He is slowly recovering.

ACADIAN SUGAR REFINERY BILL.

The Committee on Private Bills of the Nova Scotia Legislature met in Halifax one day last week for the purpose of hearing argument in favor of the bill to amalgamate the three sugar refineries of the Maritime Provinces.

Mr. Harris, Q. C., who appeared for the company, said that the bill to incorporate the Acadia Sugar Refinery Company contained no clauses which the legislature was not competent to pass and had not frequently granted to other companies, and that he could not conceive of any reasonable objection to it on any public grounds. The facts of the case were that the three refineries interested, those of Halifax, Dartmouth and Moncton, had not been able to make any money for the past three years. If he went into the history of sugar refining in the lower provinces we would find that the refinery at Woodside had been wiped out of existence twice, and a large amount of capital had been sunk in it. That of Halifax had been wiped out once, involving another large loss of money, and the Moncton refinery had never made anything for the shareholders. The Halifax refinery, after it had been closed, was bought up at a very low figure, and under new management had been able to make large returns to the stockholders for two years, but this was largely a matter of luck. But as he had said before none of the three refineries which sought amalgamation by the bill had made anything for the past three years. There were six refineries in the Dominion, one on the Pacific Coast, two at Montreal, and the three in the Maritime Provinces. The two refineries at Montreal refined three times as much sugar as the three down here. Because of their large production and cheaper management it was impossible for our refineries to compete with them. The object of the bill was to lessen the expenses of our refineries so as to enable them to compete with their Montreal rivals. In order to preserve the existence of the Halifax, Dartmouth and Moncton refineries they must be amalgamaed under one management. It was the only way by which the shareholders could save the money they had invested. There would be one board of directors instead of three, which would be a large saving, and besides this one business staff would do the work of the three which now exist. The committee would be surprised to learn the amount of money expended by the three refineries in the purchase of raw sugars. It amounted to three and a half millions a year. They consumed 50,000 tons of coal. If the three refineries were brought under one management it was felt that a large saving could be made on purchases. Each refinery now keeps an agent in each of the principal cities of the Dominion. These men are being paid for work that one man would do if the refineries were amalgamated. A saving would be made on insurance which now costs $25,000 a year. If this amalgamation took place there would be a distribution and classification in the purchase and refining of different kinds of sugar which would tend to more effective and profitable management. In several ways expenses would be largely reduced and a prospect of fair dividends would be opened up which do not exist now.

In reply to a question he said that he thought the consumers could not be hurt by having the cost of the production decreased. Seventy-five per cent. of the sugar produced by these three refineries is sold west of the Maritime Provinces. If they tried to raise the price of sugar down here the Montreal refineries would at once send their sugar down and block the game. As an illustration of the keenness of competition, and the suddenness with which commercial men take advantage of a rise in the market of any commodity in which they are interested, he said that last summer the Chicago dealers raised the price of sugar, and immediately the Nova Scotia refinery sent 20,000 barrels to that market, clearing handsomely by the transaction. But down went the price, and the Chicago dealers found their efforts to squeeze consumers fruitless. He contended that it would be utterly impossible for the Acadia Sugar Refinery Company to raise the price to the consumers a sixteenth part of a cent. And that was not the intention. It was simply to consolidate management and save expenses, so as to keep from being swamped, that the bill was before the legislature. They wanted to reduce the cost of production so as to be able to compete with Montreal. It just came to this point, that if they could not do this they must go to the wall and close down completely. That was the sole question. He said that it had happened that a cargo of raw sugar coming into Halifax was competed for by the three refineries, with the result that the cost of the cargo was increased. In this case he could not see any advantage to the consumer by the competition. The Montreal refineries, by doing business on a much larger scale than any of our refineries, could possibly produce cheaper, and there could be no equal competition with them. But by amalgamating our refineries this could be done and their existence saved.

Ald. Boak stated to the committee that the Nova Scotia did not pay a dividend of one per cent. last year, the Dartmouth refinery had declared none at all, and neither had the Moncton refinery. As a matter of fact not one of these refineries had made any money for the past three years.

The committee will again consider the matter.

SPICES.

Considerable confusion exists in the minds of many people as to the nature of spices. Most of these possess a lightly stimulating effect, and are actual aids to digestion. Of the common spices, nutmeg is probably the most used, says a contemporary. It is a native of the Molucca or Spice Islands, and grows directly under the Equator. Mace is the inner coat lining of the hull of the nutmeg. The nutmeg in its coat of mace, with the outer hull surrounding it is often displayed as a curiosity in spice shops. There are two kinds of nutmegs—the long, slender shape, which grows wild, and the round, which is a cultivated nut.

The latter is more oily and much better than the wild nutmeg. By scraping the side of a nutmeg with the finger and noticing whether the oil flows, we can guard against the worst fraud in this spice—the “soaked” nutmeg. Large quantities of nutmeg and other spices which are bought are soaked in water to relieve them of their oil. These are afterwards sold, of course at a low price, but they have lost their efficacy as a spice in losing their oil and are little better than the celebrated wooden nutmegs. Always begin grating at the flower end of the nutmeg, instead of the stem.

The clove tree grows all over the tropical world, and the clove of commerce is the unexpanded flower-bud of the tree, and is the most fragrant of any part of it.

Cinnamon spice is the inner bark of the cinnamon tree. It grows in China and Ceylon, and is cultivated in the West Indies and South America. A good deal of the heavier, coarser bark, and the coarse bark of the cassia tree is sold as cinnamon. The best cinnamon is hardly thicker than paper, and is of rather light color.

Allspice, unlike other spices, is a berry. It is gathered when it is still green and dried in the sun. Jamaica allspice is among the best. It is of a mild flavor and is not very much used in the cookery of to-day.

The flower buds of the cassia tree are imported in considerable quantities annually, and are used chiefly in cooking for flavoring sweet pickles, to which they impart a delicate flavor, different from cinnamon.

Ginger, as everyone knows, is a root which grows all over the tropical world, in Asia, Africa and America. White ginger is composed of the best part of the root, from which the outer skin has been taken off. The ground ginger of commerce is largely adulterated with tumeric, flour, and various cheaper materials.

In buying spices it is always cheaper to buy the best known brands.

ASSOCIATION GOSSIP.

The Southern Wholesale Grocers' Association completed its second annual meeting at St. Louis on the 25th ult. The committee on direct importation through Southern ports and the Nicaragua committee made several reports, which were adopted. J. H. Martin, of Memphis, Tenn., was unanimously elected president, but he declined to serve, and placed in nomination T. O. Morris, of Nashville, Tenn., who was made the unanimous choice of the convention. Other officers elected were as follows: First vice-president, E. G. Leigh, Jr., of Richmond, Va.; second vice-president, E. G. Scudder, of St. Louis.

The members of the Coventry Grocers' Association has decided to continue to sell granulated sugar at a fixed price. It appears that some of the members had broken the agreement first made on account of the competition of non-members.

At the annual meeting of the Blackburn and District Retail Grocers' Association the report among other things said: “We want all workers, and no drones. Grocers' associations must eventually be a benefit to every grocer. Take the paper-weighing case in Wolverhampton. Through the work and energy of that association in defending one of its members who was prosecuted for weighing paper with sugar, it is now recognized as perfectly legal to weigh paper with every article sold. This trial entailed considerable expense, and every grocer throughout the country has been benefited by their action, and your committee thought they could do no less than forward one guinea to Wolverhampton towards that expense. If they could have afforded it they would have sent more.”

The Hartepools Grocers' Association is already taking steps to dispense with gifts next Christmas, and a number of storekeepers have already pledged themselves. There is nothing like taking time by the forelock.

The early closing movement seems to be making good progress in England. At the annual meeting of the Liverpool Association the president said that it had brought a ray of sunshine into most of their lives. Some of them, he thought, were getting too old to reap much of the advantage of the system of shorter hours which he expected they would be enjoying within the next few years; but the prospect of greater leisure was cheering and encouraging to most of them. Many of them had been slaves all their lives, and they could not help feeling hopeful and thankful that the time was soon coming when they would be no longer required to lead the lives of slaves behind the counters, but that their assistants and sons would soon have leisure from the work which would otherwise become wearisome and irksome to them. Half-past seven instead of nine or nine-thirty was a very considerable improvement. He felt certain that the time might be made in regard to the ad come when a considerable curtailment of closing on Fridays and Saturdays.

CRITIQUES ISSUE MARCH 31.

Maclaren of cheese fame gave us a call the other day. He is a good specimen of the go-a-head Canuck, and his cheese is of course “the best.” He gave us the proper grip and asked us up to Stratford, which was brotherly, anyway.

The article on canned lobster ought to be interesting to the pretty customer who declares that she can buy a whole lobster for 20c. when you ask her that sum for a can.

That article on “The Tea Expert” is all right, only in civilized stores they surely provide spoons for tasters to sip with. Drinking out of the same cup with some persons is certainly not nice, nor is it proper to do so with anyone.

Colman of mustard notoriety must be as good as his celebrated product. That is a high plane on which to live and pretty hot too.

The pedlars' evil is an important one, but not quite so blue as painted by that King street merchant. The pedlars have not made business so unprofitable, but rather the storekeepers themselves, by reason of their senseless cutting and slashing. If half the work put into suppressing peddling, had been employed in cleaning up old stock, and pushing good goods at fair prices, there would be more satisfaction on hand now.

Yes, nic-nacs pay. Crowd them in, boys, and push them for all they are worth; for instance, tacks pay better than coal oil, and do not flavor everything within long range.

If starch would only go up; we have such a nice supply.

That everlasting burden to the storekeeper—something for a leader, is very well written about in the article “What Have You to Sell?” There is no use talking, but active, energetic wits are what is required in the trade. There are so many stores that if you are the same-looking as they are you will make no great mark. Chalk out a distinctive course and work it up incessantly, and success will surely follow.

TRADE FAKIRS.

The present is the century of revolution—it is as well the age of evolution, remarks a contemporary. It is a revolution of ideas—ideas of business, ideas of life, ideas of all departments of science, ideas appertaining to all the many things with which men deal in the material and mental world. It is the day of evolution, when man, dissatisfied with the incompleteness of finite, seeks relief in setting up a theory as to the birth of all things, and tracing the progress of development through successive stages until they reached a present standard of excellence. And it is interesting. Business has been completely revolutionized as civilization has advanced, and new ideas are being continually developed to lighten burdens and to dispatch work. It is the result of a natural revolution, but one which has not yet been put into written record, and it may not be necessary. The essential is that "it is." Business progress is commercial greatness, and commercial greatness is national prosperity. It tells its own story; it writes its own history; it stamps itself upon the earth with buzzing wheels, whirring belts and rumbling machinery, and men of muscle and of mind combine to transmit it all to posterity. Yet the written history of its evolution would be valuable.

For instance, it would be of interest to know who was the first business man, what pursuit he was engaged in and what were his methods of conducting business. It would be a difficult matter to answer such questions and then to trace that particular line of business in all its development in all countries from that time to the present. The theory of the descent of man, as indicated in the principles of evolution promulgated by Darwin, is somewhat analogous and comparative. Then there are modern lines of business and modern methods of carrying them on. Who can conceive of the countless ages which have been the father to their birth? Take the "drummers" or commercial travellers—those steam engines of trade to-day. Competition in business, extension of trade and desire for greater business evolved them, and a continuation of these with present necessities will continue them in existence. Then there is the entrance of women into business in large numbers, with the problems and theories thereby created for consideration and solution, competing as they do, not only with the commercial men, but men in many branches of trade—who will write the history of their influence and activity? To give the date of their appearance upon the stage of commercial activity, to write of their indispensableness to trade, to enumerate businesses built up by them and now dependent upon their efforts, is to go back many years, and to put in black and white that which is already known and admitted.

And the fakir—what of him? Whence came he? Who was his godfather? Who is responsible for his birth and existence? Has he a father? has he a mother? What is he, what does he and how does he? How many of these questions have been answered? Who has attempted to answer them all, and how truthfully or with what success? Is it sufficient to say—to admit—that he exists; that he is an actuality, an accomplished fact and not a theoretical being or phantom of the imagination, and let it go at that? Is he not rather a part, a feature of trade, and as such deserving of recognition? What treatise on modern methods of business would be complete without one chapter appropriated to the history of fakirs, if not for the field they cover, the burdens they bear, or the necessity they are, then at least for the uniqueness of their position, the novelty of their methods, and their general relation to trade?

There are different kinds of fakirs, and while some endure the most horrible tortures, subject themselves to terrible humiliations and perform extreme penances, others are highly regarded by their countrymen and are reputed to have great powers of jugglery. One class in particular is highly honored. It includes the children of poor parents who pass their lives in retirement in mosques devoted to the reading of the Koran and the study of the laws until they become qualified for the duties of Mollahs or teachers of theology. In their religious belief they are divided into Mutekelim and Sofis. Their succession is hereditary, and extends from the "Muhrid" to the "Taj."

Whether or not the modern fakir is descended from the fakirs of India or have coursing through their veins any of the royal blood of the king fakirs of Egypt, or have a genealogical connection with the Mollahs or Rufai, it is impossible to say, but enough is given of the traits and habits of the fakirs of the East to show the connection or resemblance, if any, which the fakir of those countries has to the American fakir of modern trade. If the latter has no consanguineal connection with them, there are some similarities between the two which would lead to the supposition that the term smirking of jugglery deception, theft and imposition, cunning and shrewdness, lowliness of birth and humbleness of application, has been snatched from its Eastern and romantic surroundings and made to do service in the Western world of business as a cognomen of the commercial fakir. "El fakr fakhri," said the Prophet. That is the real origin of the name of fakir, and our fakir of to-day carries emblazoned, not upon any banner held aloft, but upon his whole person and attire, the English translation, "Poverty is my pride."

As we have seen, there are fakirs and fakirs, but the fakir to whom we would call attention is the type of that class which is so common to, and yet about which so little is known by the average New Yorker. He is a modern production, and trade evolved him. He is not a nonentity, yet he is dispensable, and while dispensable, is doubtless a fixture. He has grown year by year, and his food has been the carrion of failures—the more of them the more he waxes. He is some men's friend, and all men's enemy. His business conflicts with honest, heavily taxed, burden enduring tradesmen and good citizens. He corrupts trade, yet is part of and adds to it. He is the outlet for the disposition of otherwise unsalable goods. He is the bankrupt's friend and the pedestrian's worst enemy. He is a highwayman in a civilized country, a thief on the city's curbstones, an extortioner and deceiver who makes guileless youths and men, who should know better, pay good money for worthless or damaged goods.

He comes from dives by day to play at the fancy game of gulling a witless public, and sleeps himself in the same dive by night to rehabilitate his capacity for pursuing his daily occupation in the morning at the curb toy shop. Yet he is considered by some as the beginning and the end of trade—the first and the last, the Alpha and Omega of commercial activity and material prosperity. Possibly he is, but it is in the very limited sense that he disposes of goods—trash is a better name—which have failed for one reason or another to command a sale through the regular channels of trade, and gets rid of others which cannot and never have reached those channels. The fakirs of India are said to number 1,000,000, and there are estimated to be at least 10,000 of the modern fakir in the metropolis. In spite of their lowly life, their humble occupation and the rough treatment which they sometimes receive, they are on the whole a jolly set when off the street and gathered together in their rendezvous at supply headquarters.

The majority of them are in business for themselves on a very small scale, while a small number, say 200 or 300, work on commission for a syndicate. None of these are known to their fellows by their correct names. Nicknames are the fashion, the name generally having reference to some fad to which they are known to be attached or some incident which has occurred in their lives. Fakirs are not all of local production. They are travellers, tourists, and go from one city to another, but wherever they go and wherever they are located they are known and called by their nickname. Look in upon them some time and listen as they talk to one another. Their words are all slang and almost incomprehensible to the general understanding, while each is called by the sobriquet with which he has been dubbed. "Dickeye," "Kid," "Buster," "Topsy," "Plum," "Ju-Ju," "The Jew," and "Darby" are specimens of the names which will be heard.

One thing in particular should be impressed upon clerks—the necessity of careful attention to small customers

HOW BOTH WAYS WORK.

Lionel rules are more apt to mark the policy of a mutton head than of a wise business man, says an exchange. It is a good rule never to be out of any staple article, but to make it a rule, as has been done, never to admit that an article asked for is not in stock, is a poor one.

Here's a case in point. A customer quite well versed in molasses asked a grocer with whom he traded a good deal if he had some nice New Orleans molasses. The reply was: "I suppose I have some of the finest New Orleans molasses that ever came to this town." It was bought, and it turned out to be Porto Rica or Demerara, or something else, certainly not New Orleans.

Later on the customer called for the article desired at a neighboring store. The reply was:

"We have some New Orleans, but not a very fine quality. In a few days we shall have some new crop in that will probably suit you better, if you want a nice article and can wait."

The customer could wait, and thereafter bought not only his molasses but all other supplies of this grocer.

Such little acts of humbuggery seem inexpressibly short-sighted and foolish. They are so easily detected that the chance of fooling anyone except very briefly, is really quite small.

Mankind is suspicious anyhow, and expects to be cheated at every turn. Business confidence is a plant of slow growth and once wrecked can hardly be put together again.

A grocer's trade is not transient. He does not rely upon making one big sale and never seeing his customer again. He must have the steady, constant patronage of the same people day after day. He, then, perhaps more than any other class of tradesman, needs to see carefully to it that his goods are exactly as represented, and to remember that he cannot be too particular to get and keep the good-will, respect and confidence of his customers.

Mr. James Morgan, Sr., died the other day at his residence at Maisonneuve after a brief illness from bronchitis. THE ADVANCE IN SUGAR.

During the past week or ten days there has been a very material improvement in the price of sugar. In London, the world's great sugar market, there has been an advance of 4½d per hundred-weight, while in New York there has been a gain of ½c. The principal improvement, however, has been in Cuba, and as the bulk of the next six months' supply for this country is to come from that island, the significance of the great firmness there will be realized. It will be remembered that during the marketing of the Louisiana crop there was a very large demand from speculators and dealers, who had such confidence in the statistical position of sugars that they were willing to lay by liberal stocks, in the confident expectation of being able to sell at a good profit during the summer months. As matters now stand this confidence appears to have been fully warranted, and there is reason to hope that the sugar taken off the market during the busy season will net a good profit to its possessors. The successful outcome of the speculative movement of last winter will be of advantage to the sale of the next crop, because if the dealers and speculators meet with good fortune in their transactions the present season, they will be prepared to again take a hand in the handling of next season's crop. The great advantage of this speculative trade in marketing the crop was made very apparent a few months back as it not only furnished healthy competition, but kept up a range of prices which netted most satisfactory results to the Louisiana sugar planters.—New Orleans Picayune.

The announcement made by the Medical Health Officer of this city that he proposes to institute a vigorous inspection of the business part of the city should induce all concerned to anticipate him by giving their warehouses, yards and back lanes a thorough overhauling before the advent of his minions. Damp and unhealthy cellars and warehouses, defective plumbing and drainage, and leaking gas pipes, dirty yards and lanes, are what should be especially looked after, for it is these things particularly that Dr. Sheard specifies as needing attention. The matter requires immediate attention. Spring is with us, and summer will soon be here, and—as long as the disease lingers at shipping ports—there is a possibility of cholera accompanying it. Admirable preparations are being made by the federal and provincial health authorities to keep the disease outside of the country, and while they are on guard at the portals it is the duty of all inside to see that nothing is allowed to exist upon which germs may subsist and thrive should they escape the vigilance of the health officers at the ports of entry. Looking at the matter from a more selfish point of view, business men should endeavor to put their premises in a presentable shape before being officially requested to do so, for official notification may mean publicity, and publicity in turn would probably mean loss of custom.

An abstract resolution regarding early closing was recently adopted by the British House of Commons. It was fathered by Sir John Lubbock, the well-known advocate of early closing, and read: "That, in the opinion of this House, the excessive and unnecessarily long hours of labor in shops are injurious to the comfort, health, and well-being of all concerned; and that it is desirable to give to local authorities such powers as may be necessary to enable them to carry out the general wishes of the shopkeeping community with reference to the hours of closing." While it is evident that the House favors early closing it is doubtful whether it would go so far as to enact a measure clothing municipal bodies with power to compel Brown to close his store at a stipulated hour because Smith and Jones wanted to close theirs. Liberty of the subject is much prized by the average British parliamentarian, and he probably did not recognize the last clause that Sir John had adroitly tacked on to his resolution, or if he did he did not probably take the trouble of raising an objection, seeing that the motion was a mere expression of opinion.

The question of compulsory early closing is a delicate one. Even if men realize that a certain course or action they are taking is wrong they object to being made do what somebody else conceives to be right. It may not be a good trait but it is human nature. Persuasion has a greater force with the average man than coercion. But in the matter of keeping a store open till a late hour every night, the law will have a difficult task to make a man believe that it is a misdemeanor against society and should be punishable by either fine or imprisonment. Excessively long hours are no doubt injurious to the health of the storekeeper and to his clerks, who are, against their wills, compelled to share them with him. And it might be argued from this premise that the Government, whose office it is to protect the health as well as the property of the subject, should step in and compel a stricter observance of the laws of Nature. There is evidently some sense in this line of reasoning, but after all the desideratum of early closing will be secured with less friction and more satisfactorily by persuasion and example than by coercion. It has already accomplished much, and it is destined to accomplish a good deal more.

Interest in the liquor question seems to be taking on new life these days. Prohibitionists are putting their pens to paper with fresh vigor, Dr. Rainsford of New York proposes that the Church launch into the business, South Carolina will open State bar-rooms on July 1 and close up all being run by private individuals, and now G. F. Marter, who represents Muskoka in the Local Legislature, proposes to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquor by retail. The principle of State management of the liquor business is neither new in theory nor in practice. In Sweden, for instance, there is in vogue what is known as the Gothenburg system, whose distinctive purpose is to extinguish private ownership and control of the traffic in spirits, and to transfer it and the resulting profits to the municipality, but the sale of beer retail is left almost wholly in the hands of private individuals. Practically the same system also obtains in Norway, only in that country, instead of turning all the profits into the town treasury they are used as far as possible to the encouragement of benevolent, educational and similar enterprises.

One of the drawbacks to an extended trade between Canada and other portions of the British Empire has been the lack of efficient ocean service. The fast service put on the Pacific by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company is already proving fruitful of good results. Now, information comes from Ottawa that arrangements are about completed for better service between this country and Australasia. Huddart, Parker & Co., an Anglo-Australian steamship firm, having agreed with the Canadian Government to supply a monthly service between Vancouver and Sydney. Two steamers, each of 3,300 tons, and capable of carrying 130 cabin passengers, will be placed on the route. May 10 is the date on which the first steamer will sail. The steamship company is to get a subsidy of £25,000 per annum. The arrangement is for one year, and is subject to renewal for three years. The boats will touch at the Hawaiian Islands on both inward and outward trips. An opportunity will now be afforded of testing the possibilities of trade extension between Canada and Australia, the two greatest offsprings of the motherland. So far this trade has been of a limited nature. Last year Australia took, all told, less than half a million dollars' worth of goods from us, while our purchases, on the other hand, from them were still smaller, being only $264,701. In lumber, laths, deals, and such articles alone they took nearly that much from us. Among other things we sold them $89,276 worth of canned salmon, $900 worth of soap, $923 worth of oil cake, $21,825 worth of organs, $8,025 worth of pianos, $1,532 worth of whiskey, $4,408 worth of coal. Australia and New Zealand took between them agricultural implements to the value of over $66,000. Our purchases in Australia were practically confined to wool, out of $264,701 total imports all but $685 being in that article. And of this balance $550 was settlers' effects, $135 books, $43 watches, $21 post office parcels, $18 jewelry. The result of the new service will be awaited with general interest, for all lines of trade are more or less concerned in its success.

While thinking of our own affairs we often forget the troubles of others. Lately the grocery and general trade of the province has been somewhat exercised by the efforts that are being made to induce the Local Legislature to make the sale of patent medicines by those other than qualified druggists a misdemeanor. In England, however, the conditions are much more grievous. The present Pharmacy Act there has been in force since 1868, but it is only comparatively recently that its provisions were found to be extensive enough to prevent the sale of patent medicines by grocers. The revelation came during a test case before the courts. The grocery organizations gracefully accepted the inevitable, and agreed to comply with the new rendering of the law. Under such conditions it is usual to drop cases wherein breaches of the law were made before the test was entered upon. But not so with the British Pharmaceutical Society. It had tasted of the sweets of victory and wanted more. To satisfy this it raked up some old cases and succeeded in getting fines imposed. Naturally a good deal of surprise and indignation was expressed at this remarkable action.

• • •

If there is one thing more than another that is essential to success in business it is system. A man may have capital, experience, adaptability, and yet if he lacks in this one particular he will either in time fail or drag out an existence till the end of his day like an antiquated old hulk that, through fortunate circumstances, has been enabled to reach its final anchorage without going to the bottom. System means a place for everything and everything in its place; 'a time for everything and everything done on time. From Monday morning to Saturday night a set time should as far as possible be set for the performance of every duty, be you clerk or storekeeper. Fifty per cent. more work can be accomplished with system than without it, and that too with the expenditure of proportionately less energy. It is, in a word, the lubricator that facilitates the performance of the round of daily business. Without it all is "fuss and feathers," and the consequent friction wears out before their time numbers of active business men, while those who are without either system or active temperaments become coated with rust and at last crumble away.

Good news comes to the pork and flour dealers of the country from Newfoundland. The Government of that colony has succeeded in getting through the year with a balance on the right side of its cash book. The surplus is $215,000, and, in view of this, the Government feels warranted in announcing a reduction of five cents a barrel in the duty on flour and of twenty-five cents a barrel in the duty on pork. During the year ending June 30 last Canada sent to Newfoundland 126,746 barrels of flour valued at $593,729, and 81,292 pounds of pork valued at $4,468. With the more amiable feeling between Canada and Newfoundland and the lower duties on these two articles we ought to be able to do a larger business with the sister colony down in the gulf.

CHATS WITH BUSINESS MEN.

"Yes, the petition asking that the pedlars license fee be not reduced is being largely signed," said Secretary Corrie, of the Retail Grocers' Association on Saturday. "But the other day I met one storekeeper who refused to sign. 'I would,' said he, 'be willing to sign provided you will also get a by-law passed stopping wholesale fruit men from selling at the close of the day to pedlars at lower prices what is left after they have supplied us grocers, thus giving them a chance to undersell us.' There is no doubt," meditatively added Mr. Corrie, as he stroked his big military moustache, "that a good deal of harm is done the trade by the practice, but the question is, 'What are you going to do about it?'"

"I like to saunter into the sample rooms of the big wholesale houses on a Saturday morning when the travelers are engaged in replenishing their samples. Some of them generally have a yarn to spin or an incident to relate. Last Saturday they could about all talk freely on one subject—the bad roads. I gathered that up to the previous Thursday the (the roads, of course) had been gradually getting dry and in a more passable condition, but that the snowfall of that day and the accompanying thaw had put to naught a good deal of the work done by old Sol during the preceding week or so. Business, they told me, was quiet, but promising.

"Say, but you ought to have seen Port Hope last Monday," remarked Mr. Lawson, who travels east for Sloan & Crowther. "It was literally jammed full of commercial travellers. Old heads say there were never so many there before in a single day. How far that is true, I cannot say, but one thing I do know: The number was so large as to cause general comment," added Mr. Lawson, as he rose from his chair and seated himself on a desk, at the same time clasping his hands over his right knee.

I fell into conversation with a traveller last week regarding a general merchant who does an extensive business in a prosperous town north-east of here. He is an old acquaintance of mine, and I know that travellers find it difficult to get along with him. On referring to this peculiarity the C. M. remarked, with a laugh and a knowing shake of the head: "Oh, you can't tell me anything about him. I'm on to him all right. In fact all the boys are for that matter. And what is more, we all lay out to do him up, and we usually succeed too, sharp as he is. Not only does he try to beat you down in price to a point actually below cost, but he will try and keep you dancing attendance on him all day. And then he's a perfect hog for cigars and beer, and is not at all backward in asking you to set 'em up. He held a traveller for an English house three days, and, would you believe it, he then let him go without giving him an order. As far as I am concerned I call on all my other customers in the town before dropping in to see him. And if I have not time before the train goes, why I don't go near him at all. That's the only way to handle him. And do you know very few of the boys would call on him at all were it not for the fact that when you do get an order out of him it's a pretty big one.

BYSTANDER.

RETAIL GROCERS' ASSOCIATION.

The Retail Grocers' Association at its meeting on Monday night decided that in future seven members shall constitute a quorum instead of eleven as formerly. Mr. A. G. Booth introduced the subject and President Clark and Mr. Robert Mills supported it.

On motion of Mr. McMillan, and seconded by Mr. Booth, these were elected members of the Association: T. R. Allison, Bloor street west; T. Babe, 1380 Queen street west; J. W. Wardell, 313 King street west; J. Malcolm, Spadina avenue.

Mr. Martin McMillan reported that he had, as instructed by the Association, looked around for a suitable hall. Such, to his mind, he had found in the Oddfellows' hall, College and Yonge streets. The hall was well lighted and heated, and could be secured any Monday night in the month. The rent would be $2.50 per month. He moved the adoption of the report.

Mr. Robert Mills, as a member of the Committee, urged delay. The hall, however, was suitable to him if the members present were satisfied.

Mr. Booth said ditto to Mr. Mills' last sentence, and so did several members present.

The motion was carried unanimously, and the next meeting will be held in the new quarters.

On motion of Mr. R. Donald, the Executive Committee was instructed to make arrangements for opening the next meeting with a suitable entertainment, and to issue a general invitation to the trade, both wholesale and retail.

Mr. Mills reported that the balance remaining on hand from the At Home had been deposited in the trust fund of the Association.

Secretary Corrie read a letter from the Morse Soap Co. urging the Association to adopt a uniform price for "Mottled" soap.

Mr. Mills wanted to know if any of the dry goods houses were selling "Mottled" soap, and not getting the desired information he moved that the communication be acknowledged and filed.

Mr. Roberts, in seconding the motion, said that, while he considered the suggestion a good one, yet he thought that the carrying of it out lay with the soap company.

Mr. Mills' motion prevailed.

Mr. Roberts brought up the subject of the annual outing, and moved that the Executive Committee be requested to arrange for holding an excursion by water.

Mr. Sinclair seconded the motion, and it was carried unanimously.

The Executive Committee recommended that the secretary be paid $100 per annum, a hundred paid up members to be the basis, he to get a commission of 50 per cent. for all over that number, and 50 per cent. on all members coming in this year, dues being paid. The recommendation was adopted.

ARTIFICIAL EGGS.

According to the newspapers a Philadelphian named Gross has discovered a process for making eggs. He has worked with models, and the results, it is said, are so satisfactory that he will establish a factory in Philadelphia at once. He claims he can make the eggs for 8 cents per dozen and they can be sold for a good profit at 10 cents all the year round. He guarantees that they will never spoil, and, whether fresh or old, they will always taste like a newly laid egg, and will build up as much tissue in the human frame, if eaten, as the genuine. The only thing Mr. Gross fears is that as soon as he is launched in the manufacture of eggs the farmers will combine and have a law passed knocking him out, as they have floored the oleomargarine men.

The shells are made out of paper mache baked hard and cast in molds the shape of an egg. A small hole is left in one end, and first the white is put in and then the yolk. The manufacture of the shell is simple enough, but Mr. Gross declines to tell by what process or out of what materials he produces the interior of the egg. He says he has applied for a patent and this part of his invention must remain a secret until his rights are secured.

One defect in the method of manufacture must yet be overcome, and Mr. Gross thinks he can successfully accomplish the feat in time. After the contents of the egg are put inside, the difficulty is to seal it. At present the seal is easily broken, especially if the egg is boiled. Speaking of the arrangement inside, Mr. Gross said that the yolk is likely to be in any position, but under no circumstances will the white and yolk mix. In some eggs he had broken the yolk was found in the centre, in others it was in one of the ends.

Mr. Gross claimed for his egg all the virtues possessed by the real article. It can be used for all purposes in cookery. It can be beaten like the hens' eggs, and assists in producing delicious cakes of all kinds. The white may be used for frostings and icings, and, lastly, the manufactured egg may be served on the table. It is easily boiled, fried, poached or scrambled.—Merchants' Review.

TESTING TEA IN POTS.

DEAR GROCER,—I noticed in this week's GROCER a couple of remarks, ("Straight Moyune's" dissertations), one referring to the article on "The Tea Expert." Perhaps "Straight Moyune" has forgotten that sometimes "pots" as well as "cups" are used in testing tea. In such cases the leaf is left in the pot, the liquor is poured off into the cup, thus separating 'hem. (This way of testing teas is considered by the oldest experts the best and the surest way, in fact, in London, Eng., they test teas there by no other way. The cup fashion is purely American, as Japan and Green teas are more easily judged than black teas, and the Americans use very little black teas, hence it is they are less careful in testing teas than in Great Britain.) Spoons are generally used in tasting, although I have seen some who prefer taking up the cup to taste, but it is very rare that experts care to "mouth" it so much. The pot is lifted and brought to the nose to smell the leaf, and if the person who lifts the pot first has been using tobacco his moustache, being saturated with the poison, will have its effect in the pot, thereby destroying the flavor of the tea, so much so that the expert who does not use the weed is unable to give a proper judgment of the merits and value of the tea.

The other remark refers to Colman's advertisement on the front page of your journal. And just here permit me to relate a little incident which happened one evening last week. My wife and I were discussing some of the topics in the GROCER touching the advertisements, when my little nine-year-old boy surprised us rather by taking up the GROCER and reading out "Colman's Mustard, best on earth." "They have surely made a mistake here, pa," he added. I said to him, "How, my boy?" "Well, this ought to read 'Colman's Mustard, best on meat,'" he explained. Of course I had to agree with him.

AIDS TO GOOD STOREKEEPING.

The members of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association decided some time ago to inaugurate a course of addresses on subjects appertaining to the trade. The first was given at last Monday night's meeting. It was delivered by Mr. R. Donald, and was on the subject, "Aids to Good Storekeeping." Mr. Donald is a thinking and practical grocer, and his address reflected these characteristics.

The trouble heretofore had been, he said in his opening remarks, that grocers had been in the habit of keeping all the good things to themselves. "Now, it stands to reason that if you have discovered good business methods there are others in the trade that have also discovered something, and that if you each impart what you know to each other you naturally will have a community of interests."

The importance of storekeeping was hardly, he thought, understood, save by those engaged in it, and the storekeeper was looked upon as a man of drudgery, and whose profits were small. (Hear, hear.) It stood to reason that the storekeeper has a multitude of opportunities of meeting different characters, from the fact that he saw so many sides of life. The experienced storekeeper was one therefore who had acquired a good deal of common sense, and deserved respect. The grocer of to-day was a conglomerate being. He handles everything. A good many stores were started with a small amount of capital and a still smaller amount of groceries. The legitimate grocer was blamed for a good many of the misdeeds of the illegitimate and he thought they should repudiate being sponsors for such a class.

He gave the so-called dry goods houses that handle goods coming within the purview of the grocer a knock, and drew satisfaction from the thought that they were after all not legitimate dry goods houses.

He referred to the grocery stores in the Old Country, and regretted that the stores in Canada did not come up to their standard. In the United States, he maintained, the standard was still lower. He regretted to say, however, that co-operative stores were proving inimical to the interests of the English grocers, and the fact that these co-operative stores had failed to find a footing here was evidence that the grocers of Toronto had conducted their businesses well.

He said that he wished to dwell more particularly on three aids to good storekeeping, namely, store, stock and salesmen. The store proper should be in a good locality, and surrounded by a certain amount of tributary territory. A good store should possess the three conditions of light, cleanliness and room. There was no doubt that grocers were dirty, and he urged stricter attention to the matter of cleanliness. Regarding room, the more there was the better. Side entrances to a store he disliked. There were two things generally found to be wrong with stores. One was a side entrance, and the other a general cash box. He did not believe in imputing dishonesty to any man until he was found to be so, but at the same time he did not believe that temptation should be placed in the way of any clerk. If there was a side entrance let it be used merely for shipping purposes, and make one man responsible for what goes out by that side entrance. Regarding the utilizing of corners in the store, he said he never saw one yet that could not be turned to good account. Refrigerators he claimed, took up too much room and were of little use. There was no doubt they were unsatisfactory for keeping butter, and he would like to see some one get up a nice plate glass refrigerator that could be placed on the counter, wherein butter could be placed on view.

The character of the stock would largely be governed by the character of the locality. The very best grocery trade requires the best goods, but at the same time not necessarily the dearest. In buying, the exact amount to be purchased should be governed as much as possible by the condition of the market and the conveniences possessed for storing it. Good butter, eggs, tea and coffee, were necessary to success in business. Butter could be bought at any time, the only difficulty being in the matter of expense in some sections. With eggs, it was different. The difficulty was in getting them fresh, and he believed that for the city trade it was best to "candle" every egg before delivering to customers. In order to prevent mistakes he thought it was also advisable for the delivery man to get a dish from the housekeeper and count out the eggs.

In the matter of teas, he thought that the question was much more simple than it used to be. "In the years gone by it was necessary, in order to be a successful tea man, that you should know how to blend teas." Now, however, it was different. To make an exorbitant profit on teas he considered an evil and was a good deal the cause of package tea being placed on the market. He urged that grocers, where they know how, blend their own teas, but where they could not, to get it done by a wholesale house upon which they could rely. Regarding coffee, he considered it a downright mistake to buy mixed coffee from anyone.

Regarding salesmen, he said there was one thing they could ask them to do, and that was to keep clean. While he (Mr. Donald) liked uniformity, they could not demand it. Personally he wore both a white coat and a white apron, and although he did not ask his clerks to wear a white coat he demanded that they wear an apron. He liked to see his clerks wait upon customers quickly and promptly, and pointed out that it was a mistake to allow customers to walk half-way down the store before they were attacked by a clerk. He did not care for "fat men or men who sleep at nights," or boys. (Laughter.)

Another difficult problem was regarding the driver. It was necessary that a man who handles what the customers eat should be clean, but yet he was compelled to work around the horses and cross muddy streets. Some, it was true, did keep themselves clean, but it was a wonder to him how they did it. Then, again, some of the drivers who keep themselves clean have dirty horses. He thought the driver might be cultivated to become a very useful man. "If he is an intelligent man there is no reason why he should not get an extra order from nearly every customer." Butter and eggs he would have delivered in separate boxes.

He dwelt briefly on the matter of books, and strongly recommended check books for both clerks and drivers, and explained that in his business he was, by adopting this method, enabled to obviate the tedious labor of entering in detail every account in the day book.

The store should be opened promptly in the morning. In order to cause as little disturbance as possible in the morning he would have the store swept out the evening before.

Mr. Donald, in closing, said the grocery business was good enough for him, and that his highest ambition in life was to be a first-class grocer, for there was a good living in it even if there was not a fortune.

Loud applause greeted Mr. Donald as he took his seat.

After President Clark had uttered a few appreciative remarks, Mr. Mills moved and Mr. McAuliffe seconded a vote of thanks to Mr. Donald, which was enthusiastically carried.

A short discussion followed. Mr. Mills lead off by endorsing Mr. Donald's remarks regarding refrigerators. "I have always found that the larger the box the greater the loss. The less butter you keep in a box the better. You can get all the butter you want, and I think it will pay the grocers, at least those in Toronto, to buy from day to day just what they require." (Hear, hear.) He never used ice from October to May, but kept a current of cool air running through his refrigerator by connecting by a pipe with the outside of the building. He found that the butter was kept better and sweeter by this method than by using ice.

Mr. Marchall, who said he had had some twenty-five years' experience in the business, urged that every grocer should mix his own teas. He denounced the system in vogue here of men being put behind the counter who were without experience, and urged that there should be a system of apprenticeship.

(President Clark—"Hear, hear; that's what I say.")

Mr. Marshall held that if clerks knew more about making up profit and loss there would be fewer failures. (Hear, hear.) He also claimed that the wholesalers required to be carefully watched. They could not make him pay an exorbitant price for an article for he knew what the cost was. Only that day he had bought an article for 14 cents for which he had been asked 18 cents by another wholesaler.

(Chorus of members—How did you find out the cost price? Tell us.)

Mr. Marshall—(quietly sitting down)—Oh, you must pay to learn that. (Laughter.)

DUTIES UPON TEA.

The following list embraces all the principal centres where tea is supplied or consumed, and contains details of the several duties (per lb.) that are imposed and in force there up to the latest period at which they could be ascertained, viz.:

United Kingdom, 4d.; Australia, some parts 3d., others 4d. to 6d.; New Zealand, 6d.; Tasmania, 3d.; Newfoundland, 3d. plus 20 per cent. ad valorem; Canada, 10 per cent. If from U.S.A., otherwise free; Cape Colony, 8d.; Natal, 6d.; Sierra Leone 5 per cent.; British Guiana, 6d.; Bermuda, 5 per cent. ad valorem; Honduras, 6 1-4d.; Barbadoes, 3d.; Trinidad, 6d.; Antigua, 4d. plus 12 1-2 per cent.; Bahamas, 1s.; Grenada, 6d.; St. Vincent, 6d.; Mauritius, 1 1-16d. plus 5 per cent.; Russia, 2d. to 1 1-2d. and 1s. 10 1-4d. from European frontier; France, 9d. to 1 1-2d.; Turkey, 8 per cent. ad valorem; Italy, 8 3-4d.; Greece, about 1s. 6d.; Spain, 10d. to 1s. 1 1-2d.; Portugal, 1s. 7 1-2d.; Germany, 5 1-2d.; Denmark, 3d.; Holland, 2 1-4d.; Belgium, 3 3-4d.; Sweden, 3d.; Norway, 1s.; Switzerland, 1 3-4d.; Austria-Hungary, 8 1-4d. to 9d.; Bulgaria, 8 per cent. ad valorem; Roumania, 2 1-2d.; Morocco, 10 per cent. ad valorem; Uruguay, 5 1-2d.; Argentine Republic, 6 1-2d.; United States, free.

The above statement shows a great variety in the rates of duty on tea, varying from nil in the United States of America to 1s. 10 1-4d. in Russia, the highest charge by foreign governments, curiously enough, being in the Muscovite dominions, where tea is drunk more freely than in most other quarters of the globe, England only excepted. With numbers of people and nationalities abroad, tea-drinking is only a casual indulgence or an expensive luxury, but with us it is a prime necessity, and one which is strongly linked in with the habits and everyday life of our vast population. In proof of this we have merely to add that that the home consumption in the United Kingdom last year, as stated in the official returns, reached 207,113,700 lbs., as contrasted with 202,456,800 lbs. in 1891 and 194,008,500 in 1890.—London Grocer.

MAPLE SUGAR BOUNTY.

Just now the sugar bounty division of the treasury is getting ready for the maple sugar season, says The Washington Star. This is the troublesome part of the business, because maple sugar is obtained by each producer in comparatively small quantities, thus multiplying the labor of weighing, polarizing and adjusting payments. Nearly all maple sugar by the time it reaches the market is adulterated, but any manufacturer who is caught adulterating the sugar on which he asks for bounty is liable to a fine of $5,000 or five years' imprisonment, or both. Neither the polariscope nor any known chemical test will distinguish adulteration in maple sugar, so evidence on the point would have to be got in other ways. The flavor of maple and other sugars is due to the presence of certain compound ethers. Raw beet sugar has a horrible smell, and no one would think of tasting it. It happens that the ethers in maple sugar have an agreeable flavor, and hence its value. During the last year $7,343,000 was paid out in sugar bounties.

UNPROFITABLE MILLING.

"The milling trade of the country, both spring and winter, languishes," says the Northwestern Miller. "Complaints of the situation come from all quarters and from all conditions. The times are surely out of joint, and the prospects ahead do not appear to be flattering. In contemplating our own State, which is alleged by many to be the very worst ever known, even to the oldest inhabitant, we are apt, perhaps, to imagine that we in America are worse off than the millers of other lands. The truth is that we are not suffering half as much as the flour makers in other countries. The milling trade the world over, singular to relate, seems to be flat, stale, and unprofitable, and the same tale of dull and hard times among the flour mills comes to us from every quarter. Our Budapest correspondent says that the millers of his city have recently held a meeting to see if they could not get some concessions whereby they could regain some of the export trade which they have lost to the Americans. From the same source we learn that the Austrian millers are in distress. They in turn complain of the competition of the Hungarian mills, which, forced out of the English markets by America, are taking it out of their nearest neighbors. The Austrians ask their lawmakers to protect them from the competition of the Hungarians, but the request is denied. According to our very reliable London correspondent,

Mr. Rush, the Concordia mill, of Budapest, shows a loss of $125,000 on the year's work, and has reduced the value of its shares from 500 to 400 florins. The English and Scottish mills have felt the tooth of adversity also. Some weeks ago we published an article showing that the millers of Glasgow had suffered. Our London man tells us, also, that Messrs. James Tucker, Ltd., of Cardiff, lost about $185,000 for the year. We do not believe that we on this side have had as hard a time as the mills across the water. It is even admitted by many millers, both in the winter and spring wheat sections, that, so far, they have not done so badly, but the prospects ahead are what worry them most. As far as this goes, it does no good to cross a bridge before you come to it. While we may not be able to see much of a future in the business, it may be there for all that."

THE RAISIN OUTLOOK.

During the year 1892 there were shipped from Fresno, Cal., a total of 42,636,253 pounds of California raisins. The shipments from the same point during the preceding year were about 31,000,000 pounds. These data and the known movement from other points on the Pacific Coast, make the fact clear that the last crop was a very heavy one. The new has, however, passed into the channels of distribution, and a great portion of the surplus from the crop of the preceding year is also out of packers' hands. In short, the indications are that the consumption has been unusually heavy during the past six months. It looks also as though the amount of stock held outside of a certain syndicate is very moderate, and that the members of the combine stand more than a shadowy chance of having the market in their control during the balance of the season. Government returns show that importations of foreign raisins during the eight months ending February 28 amounted to 25,408,255 pounds, against 19,452,237 pounds in the corresponding period last year. But this increase of 6,000,000 pounds in importations, as well as that of 11,000,000 pounds in the California shipments, seems to have passed into distributors' hands, and, through their agency, switched into the channels of consumption. Valencia raisins were "pushed" early in the season by more jobbing houses than one. This action was prompted in a great measure by the high prices asked early in the season for California product, and doubtless checked an incipient "boom." Statistics and trade experience, however, indicate that present prices are no barrier to a full average consumption during the balance of the season, and, with supplies well under control, encourage the opinion that present prices can easily be maintained if not improved upon, without checking business to any extent.—N.Y. Bulletin.

SOME GREAT MISTAKES.

It has been written that "man is prone to error as sparks to fly upward." Again it has been written that "to err is human; to forgive, divine." Errors of judgment may be classed in the same line with mistakes in action the two terms being, for practical purposes, synonymous, the former often controlling or bringing about the latter?

In every sphere of life man is continually making mistakes, not wilfully, but as an attribute of the imperfections of his human nature. Were it possible for a person to become so perfect in all things and all ways as to make no mistakes, this world would not be a fit abiding place for him; he could neither feel at home nor sympathize with his fellow mortals. Mistakes will be made as long as the human family exists, and the only wise course is to "make the best of it" when they occur.

But there are different kinds of mistakes. Some are due to indifference as to resultant consequences, many to carelessness in the performance of allotted duties, others to selfishness, which unwittingly causes one to disregard the rights and welfare of others so long as his own ends are gained, and there are also what may be called dishonest mistakes, and many other causes might be assigned for their occurrence besides that quality in the human animal through which they inevitably will happen.

If we could at all times "see ourselves as others see us" we might be able to avoid some of the mistakes which—whatever may be the cause—we are continually making, and we might also be more tolerant of those made by others. It is an easy matter for us to see wherein errors are committed by persons whom we know or of whom we read, and we are prone to wonder how they could have been so short-sighted; and it is not infrequently the case that when such mistakes affect us to even an unimportant extent, we are apt to show less leniency than we should, particularly because, under the same or similar circumstances, we might have erred to even a far greater degree.

One great mistake made by many a business man is in acting on the principle of "going it alone" in all things, heeding not the probable and actual benefits he might derive from association with others who are in pursuit of the same objects he hopes and expects to attain. This is a selfish mistake, induced by the fear that by joining hands with his fellow tradesmen he might not secure all the benefits such a course would bring about, and he therefore loses a great deal that will always accrue from united effort. This narrow-minded policy keeps many a man from joining the ranks of mercantile organizations, and, while conscious that he is deriving benefits from the work done by the few, he makes the mistake of forgetting the fact that his welfare could be still greater enhanced by acting on the principle of helping himself by helping others.

A great mistake is made by certain employers, and others having the charge of men, in supposing and acting on the principle that their whole duty is performed when they pay those men so much money for so many hours' labor. In their eyes the workmen are only so many machines, and frequently are not treated with the same care and consideration given to the more valuable tools. If one of the human machines leaves or dies, it costs nothing to fill his place, and if he, unfortunately, makes a mistake the error is looked upon as an almost unpardonable crime. But the laborer is not a fool, and under conditions as above noted, will take no pains to advance the interests of his "master," and sometimes—either intentionally or otherwise—will do great damage to the standing and reputation of the selfish employer, which would not be the case were he treated as a reasoning being. The human machine can talk.

A great mistake is made by the mechanic or laboring man who takes employment and acts on the principle of giving just as little as possible of his brain and muscle for a stipulated price. As the workman soon "gets onto" the selfish and one-sided policy of his employer, so the latter will not be long in finding out the bad qualities of his employe. Such a short-sighted workman soon becomes known to have acquired habits of indifference concerning his duties, and it will only be as a last resort that he will be given employment anywhere.

The list of avoidable mistakes, of which the above are the merest samples, might be greatly extended, including one of the greatest of which many parents are guilty, viz., allowing the child "born with a silver spoon in his mouth" to grow up with the impression that his future is provided for, and that he will not have to depend upon himself and his own exertions to make his way in the world. This is one of the saddest mistakes anyone can make, and that it is a very common one is shown by the crowds of well-to-do idle young men to be seen at the resorts where fast men "most do congregate" in every city in the land.

It is possible to avoid many mistakes we make; it is right to look leniently upon those made by others. But inexcusable mistakes, of which there are many, and some of which are referred to herein, should neither be committed nor tolerated. At the same time, it must be remembered we are all human, imbued with all the imperfections of humanity, and that, first of all, we should pluck the beam out of our own eye before looking for the mote in the eye of our neighbor.—Merchant Sentinel.

ARTIFICIAL MAPLE SUGAR.

Decoctions or extracts of the wood or bark of trees are frequently used for flavoring syrups or sugars. Different extracts differ in taste. The hickory tree, it is said, yields an extract that will impart the flavor of the maple, and Dally's method of producing artificial maple syrup or sugar is as follows: Make an extract of hickory bark or wood by allowing water to precolate through the same. The bark or wood may be ground, or sawdust therefrom used. Hot water may be used, or the material boiled in water. The strength of the extract may be increased by increase of the quantity of the wood or bark. To one gallon of hot or boiling sugar syrup add say three tablespoonfuls of the hickory extract. It is said the effect of the extract is to produce a flavor that renders the syrup indistinguishable from genuine maple sugar. If the syrup is boiled down, a sugar resembling maple sugar in taste is produced.—London Public Opinion.

THE CANE SUGAR CROP.

The Louisiana Planter as follows on crop prospects: "Spring weather seems to come slowly. The average temperature of February and March has been comparatively low, and our cane fields, both stubble and plant, show but a slight growth this season. As we are now but a month away from the first of May, when by the old Creole definition, we should have a 'green field,' we must have a very rapid growth to reach this old-fashioned standard of excellence at that date. The winter and spring weather has been comparatively favorable to the preservation of the crop in the ground, and every examination indicates its present soundness. From this it is fair to infer that although the crop is apparently somewhat backward, yet that its general condition not only affords no cause for apprehension, but on the contrary, gives assurance of excellent results. We believe the crop of 1893 will be at least 10 per cent. greater than that of 1892."

ADULTERATION NOT ALLOWED.

The following is a supposed scene in a restaurant should the Ohio pure food bill become law:

Stranger—"Waiter, bring me a nice beefsteak with mushrooms."

Waiter—"Out of mushrooms; not permitted to use them in this State."

Stranger—"Well, then, what's the matter with mutton chops and French peas?"

Waiter—"Can't use French peas; they are colored in France."

Stranger—"You can furnish hash, can't you?"

Waiter—"No, sir; hash is adulterated; we can't mix potatoes with meat."

Stranger—"Great Scott, are you off? Bring me a glass of beer, Swiss cheese and mustard."

Waiter—"Sorry, sir, but foreign cheese and prepared mustard are unlawful."

Stranger—"Great Caesar's ghost, man, I am starving! What have you to eat?"

Waiter—"Hog and hominy, limed eggs, butter colored with a simple coloring matter, pure cider vinegar."

Stranger—"Good-bye; what time does the next train leave for Kentucky?"—Merchant Sentinel, Cincinnati.

IS IT DISHONESTY?

DEAR GROCER.—As I know you are always ready to search into all matters connected with the trade, I would ask of you to enquire into the evaporated apple trade. I find a deficiency of about six pounds in one case. Having placed this matter in efficient hands I feel sure it will have early attention. VINDEX.

(Evaporated apples will sometimes shrink a pound, or, at the outside, two pounds, a case, but when the deficiency is such as our correspondent states, it is either the result of dishonesty or carelessness. Those in the trade spoken to regarding the matter generally attribute the cause to the former.—Ed. GROCER.)

TRADE ORGANIZATION BENEFITS.

Now that Grocers' Associations are so rapidly increasing, it is interesting to note that they are regarded with dubious feelings by a large number of the old fashioned members of the trade, who, in response to an appeal to join the movement, reply, what good is it to me? That, on the face of it, appears to be a very reasonable question, and just as men are in business to make money so consider two model grocers' associations meet to reap some benefit. It is not enough to reply to such that they ought to support their own trade, and that by so doing they will reap an indirect benefit. This may be very true, but most of us, when we lay out our money on some movements expect direct benefit. We know some enthusiasts will say that such a feeling is sordid and unworthy, but such an answer is insufficient, and we certainly agree with those who say that unless direct benefit is to be derived they mean to keep their hard-earned money in their pockets. The question, therefore, is, How are such members of the trade to be reached? It appears as if the answer is plain—show them how they can obtain direct benefit, and we hold that the association that cannot show this must look to the lines on which it is working and see what improvements can be effected, for it is of the most vital importance that members should feel that they are getting value for money if the present spirit of trade organization is to be lasting and vigorous. To make an association valuable it must be something more than a mere talking machine or mutual admiration society. We mean no disrespect to existing movements when we say that far too much time is wasted in talk which leads nowhere. What is wanted is real work that produces permanent benefit. The interchange of ideas is very good, but the practical help is by far the best. As to illustrate this we may refer to what we they join associations because they exist—those of Birmingham and Portsmouth. In each of these associations there are two branches, the benevolent and the protective. The former is a branch which is not nearly so common as we could wish, and is one we hope to see ere long added to many more associations. It has proved a source of enthusiasm in both these associations when the protective element failed to arouse as much interest. The thought that by connection with an association a shopkeeper is making provision for those unforeseen accidents which make the old age of the unexpected death of many dark and despairing, is one that commends itself to the thrifty and provident, whilst to the generous and wealthy it offers an opportunity for helping the unfortunate that is better far than indiscriminate and frequently misplaced benevolence. But the protective branch is also a most important one. With the exception of those who are in a very large way of business, the daily life of a grocer is beset by many difficulties which single-handed he feels he cannot overcome, whilst the legal pit-falls which are now laid for him call for a weariness and watchfulness which we do not always maintain. Then, too, there are many puzzling questions which are not easy of individual solution, but which by contact with traders of wider and more varied experiences are soon settled. Again, there are many trade injustices which single-handed are too formidable to tackle, but which by the united action of many can be and are remedied. To illustrate. Not long ago a grocer found that he was being swindled by short deliveries in certain kinds of sugar, whilst he suffered considerable loss by the off-hand fashion in which his carmen were treated at the warehouses from which they cleared the goods. He remonstrated again and again to those in authority in vain. At length he brought the matter before the trade association. The matter was carefully enquired into, the facts clearly demonstrated, and official communications were opened with the proper authorities, and after a short time the grievance was remedied, and the man was the richer in pocket by better weight in sugar, and more prompt and correct deliveries. A young grocer, with a not very wide experience of commercial affairs had for some years had a banking account on which he paid a certain commission. Happening to hear in the course of a discussion at a trade meeting the question of bankers' commissions discussed, he found he was paying double what was the custom in his district, and a subsequent representation to his bank manager secured him a reduction. For the first time in thirty years of trading a grocer was summoned by a tricky inspector for the alleged illegal sale of a certain article. He had never been in a police-court in his life, and was naturally perturbed by the summons. He took the matter to the association, of which he was a member, with the result that when the day of hearing came his association protected him, and the case was dismissed with costs, whilst four others not similarly defended were fined in the same court for a similar offence within a few days. A provision dealer was sold an article by a wholesale house which they guaranteed genuine, but when a sample was taken by an inspector and analyzed by the public analyst it was stated to have been adulterated. The wholesale house denied responsibility, and the retailer appealed to his trade association. He was convicted in the police court, but the wholesale house was brought to book and paid the whole of the expense. We imagine the recital of these cases will raise a supercilious sneer on the faces of some of our well-to-do and clever readers, whose length of purse and commercial experience may have given them power and wisdom.

We could also multiply instances in which trade disputes have been settled by such associations as those of Portsmouth and Birmingham, and costly litigation has been saved. And such cases are examples of the way in which a trade association may be made an institution which shall be indeed a place of refuge for the shopkeeper in time of trouble. We have not touched upon the social benefits of an association nor of the advantages of these institutions for dealing with such evils as cutting, present giving, and the like. We have given instances of direct benefit, and that is what many objectors to the movement ask for. But a word is necessary before the subject on the fees of such an association. We see that half-a-crown and five shillings are very popular subscription fees. How can an association be successfully worked on that sum? Half a crown a year to protect a tradesman in his business, when a single bit of advice from a lawyer costs six and eightpence! The thing is absurd, and ought to be put an end to. It is a mistake to suppose that larger numbers will be secured by a small fee. If an association is not worth 10s. 6d., or with a benevolent branch, a guinea per annum, it is not worth joining, and we hope that members of the associations will give up the cheese paring policy of a half-crown subscription. We believe that there is an almost immeasurable future of good and useful work before trade associations if they will prove themselves of practical value, and this they can only do by the generous and continuous support of the trade.—Grocers' Chronicle.

BAZAAR STORES.

The matter of competition from "bazaar" stores, so-called, is still agitating the Associated Retail Grocers of New York city and Brooklyn. According to some accounts the "bazaar" stores are selling various lines of groceries at prices that do not cover present cost in the wholesale trade, and therefore demoralize values. The grocers, as a matter of course, are anxious to devise ways and means to prevent the "outside" competition. Thus far they have failed to discover any remedy, and the chances are that they will have to take all the risks of trade, since the grocers themselves do not agree as to the advisability of organized movement against the "bazaars." Not a few prominent grocers in fact state boldly they can meet any and all competition in the future as successfully as they have in the past, and that they intend to buy and sell on the old lines. It may be pointed out that competition between grocers goes merrily on, just as it used to before the bazaar stores engaged in the sale of canned goods, etc., and that there is nothing in the nature of association among the bazaar stores. The latter, in fact, compete between themselves as well as with the grocery men, and ask no special favors of wholesale dealers or manufacturers. They take all the chances incidental to the business, and to the ordinary observer they would not appear to be committing any greater offence in selling food products than the grocerymen are in selling liquors or giving away crockery. One characteristic of the "bazaar" store-keepers is that they are energetic in the distribution of all lines of goods that they handle, and there is more than a bare possibility also of ability on their part to instruct some slow grocers in the art of introducing food products to the consumer, or at least increasing the consumption. The "bazaar" stores may be instrumental in breaking up the wholesale "limited selling price" system maintained by manufacturers and importers of various lines of groceries against which retail grocers have frequently protested or complained. The signs of the times are that the bazaar store is not only here to stay, but to grow. It is the grocer's own fault if he does not buy equal quantities of goods as cheap as the bazaar store buyer, and thus stand in a position to compete successfully.—N. Y. Bulletin.

INSURANCE RATES IN MONTREAL

The fire underwriters in Montreal have made a wholesale advance in insurance rates recently, rates to retail dealers having been marked up 40 per cent. The insurance men hold that in addition to a fire service that is decidedly wanting in some respects, retail men in Montreal do not insure heavily enough. They insure up to perhaps fifty per cent. of their stock, and if a fire occurs they, so the underwriters say, depend upon getting the salvage, which is very often great. Thus they not only have the goods that are damaged, but the full amount of their insurance, and thus a fire is frequently a very profitable piece of business. The cause of the rise in rates is the heavy losses incurred in the retail trade recently, both on the above account and the fact that the fire brigade is not being handled properly. The insurance men want the retailers to insure their stock, not for fifty per cent., but for eighty per cent., and they declare that if the latter will not do so, they will charge them much higher rates than forty per cent. over the present rates.

THE BRANDING OF CHEESE.

A short time ago Finance Minister Foster asked the consent of the House of Commons to introduce a bill to provide for the making and branding of cheese. It was intimated that at the instance of the Minister of Agriculture Prof. Robertson had looked into the matter and put his idea into the form of a bill, which the Finance Minister introduced under the caption: "An Act to prevent the manufacture and sale of imitation cheese and to provide for the branding of the same." This question of branding has been a long standing subject of discussion with cheese exporters at Montreal, and opinions are widely divergent as to the utility of the bill above proposed. It is held that although there has been some disputes between English buyers and the shippers on this side, they have been so infrequent as to be hardly worth mentioning, for cheese exporters as a rule deal conscientiously with their correspondents on the other side, for the very good reason that it is in their interest to do so. Besides they hold that to carry out a branding act in a practical way is sure to be difficult. It frequently happens that the quality of cheese turned out by the same factory varies considerably owing to the run of milk, and that if factory branding is to be enforced this fact is almost certain to lead to much trouble if not more with English buyers than the few cases of misrepresentation by shippers here. On the whole the cheese exporters generally seem to be opposed to the idea, but possibly Prof. Robertson has some very good reason for the action he has taken in prompting the Department of Agriculture as he has done. It is possible that on his recent visit to England he may have come across cases of American cheese being sold as Canadian to the detriment of our product, and in this case some system of protection is necessary, and possibly before the bill is passed the Professor will have a conference with the trade and devise a measure that will be acceptable to all.

Ex-Book Agent—"I have been cleaning out the molasses measure. It was so clogged up that it didn't hold more'n half a quart."

DRY GOODS.

(From the Dry Goods Review.)

The past week has been somewhat brisker in general dry goods circles; still, the volume of sales has not been large. Very few buyers are to be found in the market, and consequently the houses are looking less busy, although the trade is fully up to the average of the month. City retailers are busy, and city travellers are thus securing some cheering orders. Rural dealers do not report a brisk trade as yet, but it is expected that trade in the towns and villages will brighten up in another week.

The summer millinery openings take place next week and this will cause an influx of buyers, when a heavy sorting trade will no doubt be done.

The features of the week has been the advance in the price of silk goods, especially dress fabrics, and a stiffening of the prices in linens. The former was intimated in previous issues. The latter is due to a shortage in the flax yarns on account of a small flax crop; The effect will not be felt by the retailers for some time. Silk dress goods have advanced about 15 per cent., and retailers should husband their stocks, as the goods cannot be replaced at previous prices.

Tailors are buying light for the spring trade, but are ordering large ranges. The wholesaler would sooner have it this way, because the risk is thus considerably lessened.

NOTES

In spite of the recent advance in price of silk gloves and silk lace mits, Wyld, Grasett & Darling are still selling these goods at the old prices. Their stock was purchased previous to the advance, and customers will get the benefit.

One of the finest lines of men's furnishings shown by Gordon, Mackay & Co. is their large range of suspenders, which include English, American and domestic manufactures, from the lowest prices to the best grades.

Bicycle hose in black and navy are shown by Wyld, Grasett & Darling. They claim these to be better value than the ordinary bicycle hose.

A shipment of velveteens, including some scarce colors, has just been received by Caldecott, Burton & Spence. Navys, myrtles, fawns, greys, and olives are the leading shades.

Shot surah parasols with frills form a novelty in the stock of spring parasols shown by W. R. Brock & Co., who have a very large range of plain and fancy lines with exceedingly nobby handles in celluloid, natural wood, gold, silver and horn.

Whipcords for suitings or overcoatings are shown in all shades in John Macdonald & Co.'s woollen department. The leading shades shown are grey mixtures, while fawns and browns are also in good demand. The new hop-sack suiting in serges and worsteds is in fairly good demand for spring and summer wear. Their Belwarp's serges are in constant demand and always in full stock.

A large range of art draperies, in a great variety of patterns and colorings, are shown by W. R. Brock & Co. Madras muslins in cream, blue, lemon and gold effects are also shown. Their line of "Rattler" American-ribbed ladies' cotton vests, which can be retailed with a good margin at three for 25 cents, is meeting with great success. Their contract was for 6,000 dozen, and more than two-thirds of this quantity has been already sold.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. are showing a special line of fine embroidered cambric edgings, the cloth and work both being unusually fine. They are put up in lots of sixteen pieces to the box in a nice assortment of patterns. At the figure this firm is offering these goods merchants will find it to their interest to try a sample box.

Fast black cotton half hose are shown in plain and ribbed, with and without silk clock, and in various qualities, by Wyld, Grasett & Darling. They are well prepared for the summer trade in these goods. Their stock of cambric and cashmere vests is well assorted. Their variety includes solid creams, and in all kinds of patterns. A navy cambric vest with a white spot or figure is a new thing, and is taking exceedingly well.

W. R. Brock & Co. are selling a nice line of light-colored trouserings in diagonals, with stripes and indistinct checks, suitable for the best trade. These are shown in Scotch tweeds and English worsteds. Worsteds Bedford cord trouserings in five leading shades are shown. These are the newest thing in the market, and their effect is very pleasing, indeed.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. report an exceptionally large demand this season for their well-known numbers of black Henrietta. They have just stocked ten more cases, making their range of prices complete.

A low line of Bengalines in all leading shades for blouse manufacture has just been passed into stock by John Macdonald & Co. These goods are moving very freely. A large repeat of ribbons is to hand, and full ranges of widths and colorings are now shown. American challies, including Pineapple Tissues and Ondine Stripes, the latest novelties in this class of goods, are shown in fair variety. These two leading varieties of challies are the latest New York fancy in dress goods of this class. Crepons, nun's veilings, and other midsummer goods, such as shot lustres, muslins, lawns, etc., are shown in great variety and at taking prices.

Hermesdorf's absolutely stainless black cotton hosiery is the correct thing for the coming season. W. R. Brock & Co. have laid in an enormous stock of all lines from 4 to 9 1/2 inch, and are quoting specially low prices on these goods.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. have just received that special brand of Ebony Dye Fast Black Cotton Hose No. 525, for which there has been such a great demand, and are now busy filling back orders. They justly claim that this is the best value in the trade to retail at a quarter. Although black is still in greatest demand, this number is also shown in cardinals, greys and tans, with lisle spliced heels and toes same as in black.

John Macdonald & Co. have an excellent stock of every kind of carpet at present; as they are always prepared at this season of the year to execute any and all sorting orders presented. Their stock of tapestries consist of ten different qualities, with a range of patterns in each quality. In Brussels they carry an extensive range, with numerous patterns in each grade. Their stock of hems is large, and the variety presented is sufficient to meet all possible requirements from the retail trade. Linoleums and oilcloths are carried in all widths and qualities and in good range. Despite the advance in cottons, they are showing better value in curtains than at any previous time. Their curtain department has been a large success this season, and they are still showing by means of repeats the full line of fast selling patterns shown earlier in the season. They are offering numerous drives at all the popular low prices; in better qualities they are showing excellent value. Irish Pointe and Swiss curtains are shown in full exhibit.

TOBACCO GROWING IN QUEBEC.

A deputation representing the tobacco growing interests of Quebec waited upon Mr. Mackenzie Bowell, Mr. Angers, and Mr. Wallace, Controller of Customs, the other day, and urged that the excise duty on native tobacco be removed or considerably reduced, and that the excise duty on native tobacco be removed or considerably reduced, and that the excise duty of 25 cents per pound on imported foreign leaf be changed to a customs duty of 35 cents per pound. Mr. Dugas, M.P. for Montcalm, and Mr. Pelletier, M.P. for Laprairie, as representing the districts in Quebec in which there is most tobacco grown, introduced the deputation to the Ministers. The tobacco manufacturing trade was represented by Messrs. J. M. Fortier, A. Denis and L. V. Labelle, of Montreal. Mr. Bowell assured the deputation that its representations should receive due weight in being considered by the Government.

The Minister of Trade and Commerce has received a despatch from the British Government, stating that the Spanish Government has decided that the direct trade between the Spanish Antilles and Canada is now placed on the same footing as that between these colonies and the United States. This season the company will put up corn, tomatoes, okra, sweet potatoes and peaches.

The employees of most of the boot and shoe factories in this city went on strike Tuesday. There were about 600 in all out, and the factories affected were: J. D. DATE SUGAR CULTIVATION.

The Indian Agriculturist has a very interesting article relating to the date sugar industry of Bengal, from which we glean the following:

"Unlike most other palms, the date palm (Phoenix sylvestris) has a very wide distribution, being indigenous in many parts of India. It forms extensive forests in Rohilkhand, on the low grounds along the Ramganga, on the Mysore plateau between Shimoga and Tunkur, in the forest lands of the Gwallor state, on the outskirts of the villages in most parts of the Central provinces, and it is not uncommon along the outer Himalaya, extending westward up to Jammu, and attaining an altitude of 5,000 feet in Kumaon. It also occurs plentifully, self-sown and uncared for, along the eastern coast, where it is occasionally tapped by a certain class of people chiefly for toddy. But it is in Bengal that it is most extensively cultivated, and its usefulness as a sugar-yielding tree fully realized.

"The yield of sap is greatest in mid-winter. (The sap collected in calm and cloudless nights gives gur of the best quality. In January, when the trees begin to put forth their inflorescence, the sap becomes very poor in sugar, though profuse in quantity, and, as a rule, does not produce good crystals. The average yield of a tree is about ten seers a day. It becomes less and less after the trees are about twenty years old, but the sap becomes almost proportionately richer in saccharine matter.

"The earthen pots in which the sap is collected require some care. They have to be well smoked every morning as soon as emptied. This gives them a glazed surface; also the alkaline salts of the smoke neutralize acidity, and the heat kills any ferments that may have been produced. If this were neglected the ferments would eat up all saccharine matter, and the sap would become a toddy.

"For this purpose a peculiar sort of furnace is made; a shallow rectangular pit is dug in the ground, over which a low dome of mud is built, supported on a framework of bamboo while the mud is soft. Into this dome circular holes 15 to 18 inches in diameter are cut in two rows along the length of the rectangle, the number varying according to requirements, from four to fourteen; and two flues are made at the short ends. On each of the circular holes is placed a conical (more properly semi-elliptical) thimble-shaped earthen vessel capable of containing from 30 to 60 pounds of sap. Usually an umbrageous tree is utilized for its grateful shade; in default of it a temporary shed of date leaves supported on bamboo posts is erected over the furnace.

"The boiling, once started, continues day after day, the Siuli operating on a fresh group of trees every day. As soon as the furnace is well ablaze a thick white froth appears on the surface, which should be promptly removed. For this purpose a ladle, called Urki, made of coconut shell, with a bamboo stick as a handle, is used. The date palm sap, however, is remarkably free from feculent matter, and therefore requires less skimming than the cane of any other kind of sugar yielding saps. It has, on the other hand, a slightly larger proportion of gluten, and therefore gives a smaller outturn of sugar crystals. After about an hour's boiling, the sap is said to be Saris a-Phuli (like mustard-flower), from the fact of its turning golden-yellow, and giving out in quick succession small round bubbles which resemble the petals of the mustard flower. Soon after this big, isolated bubbles, rise slowly with a dull explosive noise, and the peculiar smell of gur is noticed. The gur is now ready, and must be promptly poured into earthen jars, or other vessels, in which it will be taken to market for sale. If too little done the gur is liable to become acid after a few months, and the crystals small; if too much done, it suffers in color and flavor, and may even become bitter and sticky, and, therefore, uncrystallizable. It is therefore very important that the boiling be stopped at the right time. The crystals form when the gur cools. The outturn of gur is from one-sixteenth to one-eighth of the quantity of sap. It is estimated that an average tree yields about a maund (41 pounds) of gur per year.

"The next point is sugar-making. I will notice this briefly. As a rule the cultivator himself does not do it on a large scale. He sells his gur to the sugar manufacturer, who is usually a well-to-do sweetmeat maker. The gur is put into gunny bags, which are then hung up on poles and pressed tightly, each by means of three pairs of bamboo levers. The molasses trickles down, leaving the brown crystals in the bag. The raw sugar is then thrown either into baskets or into earthen tubs, called nads, with perforations underneath. It is then lightly sprinkled over with water, and covered with a layer of pata (Vallisneria spiralis), two inches thick. This is an aquatic plant found growing luxuriantly at the bottom of stagnant pools of water, such as beels and old tanks; and even of rivers with little or no current, of which there are so many in Bengal. The attenuated cellular tissue of this plant has the property of absorbing moisture at every point to a remarkable extent, and the result is that after week, the brown crystals to a depth of about two inches become tolerably white and glistening. This upper layer is then removed and sun-dried, and the process repeated with the remainder. The molasses collected in this manufacture is boiled down in large pans into a black sticky treacle, which is an indispensable ingredient in the tobacco for the native hookah, and has therefore an extensive sale all over India. The date palm treacle supplies, at any rate, the whole of Bengal."

A bill to compel the manufacturers of baking powder to label their packages with an analysis of their contents has been introduced in the Assembly at Albany. "Either this bill belongs to the 'strike' class or rival baking powder manufacturers are responsible for it, as it is certain that there is no popular sentiment behind it," remarks a contemporary. "The public cares nothing for the various measures affecting baking powders that have been introduced in the legislatures of New York and other States in recent years."

The Best Grocers Make
a point of Keeping it always in Stock.

[As there is often inequality in the prices of the various sellers on this market, owing to differences in buying conditions and other circumstances, and as prices are modified by both quantity and quality, the quotations given below and in our Prices Current necessarily take a wide range.]

TORONTO MARKETS.

TORONTO, April 13, 1893.
GROCERIES.

The feature of trade this week is its decided quietness. This applies to practically all lines, and to the country as well as to the city. Sugar is fractionally higher than a week ago; but retailers seem to be well supplied for the moment, and there is an absence in consequence of the activity noted during the past week or so. The position, however, remains strong, although any immediate advance in prices is not anticipated. Canned goods share in the general quietude, although prices in this line, too, remain steady. Dried fruits are steady all round and devoid of any special feature. There is still a scarcity of good Rio coffees on this market, but new stocks are expected to arrive shortly. Tea is without special feature and quiet. No special reason can be assigned for the general quietness. Although the condition of the country roads contribute some to this end, yet all the responsibility does not lie in that direction. The fact of the matter is, the trade has been buying pretty freely of late, particularly of sugar and canned goods, and therein probably is the secret. Another week or so will probably see a more active market.

COFFEES.

There was a little easier feeling in New York a few days ago, but since then there has been a corresponding firming up. Trade locally is quiet, and there are little or no really good Rio coffees to be had, but more are on the way. We quote as before: Rio, 21 to 22c.; East Indian, 27 to 30c.; South American, 21 to 23c.; Mocha, 26 to 30c.; Santos, 21 to 22c.

DRIED FRUIT.

No change is appreciable, and activity is not reported in any one line, although currants and prunes seem to be selling fairly well. Valencia raisins are quiet and unchanged. Layers as a rule sell at from 6 1-4 to 7 1-2c., according to quality, and fine off-stalk at 5 1-4 to 5 1-2c. Bordehore & Co.'s (C. Morgan & Co.) annual statement regarding the Valencia raisin crop of the past year shows the entire crop to have been 2,376,000 boxes, of which 1,178,000 boxes were exported to the United Kingdom, 766,000 boxes to the United States and Canada, 392,000 boxes to France, and the continent, and 40,000 boxes unshipped. Valencias shipped to the United States and Canada for the past couple of years are about one-half less than previously. Jas. A. Hawkesworth & Co.'s monthly statement to hand shows that stocks of Valencias in New York are considerably less than one-half what they were this time last year. The local currant market has lost that activity that characterized it a week or so ago, but prices are unchanged, ranging all the way from 5 3-4c. for provincials up to 10c. for Vostizzas. A good many prunes are moving, although trade cannot be said to be brisk. Bosnias are quoted at 7 3-4 to 9c., and Atlas brand from 7 1-2 to 8 1-2c. Dates are quiet and unchanged at 5 1-2 to 5 3-4c. for Persian in boxes.

NUTS.

There has been a strong advance in peanuts, and we now quote roasted at 13 to 14c., and green at 11 to 12 1-2c.

RICE AND SPICES.

Demand for rice continues seasonable at 3 7-8c. for Aracan up to 5 1-2c. for Japan.

In spices, pepper is low; pure black is quoted at 14 to 16c., and pure white at 20 to 28c. Whole ginger is quoted at 20c., and ground at 20 to 25c.

SUGAR.

The movement in sugar has fallen off perceptibly. There has been an advance of 1-8c. since our last review, and prices are being firmly maintained, although no immediate change is anticipated. Granulated is quoted at 5 1-8 to 5 1-4c., and a carload sold on Monday at $5.10 per cwt. Good rich yellow sugars are selling at 4 1-8 to 4 3-4c., and dark yellow at 4c.; nothing below this latter figure is heard of. The London market has recovered its lost ground, and latest advices quote beet sugar for April at 16s. 1 1-2d., and for May at 16s. 3d.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Syrups are quiet and unchanged at from 2 1-2c. per pound up. There is not much doing in molasses, and prices are unchanged, generally selling at 30 to 35c. per Imperial gallon.

TEAS.

There is no special feature in tea, except it be that it is following the general trend of trade, it this week exhibiting less activity. The demand such as it is, is pretty well distributed among all lines, although the little partiality being shown is for good low and medium grades. Low grades range in price from 14c. up, mediums from 18c. up, and fine 27c. up. Really fine autumn flavored Assams and Darjeelings are not to be had on this market.

BUTTER AND CHEESE

The butter market continues in good shape. Stocks are light and prices firm. A fair business is being done in creamery butter, and offerings are a little freer. Good creamery tubs are quoted at 22 to 23c., and pound prints at 25 to 26c. Some creamery tubs are obtainable at 20 to 21c., but the quality is not first-class. Dairy butter of all kinds continues scarce, with prices firm. Pound dairy rolls are reported to be particularly scarce, and 21 to 22c. is quoted. The greater part of the dairy tub moving is going out at 20c., although prices range 1 to 2c. per pound higher for something fine. Large rolls are quoted higher at 20 to 22c., outside figure being for the choice article. Bakers' butter is scarce, and wanted at 16 to 18c.

The cheese market is quiet and easy at 11c. to 11 1-2c. Offerings are in excess of demand, and it is not likely that it would take very strong inducements to cause holders to shade prices.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS.—Holders in the west were, according to latest advices, asking $1.60 for car lots, but they appear to be asking in vain. Anyhow the local market is quiet, and dealers report they cannot get more than $1.50 in a jobbing way for good samples; $1.30 to $1.35 would be paid for car lots.

DRIED APPLES.—There is no demand, and prices are unchanged, 4 3-4c. being paid, and jobbers are selling at 5 1-4 to 5 1-2c.

EVAPORATED APPLES.—Not much doing. Small lots are being jobbed out at 8 1-4 to 8 1-2c.

EGGS.—Easy at 13 to 13 1-2c. Supplies were rather light the latter part of last week, but they have been liberal enough this week, while demand is not good.

HONEY.—Dull and easy. Dark is quoted in sections at 8c to 9c. White is quoted at 8c. in 50-lb. tins, and at 15c. in sections.

POULTRY.—Scarce and wanted. We quote: Chickens, 60 to 70c.; turkeys, 13 to 14c. a pound; geese, 8 to 10c. a pound.

POTATOES.—Quiet and easy, and trade merely of a hand to mouth character. Car lots sell at from 80 to 85c. per bag, and bags are being jobbed out at 95c.

ONIONS.—Quiet and unchanged. The range of price is varied, being all the way from $1.50 to $2.50.

HOPS.—Quiet and unchanged at 18 to 20c. for '92's, and at 15 to 16c. for yearlings. There have been a few arrivals of California hops, and they have sold at from 21 to 22c.

HOGS AND PROVISIONS.

There have been quite a few dressed hogs offering this week, and most of them seem to have been taken at $7 to $7.25. Butchers are about the only ones who are buying to any extent, packers being indifferent. Hog products are in fair demand at steady prices. Pure lard sells well at quotations. A carload changed hands Tuesday last at 12 3-4c. in tierces.

BACON.—Long clear 10 1-2c., smoked backs are 12 1-2 to 13c., bellies 13 1-2 to 14c., rolls 10 1-2 to 10 3-4c.

HAMS.—In good demand and firm at 13 to 13 1-2c.

LARD.—Pure Canadian is 13 1-4 to 13 1-2c. in tubs, 13 1-2 to 13 3-4 in pails, and 12 3-4 to 13c. in tierces. Compound 10 to 10 1-2c.

BARREL PORK.—Canadian heavy mess $20.50, Canadian short cut $21 to $21.50.

DRESSED MEATS.—Beef fores are 4 1-2 to 5 1-2c., hindquarters 7 to 8 1-4c., veal 6 1-2 to 8c., lamb 8 to 8 1-2c.

GREEN FRUIT.

Trade is reported to be satisfactory in all lines. Oranges are going out freely at unchanged prices. Lemons of good quality are getting scarce. A great many 360's are obtainable, but the opposite conditions prevail regarding 300's.

MARKETS—Continued

Strictly fancy 300's sold in New York the other day at $4.75, and local dealers expect to pay more than the figure now obtaining when they undertake to replenish present stocks. There is an active demand for bananas, and $1.75 to $2 seems to be about the idea for the country trade. Pine apples, which have been rather scarce, are now getting more plentiful. The prices ruling here, it appears, did not suit the American consignors, hence the recent scarcity. We quote: Oranges—Valencias $6.00 to $6.50 per case; Floridas, $3 to $4 per box; Messinas and Palermos, $3 to $3.50 per box; California seedlings, $3 to $3.25 per box; dito Navals, $3.50 to $4.50; lemons, $3.25 to $4; bananas, $1.40 to $2.50; pineapples, 20 to 30c.; apples, $1 to $1.50 for market stock, and $2 to $3 for good to fancy.

MAPLE SYRUP.

Supplies of new maple syrup are getting a little freer, but they are still of a limited character. Prices are as before at 80 to 90c., according to size of tin. Maple sugar is unchanged at 8 to 9c. a pound.

FISH AND OYSTERS.

The fish market is flat. The principal enquiry is still for whitefish and trout, which are both scarce. The smaller fish, such as perch, suckers, etc., are selling well. Finnan haddie is flat and 11-2c. lower, and a like decline is shown in perch. Black bass is 2c. cheaper. We quote: Manitoba whitefish, 7 1-2c.; fresh salmon, 20c.; haddock, 6c.; skinned and boned codfish, 6 1-2c.; Labrador herring, $3 per half bbl.; shore herring, $2.75 per bbl.; Digby herring, 11 to 12 1-2c.; boneless fish, 4c.; boneless cod, 7 to 8c.; pike, 7c.; pickerel, 7c.; ciscoes, $1.50 to $1.75 a hundred; black bass, 7 to 9c. a pound; finnan haddie, 7 1-2c.; perch, $3 to $2.50 per hundred, as to size; suckers, $3 per cwt.; blue back herring, $2.50 per hundred; oysters, $1.20 to $1.25 for standards and $1.75 for selects.

HIDES, SKINS, WOOL, TALLOW.

HIDES.—The market continues much about the same, car lots of cured going out at 5 1-4c., No. 1 cows' is quoted as before at 4 1-2c.

SKINS.—Calf skins are unchanged at 9c. There is a fair demand, and they are going away well, but dealers complain that the margin of profits is unsatisfactory. There are not many sheepskins coming in, but quite enough for the demand. Prices are unchanged at $1.25 to $1.50.

WOOL.—There is nothing doing in fleece, because there is none to sell, but in other kinds the demand is moderate, although for small quantities. We quote pulled wools at 21 to 21 1-2c. for supers and at 26 to 27c. for extras.

TALLOW.—There is really nothing being done in tallow. Dealers are paying 6 1-2c. and selling at 7 to 7 1-4c. Rough is quoted as before at 2 1-2c.

SEEDS.

There is a good jobbing demand for all kinds, but principally for red clover, alsike and timothy. There is no material change in red clover, but prices are very firm and stocks are running low. Alsike is becoming comparatively scarce, and prices of all grades are about 2c. per bushel higher, timothy steady and unchanged. Prime red clover is quoted at $8.85 to $9.00, and extra choice at $9 to $9.15. Alsike runs all the way from $7.05 for good to $8.50 for fancy. Timothy sells at $2.52 to $2.60 for prime to choice, $2.60 to $2.65 per bushel for choice, and $2.75 to $2.90 for unhulled flail threshed.

PETROLEUM.

The Petrolea Advertiser, in its weekly report, says: "The oil market at present is very dull and will continue to be dull for the next two or three months, as is usual at this season of the year. Refiners take this opportunity of shutting down their stills and cleaning up their yards. Most of them have a sufficient stock of refined oil on hand to supply their customers while their works are being put in thorough repair to get ready for the fall trade. If there is any disposition manifested by the refiners to reduce the price of crude oil during the next three months, we would advise the producers to hang on to their oil and not accept any reduction in price whatever, as we predict a larger demand for Canadian oil this fall than ever we had before in the history of the

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.

The canned goods market is quiet in sympathy with other branches of the grocery trade. The volume of business is lighter than at time of last review, and the past week has been the most uninteresting for some time. In no one line has there been what could be termed a brisk movement. Prices however remain steady and unchanged. Tomatoes are in fair demand at 85c. to $1. There is a fair enquiry for peas at from 90c. to $1 for ordinary quality and at $1.45 for the sifted article. Corn sells as before at 90c. to $1.25. Beans are quiet and unchanged at 90c. to $1.00. The movement in salmon is rather more active if anything and stocks are getting lighter and bid fair to be exhausted by the time the new pack arrives. The idea is $1.50 for talls and $1.80 to $1.85 for flats. Lobsters are in lighter demand, but prices are unchanged at $2 to $2 10 for talls and at $2.50 for flats. In canned peaches the demand is small, stocks light and prices unchanged at $2.10 to $2.25 for 2's and at $3.25 to $3.75 for 3's. Apples are not much wanted and prices are unchanged at 85c. to $1 for 3's and $2 to $2.25 for gallons.

MONTREAL.

The canned goods market is very flat and what little business there is doing in vegetables is at a loss. Lunch tongues are quoted higher however at $3.50 and there has been something doing speculatively in canned salmon in the coming catch for July and August delivery, favorite brands having been placed at $4.40 to $4.50 and seconds $4.30.

trade." It quotes crude at $1.18 per bbl.; refined, 10c. in bbls, and 7 1-2c. in bulk.

Following are the quotations in Toronto: Canada refined oil, 13 to 13 1-2c.; carbon safety, 17 1-2 to 18c.; Canada water white, 19c.; American water white, 21 to 22c.; photogene, 25c.

TORONTO MARKET NOTES.

Advices received by P. L. Mason & Co. report that the Greek peninsula has been visited by heavy frosts, and that in some of the districts the budding vines have been injured to the extent of 20 per cent.

"Derby" and "Sweet 16" cigarettes are quoted 25c. higher, at $4.25 and $3.75 respectively.

The lower cables on beet at the close of last week were due to realizing on the part of holders, but the feeling is now stronger. The Cuba crop is likely to be 75,000 tons short, which may be increased to 150,000 tons.

Peanuts are stronger, and quoted higher at 13 to 14c. for roasted and at 11 to 12 1-2c. for green.

Clemes Bros. report that they are selling a good deal of maple syrup.

Perkins, Ince & Co. have just received a direct shipment of new season's Japan rice.

Stanway & Bayley report that their allotment of "Horse Shoe" brand of next season's salmon for this market is all sold. J. H. Todd & Son, of Victoria, B.C., the makers of this brand, are putting on the market another to be known as the "Beaver" brand. It will be a little lower in price than the "Horse Shoe," and the quality will be guaranteed.

Smith & Keighley are selling a good many prunes at prices ranging from 7 1-2 to 7 3-4c.

Smith Bros., who have carried on a wholesale and retail canned goods trade in Shaftesbury Hall, Toronto, for 18 years, have moved to 78 Queen west, where they have larger and more commodious premises. The erection of the court house severely injured their business, but they expect to regain their old trade now.

Granulated sugar is selling at 5 1-8 to 5 1-4c., and yellows at 4 to 4 3-4c.

Good lemons are getting scarce, and pineapples more plentiful.

Soaps are easier in New York, but the local market does not appear to be affected.

Total stock of sugar in four ports, 148,823 tons, against 140,196 tons last week, and 90,386 tons at the same time last year.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

MONTREAL, April 13, 1893.
GROCERIES.

The week has not presented many new features, but a leading and exciting one has been the continued excitement in the sugar market, buyers evidently being scared at the sharp jumps that the market has made, for there has been heavy buying at the advance and a further jump of a 1-16c. made on Thursday has not checked, but rather accentuated, the demand. Raw sugar is also very excited and rapidly advancing on outside markets. Outside of this groceries have ruled on the quiet side, for the fact that country roads are neither in a fit state for wheeling nor sleighing has operated against the actual movement in this connection. Syrups have ruled quiet and molasses firm, which must be disappointing to those who have been cutting prices. Teas are quiet but steady, but coffees and spices are firm. Canned goods are much the same, and other lines have shown no special feature. Remittances generally show an improvement over those of last month.

SUGAR.

The sugar market has continued excited and active throughout the week. A further advance on Thursday of 1-16c. verified the prediction made earlier in the week that prices were to go higher. Buying at the advance was free and it has been maintained since, so that the aggregate turnover during the week was exceptionally large. Quotations now are as follows at the refineries:—Granulated 4 7/8c., bright yellows 4 1/2c., and lower grades 3 7/8c. Even these prices are low compared with those of a few years ago, when the top price was 9 1/4c. for granulated. There are no signs of abatement in the strength of the raw sugar market, recent cables from England reporting the market there strong and advancing. Java is quoted at 17s. 7 1/2d., an advance of 9d. on the week, and fair refining has advanced to 15s. 9d. and beet to 16s. 1 1/2d. spot and 16s. 3d. May.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Syrups are moving fairly well at about 1 1/4 to 2c. per lb.

Advices from Barbadoes report a very strong market for molasses. The latest quotation is 13c., but as the crop is said to be well bought up some difficulty is being experienced in filling orders at these figures. The quotation for spring delivery is 30 to 30 1/2c., and spot prices are 32 to 32 1/2c.

TEAS.

The market has been generally quiet, the only business doing being a jobbing movement towards filling some retail orders on country and city account, the aggregate volume of which is not large. Sales of Japans have been made at the following range:—Low goods 12 to 14c., good to common 13 to 18 1/2c., fine 19 to 21 1/2c., and finest 21 to 31c. Black teas are steady, with sales reported for English account at 7d. to 1s. 1/2d. An English trade circular of the 24th March says:

The market still continues in the same dull state which has been the rule these last few weeks. But notwithstanding the apathy shown by dealers and the consequent scarcity of business by private contract, values have undergone little or no change, the purchases by packers on the one hand and shippers on the other proving sufficient to keep China tea steady. Indian and Ceylon teas the dealers cannot so well afford to neglect, and these have consequently at this week's auctions again sold at steady rates, though the offerings were nearly as heavy as last week. Deliveries have not improved, but on the other hand they have not either shown any further falling off. The following were the offerings in public sale during the week:—China teas, 6,246 packages—viz., 922 Congou, 2,552 scented, and 2,771 green; Indian teas, 23,181 packages; Ceylon teas, 20,878; Java teas, 1,247. On the whole the tendency at sale was towards firmer prices for common, but if anything again weaker for better tea. It is noticeable how Javas have of late come into favor with the home trade, who has again this week taken them at improving prices, which is, however, easily explained when the useful quality of the teas is considered and the high prices at which common Indian and Ceylon teas stand. In the terminal market a dull and even depressed tone has ruled during the greater part of the week, and only now towards the close a little more confidence is showing itself again. But it is surprising that in the face of last week's Colombo telegram, which gave the shipments for the first fortnight of the month as only 2,000,000 lbs., confidence should have run so low at all. If trade is so very bad just now it can only and must improve again, and as the situation remains sound and strong prospects should be so much better than they have been before.

COFFEES AND SPICES.

There has been a weaker feeling in New York and England, but owing to the light stocks this has had absolutely no effect here, for round lots of Maracaibo have sold during the week at 22c. ex-store. For strictly wholesale business we quote as follows:—Jamaica 19 to 20c., Maracaibo 21 1/2 to 22c., Rio 19 to 21c., Java 24 to 27c., and Mocha 25 to 28c., these prices being for strict wholesale lots.

Spices continue strong and business has been done on the basis of the following prices: Black pepper 8 to 9c., Pimento 6 1/2c., nutmegs 50 to 52 1/2c. to $1.00.

RICE.

A better movement is reported in rice owing to the reduced railway freight rates. Prices are unchanged as follows: Standard, $3.85; choice, $4; Japans, $4.25; Louisiana, $5.25, and Carolina, $7.50.

DRIED FRUIT.

There has been more enquiry for Valencia raisins off-stalk and sales of fine brands have been made at 4 3/4c. and good to common has been placed at 4 1/2c. The low priced trash that has been hanging about the market ever since last fall is still in evidence at 3 7/8c. without any takers. Valencia layers have sold at 6c. in fair sized lots. Currants are quiet and easy at 5 1/4 to 5 3/4c., one lot selling as low as 5c. the quality being reported good.

FISH.

The fish market is dull and neglected at the moment. Pickerel, dore, green cod, Labrador salmon, fresh herring and Yarmouth bloaters are out of the market. Pickled herrings are in good supply, but there is very little enquiry. We quote:—Haddock, 4 to 4 1/2c., lake trout 7c., white fish 7 to 7 1/2c., dried cod, $5.50; No. 2 mackerel, $12 per brl.; do. $7 per half brl.; C.B. and N.S. herring, $4.50 to $4.75 per brl.; haddies, 7 1/2 to 8c.

We quote winter wheat $4.00 to $4.25; spring patents $4.25 to $4.35; straight rollers $3.50 to $3.65; extra $3.10 to $3.25; superfine $2.60 to $2.90; city strong bakers' $4 to $4.15; strong bakers' $3.75 to $4.00.

FRUIT.

A good business has been done during the week in oranges and still continues, prices remaining about the same: Messina, $2.50 to $2.75; California, $3 to $3.50; Floridas, $4 to $4.50; Valencias, $5 to $5.50.

There has been a steady demand for lemons and prices rule unchanged. Fancy, $2.75 to $3; choice, $2.25 to $2.50; common, $1.25 to $2, as to kind and quality.

Very little has been done in dried fruit during the past week, the only change being an advance of $\frac{1}{2}$ c. in evaporated apples. We quote: Dried apples, $5\frac{1}{2}$ to 6c.; evaporated, 10c.; peaches, 19 to 21c.

Choice pineapples meet with a fair demand at 15 to 25c. as to quality.

A fair jobbing business is doing in bananas, choice bunches fetching $2.50 to $3, and others $1.25 to $2 as to quality.

BEANS.

The market is quiet but steady at $1.60 to $1.65 for Western hand picked, and $1.25 to $1.50 for ordinary to good. Lower grade sells at $1 to $1.10.

HONEY.

The demand continues very slow with extracted $5\frac{1}{2}$ to 7c. as to quality and comb $12\frac{1}{2}$ to 13c., dark buckwheat 8 to 9c.

HOPS.

Country holders find it more and more difficult to move supplies. Choice stock has been offered at 17c. without takers and we quote 16 to 17c. as a range.

MAPLE PRODUCTS.

Receipts of maple sugar are increasing and sales have taken place at $5\frac{1}{2}$ to $6\frac{1}{2}$ c. per lb. in wood. In tins there were sales at 65 to 75c., sugar has been placed at 7 to 8c. per lb.

ONIONS

The market has been steady during the past week, prices remaining unchanged. Red are selling at from $2.90 to $3.25 and yellows at $2.75 to $3.00.

POTATOES.

Supplies are not excessive and we note sales of car lots at 95c. to $1.00.

EGGS.

Receipts of eggs have continued to increase, and the larger supplies have depressed prices still further on those noted a week ago. For business now doing 13 to $13\frac{1}{2}$ c. is the range for business in a large way.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

The cheese situation is precisely the same. Advices from all quarters point to an increased production this year. In Quebec and up the Ottawa valley alone some forty new factories will be in operation, and the number is certain to be largely increased in Ontario. A new move with some of the Townships' factories is the placing of separators in the establishments, the intention being to run on creamery butter until the cheese season commences in earnest. The reason for this move is in the fact that it will afford feed for calves until the latter are off milk entirely, which is not the case with the residue from the cheese. If this is the intention the new move is all right, but if not the reverse is the case. No one wants to have the cheap cheese that is turned out from some American factories who follow this plan of operations. It is to be hoped that the factory men who are moving in this will stoutly resist temptation in this connection.

The butter market remains about the same. The chief bar to the possibility of immediate improvement is the fact that the opening of navigation will be late this year. This stops an outlet for a demand from points down the river and in the provinces. Consequently there is nothing doing except a local jobbing trade, but although there is more old creamery here than some people want, it has been subjected to absorption, even if it was slow and gradual. It is hard to quote a price, however, for most of the lots are small and the basis of sale not representative for business in a large way. For this 22c. is an outside figure. There is very little old dairy here, and this fact is a decided help to holders. In new butter, receipts of Townships dairy are somewhat large, but they are yet too small to be really appreciable. They are all readily taken by local grocers at full figures, 23c @ 24c being paid for parcels of stock to-day.

ST. JOHN, N. B., MARKETS

ST. JOHN, N.B., April 13, 1893.

The stormy weather the past week has interfered some with business, which otherwise would have been very satisfactory. Sugar keeps firm. Flour is unchanged. Beans are easier. Provisions also are reported lower. Lard has to follow suit, and sags off about $\frac{1}{4}$ c.

Sugar—The advance in sugar is maintained, and some venture the opinion that higher prices will be obtained later on. We quote granulated $4\frac{3}{4}$ to 5c., yellow $3\frac{3}{8}$ to $3\frac{3}{4}$ c., extra C $3\frac{3}{8}$ to $4\frac{1}{2}$ c.

Teas—This market is supplied in most lines and prices are somewhat firmer, especially in values from 16 to 25c.

Molasses—A fair demand. Barbadoes, new, is quoted at 32 to 33c.; old, 29 to 30c.

Dried Fruit—Market is steady. Off-stalk Valencias are selling at 5 to $5\frac{1}{2}$ c.; Valencia layers, $6\frac{1}{4}$ to $6\frac{1}{2}$ c.; prunes, 8 to $8\frac{1}{2}$ c.; dates, $4\frac{1}{2}$ to 5c.

Evaporated Apples— $8\frac{1}{2}$ to $9\frac{1}{2}$ c. for old, and new are selling at 11 to $11\frac{1}{2}$ c.

Eggs—Are in demand and sell readily at 17 to 18c.

Butter—The market is well supplied prices slightly easier, 19 to 21c.

Cheese—No change, $10\frac{1}{2}$ to $11\frac{1}{2}$ c. as to quality.

Fish—The market is dull, dry cod, large, move slow, $4.40 to $4.60, medium cod, $3.75 to $4.00, pollock $2.25 to $2.40, smoked herring 9 to 11c., finnan haddie 6c., pickled fish Shelbourne $4 to $4.25 in bbls., half barrels $2.25 to $2.50, bay herring, half barrels $1.60 to $1.75.

A QUESTION OF APPRAISING.

A long standing grievance with the merchants of Montreal has been the non-uniformity of appraisement of imports at the various ports of entry in the Dominion, the result of which was to discriminate against Montreal in the interpretation of the tariff items at competitive points. Numerous specific instances of irregularities in the application of the duty have transpired, going to show laxity at other points which gave merchants at such places a decided advantage over their fellows in Montreal in the competition for the distribution business of the country. Consequently it was natural to expect a large gathering the other day at the big port for the purpose of conferring with Comptroller Wallace regarding the matter. W. W. Ogilvie, president of the Board of Trade, occupied the chair, and among those present were: Messrs. James A. Cantlie, Thos. J. Drummond, J. B. McLea, J. D. Rolland, C. R. Smith, D. L. Lockerby, Jas. Williamson, Henry Lyman, Chas. P. Hebert, D. Cameron, John Kerry, J. B. Learmont, Jas. Slessor, J. R. Wilson, J. P. Cleghorn, D. Morrice, Henry Miles, Alex. Ewan, R. S. White, M.P., D. Sinclair, W. Reid, L. J. Bolvin, J. C. Rose, Jonathan Hodgson, L. E. Geoffrion, Alex. Manson, R. R. Stevenson, J. S. Shearer, Walter Paul, D. J. McArthur, Jas. McCall, J. C. McArthur, S. Davis, and others.

The chairman explained the object of the meeting as above, and Mr. J. B. Learmont explained that the difficulty lay solely in the fact that there was not a proper and uniform interpretation of the tariff. In Montreal the appraisers were thoroughly experienced men, who understood the goods they had to judge on and they passed goods properly. At some of the smaller ports, however, this unfortunately was not the case. He knew of tubing that had passed at Montreal paying a 30 per cent. duty, paying only 10 per cent. in the North-west, and this had gone on for years. Farmers' knives were another example. They passed in Montreal as tools at 35 per cent., and in other ports as manufactured steel, paying only 30 per cent., and again as cutlery, subject only to 25 per cent. A window handle was classed in Montreal under 35 per cent. as builders' hardware, but in other places only paid 30 per cent. Wire screens passed variously as wooden ware at 25 per cent. Goods were sometimes purchased in the States, where a special discount was given for export. Suppose the market value in the United States was $1.15 and the goods were sold for the Canadian trade at one dollar. Montreal merchants paid duty on a valuation of $1.15, while merchants in the west got the same goods through on a valuation of one dollar. Mr. Learmont recommended the printing of catalogues containing all classes of goods, and opposite each article the duty should appear plainly.

Mr. J. P. Cleghorn said that Montreal merchants only wanted justice. It was no question of having duties changed, but simply that appraisers should be appointed who knew their business, which was not the case at many small ports, where the appointments were frequently made owing purely to political influence, and not because the appointee was fitted for the position he had to fill.

Mr. J. H. Wilson, speaking on behalf of the hardware trade said that steel plates over 30 inches wide paid 12 1-2 per cent., less than 30 inches wide 30 per cent., but that it had come to his notice that western importers had only paid 12 1-2 per cent. on the latter, whereas the full duty was, of course, imposed in Montreal. In fact it seemed as if everyone all round, both provincial and federal, considered Montreal lawful plunder.

Mr. Hy. Miles, speaking for the grievances of the drug trade, said that in the case of malt extract, containing three per cent. of spirits, Montreal merchants had to pay the regular duty of $2.12 1-2 per gallon and 30 per cent. ad valorem, but that western importers brought in precisely the same extract and only paid 25 per cent., the duty imposed on the non-spirituous. This meant that in Montreal a bottle of the extract which retailed at 50c. actually cost 55c. Mr. Mills, however, did not see how one appraiser could handle two or three different houses. The drug trade wanted their own special appraiser, and nothing less would satisfy them.

Representatives of the liquor trade, Mr. C. P. Hebert and Mr. G. E. Geoffrion among others, detailed special cases of inequalities which had come under their notice, after which Mr. Jas. Slessor spoke on behalf of the dry goods trade. He referred to Melton goods, which had been admitted to Toronto and Hamilton at a lower rate of duty than in Montreal. Dress goods with printed spots had paid the duty of 10 cents per pound and 32 1-2 per cent., while the same goods had been admitted into Toronto, Hamilton and London at 22 1-2 per cent. merely.

The grocery question was taken up by Mr. D. L. Lockerby, who said that on some articles in the grocery trade duty was charged on larger quantities than were actually received. For instance, of one size of Lea & Perrin's Worcestershire Sauce, it would take forty bottles to equal a gallon, but the importer had to pay on sixteen as a gallon. In a barrel of Crosse & Blackwell's sauce there were only twenty-five gallons, but duty was charged on 37 1-2 gallons. A pound tin of Royal Baking Powder paid six cents duty, a tin containing three-quarters of a pound paid eight cents duty. In Victoria, Vancouver and New Westminster duty was charged only on the quantity received.

The Hon. Mr. Wallace, in replying, referred to the various cases that had been called to his attention, and requested each gentleman to furnish him with exact data, and they would be closely examined into. As to the general question of appraisement and classification, for values, he was free to admit that some improvements could be made, although the evils were, perhaps, not so great as some imagined. As to the suggestion that a catalogue should be prepared in which the rates of duty were placed opposite the different articles, he had been engaged upon such a work for the last two months, and hoped in a very short time to have it completed. As to the appointment of travelling appraisers he did not think it would be successful, as they could never check the invoices at the different points of entry. He was not very clear as to the best way to proceed. At the present time four men were constantly engaged at Ottawa checking entries, and he intended to increase their number. Their duty was to see that the right classification of the articles was made, that the right rate of duty was charged, and that the calculation was correctly carried out. At present each man checked the entries from a particular district; but in future the entries would be given out indiscriminately, so that one man would not get the same district two days together. He quite agreed that there should be a more efficient and complete system of appraisement, and the opinions which had that day been expressed would largely guide the department in coming to a proper decision on the matter. He assured them that he would use his best efforts to secure an improvement, and he would be glad if they would communicate still further with him and give him more ideas on this very important subject.

On the motion of the chairman, seconded by Mr. C. P. Hebert, a vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Wallace.

CANNED SALMON OUTLOOK.

New York Bulletin: The spot market for canned salmon seems to be taken care of in very good shape. Lines of Red Alaska fish in store or to arrive by sail vessels now afloat for this port are in demand at $1.15 delivered, and parcels unsold have only to be offered at that to find ready sale. Moderate quantities are being moved out at $1.17 1-2, and, although the distribution is not heavier than usual at this period of the year, it affords satisfactory basis or quite general belief that the end of the 1892 season will find surplus stocks lighter than they have been in several years. Columbia river fish of last season's pack is believed to be well sold up also, leaving the general statistical position on this side the Atlantic remarkably favorable. England sends none of the chronic wails of burdensome stocks there that used to figure prominently in private correspondence and in regular trade reports, and the presumption is that the situation in Europe has improved. Prospects for the coming season packing are therefore of particular interest. According to latest accounts the Columbia River cannery will pack all the fish that they may secure cans for, providing the run of fish is sufficient, owing to the unsatisfactory outcome of the attempt to form a combination. Outside Alaska cannery propose to do some heavy work also. In the latter connection the following data of probable pack, furnished by a reliable merchant, are of some interest:

	Cases.
Alaska Packers Association	500,000
Alaska Improvement Company	60,000
Pacific Steam Whaling Co.	50,000
Klawak Co.	10,000
Baronoff Packing Co.	10,000
Yess Bay	12,000
Chilcat Canning Co.	30,000
Metakalalah	10,000

From this it would appear that the combine cannery intend to pack 222,000 cases, and that the aggregate pack of Alaska fish will likely be very close to 722,000 cases, or within 67,000 cases of the heavy output during the season of 1891. That the "independent" interests will carry out their intentions is not, however, a settled fact. Some unforeseen influences may cause a change of mind on the part of some concerns, and accidents may interfere with operations. But that the "outside" pack will be a liberal one seems more than probable at the present time. On the heels of the above estimate comes a report to the effect that the Association have authorized bids on the basis of $1.02 1-2 f.o.b. San Francisco for prime red fish, and stand ready to take the entire "outside" pack at that rate. This is suggestive, to say the least of it, and casts no little uncertainty around the near future of the market. There is in existence what may be termed documentary evidence that $1 per dozen f.o.b. San Francisco affords a very neat margin of profit to the cannery. On this point the report of the Alaska Packers' Association may be specified, since it shows a profit equal to about $1 per case on last year's pack, or $400,000 all told. Such being the case, close observers are inclined to skepticism regarding the alleged bid by the combine, and are more inclined to think that a contest will take place if the "outside" cannery pack the quantity estimated in the statement given above.

CRITIQUES ISSUE APRIL 7.

An important feature of the starch agreement is that the heretofore denied privilege to retailers of buying directly at bottom figures, is now officially fixed as something proper and just. Why on earth the buyers must be divided into goats and sheep is a question the losses on starch have enabled the manufacturers to answer satisfactorily.

The next man to get his eyes opened, and his sense of fairness enlarged is the grasping wholesaler who objects to brokers selling to retailers.

Yet a few weeks, and the lively canned goods gossip will be replaced by the cheerful gurgle of the throat as it draws down the only and fleeting genuine green pea.

Tobacco talk reminds me that good proof is to hand that the manufacturers of tobacco cannot sell anyone not on the list, unless the guild allows them, not even if the manufacturer is willing. And it says a lot for the backbone of the said manufacturer when he permits an organization so dead as the guild is to boss him in so flagrant a manner. Enough common law is apparent on the surface to commit the whole junta for conspiracy.

I am glad we live to-day. Glad for the wholesome spirit of fair play which is always gaining ground, glad for the growth of a larger live and let-live feeling, and gladder still for the many happy hours which improved surroundings, cheaper living, and greater intellectual advantages offer us in wending our way through this world's journey. Our poor ancestors had not enough of these things to compensate them for so aptly preparing the way for us.

California fruit in cans is like other very nice things—it reigns in high "G."

Our old friend Mr. D. on Jarvis street, has pronounced views on permanence of location, and lives them up to the letter.

Retailers will never agree. A certain reliable firm refused to loan us half-a-dozen canned smelts this week, and the next time they want our buck-saw for a month's loan they will sadly from us turn, or else we will give them an old stager which is a buck and no mistake, for it always kicks dead ahead on the middle of the down stretch. We have been going to give it away for a number of years, only wanting provocation enough we have heretofore delayed.

The average customer, who had got it firmly fixed into his head that 20 lbs. for a dollar was a vested right, has had a shock this week in the nature of higher prices for sugar. And the retailer who thinks he is earning a future store of good will by keeping down to old prices, is living on sand of the shiftiest nature, for people have a nasty habit of forgetting these little sacrifices when another store stands eggs out at one half cent per dozen lower than he.

Our ideas on society life for grocers are somewhat lively. If a member of the absolute "400" it comes expensive, and is often productive of larger credits by very fashionable and utterly worthless cads. "Lodge" business is very refreshing if the "right" lodge; but at the top of any lodge, as a rule, are not found the most successful business men, but rather the plodding men of mediocre ability, who think and dream of nothing else; to these the ritual is a positive benefit as a mind burnisher of rare merit. Often we have adjourned from a hard day's work to the lodge room, and there spent a delightful two or three hours among our fellow-men with great pleasure. This is its stronghold with busy men. STRAIGHT MOYUNE.

RICE FLUMES.

At the last session of the Louisiana State Legislature there were passed two laws relative to the dahls and conduits of the levees of the State. These enactments required the removal of all existing dahls, and specified that if this work of removal was not completed by January 1 the police jury was to notify the parties interested to do so, and in default thereof that the members of the police jury were to have the work performed under their direction. Suit was then to be instituted against the delinquents.

A test case under the new law has just been tried, the defense being that the law violated the Constitution of the United States and various articles of the Constitution of the State. The court sustained the constitutionality of the law, but said the penalty would have to be stricken out, for the law simply said that every existing rice flume had to be removed, without mentioning on whose place or by whom it had to be removed; as this would make a man from the upper part of the parish remove an existing flume from the lower part of the parish, that made the law a nullity. As a practical question, the district attorney argued that to enforce the law at the present time, with the high state of the water in the bayou would be to devastate and inundate the whole of the parish of Lafourche, but the constitutional points made by the defense would enable them to block the game so as to defer a final decision of the case long enough to enable the rights of the planters to save this year's crop without trouble. The undercurrent of opinion shows that the police jury and the big sugar planters favor the law; the small rice planters are opposed to it. An appeal will be taken to the Supreme Court. Meanwhile the decision is regarded as reducing the law to a nullity.

GLASSWARE AT THE WORLD'S FAIR

GROCER is in receipt of a handsome lithograph from Gowans, Kent & Co., of this city, of the World's Fair Building of the Libbey Glass Co., who have acquired the right to manufacture and sell American glassware within the grounds of the Exposition. At an expense of $100,000 the Libbey Glass Co., with its usual push and enterprise, have erected and equipped one of the most complete, beautiful and largest glass factories ever erected for exhibition purposes. It has the capacity of accommodating over 2,000 people at any one time. Mr. D. L. Stive, of Toledo, one of the foremost architects in the United States, designed and superintended the construction of the building and saw that every detail necessary to making it the most complete of its kind was carried out. Entering the main doorway the visitor finds in the glass house or "Blowing room" an immense glass melting furnace in full operation, with brisk "gathering boys" thrusting long irons into the white hot mouths of the crucibles, and by their own dexterous twist bring forth the hot waxy glass which they quickly hand to the "blower," who blows and fashions it into shape, producing entirely by the eye an exquisitely proportioned piece of ware. At another "pot" we see a boy gather from the crucible a huge piece of molten metal, drop it into a mold standing on a press, the presser pulls the lever down, drops the "plunger," and before you know it, out comes a World's Fair souvenir. In fact, every method of the glass blower's art is to be seen in this department, and many will linger to watch the interesting operations. In the glass cutting department some 40 skilled cutters will be constantly at work cutting the most intricate and beautiful patterns on the various pieces of glass. Those who have never been fortunate enough to see the process of glass cutting will not only find this branch most interesting but very instructive.

Adjoining this cutting room will be the decorating room, where a number of skilled decorators will be found busily engaged painting the most beautiful designs upon all manner and shapes of useful and ornamental pieces of glass, after which they are placed in the firing kilns and fired. Directly opposite these rooms are to be found the glass spinning and weaving rooms, where will be seen the novel sight of glass being woven into fabrics of every conceivable kind—beautiful colored napery, lamp mats, neckties, baskets, bonnets and hats, all made from woven glass. Space forbids a further mention of the extent of this firm's factory, suffice it to say that all visiting it will be amply repaid for their trouble and come away with a more extended knowledge of this particular industry. Gowans, Kent & Co. are to be congratulated on their good fortune in being appointed agents for such a progressive factory, said to be the foremost of its kind on the continent.

Mr. Richard Smardon, boot and shoe manufacturer, of Three Rivers, has assigned. The liabilities are placed at about $50,000, with small assets. Mr. Smardon was in the business in Montreal for many years, but about five years ago he started a factory in Three Rivers, for which he received a bonus from the city of $3,500 a year and other privileges. The factory employed from 200 to 300 hands, all now being thrown out of employment. Mr. Smardon sustained a loss of about $3,000 by the recent fire on St. Paul street, where he kept a stock of goods uninsured.

HONESTY AND THOROUGHNESS.

A gentleman who is at the head of one of the largest commercial houses in New York, on being asked the question, What trait in a boy's character will be of most value to him in after life, replied:

"Honesty first, then thoroughness. The great value of thoroughness is understood and appreciated by just about one or two young men out of every ten in business life to-day. The tendency with the average young man is to 'rush' things, to get a thing through, no matter how it is done. It is the end he seeks, forgetting that some people are apt to examine into the means by which some ends are attained. It is not at all surprising why some young men do not succeed in business when we see the methods they adopt to attain success. They want large salaries, good positions, but short hours and little to do, and even that little they will not do well. If there are two Americanisms that have wrought more evil than any other, it is the one of 'Oh, it is good enough!' and the other of 'It will do,' when a thing is about half or three quarters done. Rapid work is never creditable where it is but half done. Far more apt is it to act just the reverse than the worker imagines, and the young man whose only recommendation is that he is able to get through with 'a pile of work' by such methods, has in him the making of a very poor business man. The successful business men are most careful about small things, and they often look for the smaller traits in their clerks in forming opinions of their characters.

"Thoroughness applies to the largest enterprises as well as to the smallest routine detail of office work. Slipshod methods are never identified with success. Patience, perseverance and thoroughness are the levers of business progress. 'Rushing' a thing never pays. We regard men of quick or early successes sometimes, and say that 'he rushed into success,' when the fact is, that no man ever rushed into success that is a success. Behind every successful career is always found work, and hard work, work born of accuracy and thoroughness. However much to the public the successful man may sometimes seem to have been made in a day, there is always a story to every success. To one story there may be more chapters than to another, but the story as a whole is always the same, and two chapters one is pretty sure to find in the book of every successful life are headed 'Honesty' and 'Thoroughness.'"

VEGETABLE POETRY.

Potatoes came from far Virginia;
Parseley was sent us from Sardinia;
French beans, low growing on the earth,
To distant India trace their birth;
But scarlet runners, gay and tall,
They climb upon your garden wall—
A cheerful sight to all around—
In South America were found.
The onion travelled here from Spain;
The leek from Switzerland we gain,
Garlic from Sicily obtain,
Spinach in far Syria grows.
Two hundred years ago or more,
Brazil the artichoke sent o'er,
And Southern Europe's sea-coast shore,
Beet root on us bestows,
When Elizabeth was reigning here,
Peas came from Holland and were dear.
The South of Europe lays its claim
To beans, but some from Egypt came.
The radishes, both thin and stout,
Natives of China are no doubt;
But turnips, carrots and sea-kale,
With celery so crisp and pale,
Are products of our own fair land.
And cabbages, a goodly tribe,
Which abler pens might well describe—
Are also ours, I understand.

"Talk about looking for the pot of gold at the foot of the rainbow," says Robert Louis Stevenson in effect in one of his recent productions, "but if you want something that will employ you for the rest of your life just start out to look for a soft job." There is a good deal of truth in this caustic remark of the well-known novelist. Some men seem to be born with silver spoons in their mouths and ease and comfort, apparently at least, accompanies them through life. But the very large majority of mankind have to roll up their sleeves and fight their way. And, after all, are not the latter class most to be envied! At any rate they are the most worthy of being emulated. The man who is compelled to hew his way through the undergrowth of competition, adversity, etc., to the garden of ease and affluence beyond is the superior intellectually, morally, physically or any way else you choose to take it. Rubbing against the world sharpens a man's wits, broadens his sympathies and his views, and better qualifies him for the duties of citizenship. Hard work is the price of success in any sphere in life, be it mercantile, professional or mechanical. Any young men who possesses this desirable characteristic and the qualification of continuity is reasonably sure of success in attaining his object. One condition is necessary. He should choose that trade or calling for which he is most adapted. Much depends on adaptability, for the better a man is fitted to follow a certain avocation the greater will naturally be the measure of his success. But even should a man make a mistake in selection, pluck and perseverance will largely counteract it and ensure a measure of success at least. No, soft jobs or fortunes do not come, like the winds. Men must go after them; and hills many will they be compelled to climb before they obtain the desideratum. The men who have been—some of them for years—sitting in the valley, doing next to nothing, waiting for soft situations with big salaries attached to come down to them are likely to wait till the Grim Reaper comes along and garners them in.

One of the big grocery houses in New York has issued a circular to its employees informing them that they must not frequent pool rooms, race tracks or saloons in business hours under penalty of dismissal. There are few who will dispute the justice of this edict, peremptory as it may seem. An army would soon be annihilated if, in war times, it failed to throw out guards. And failure would soon fall to the lot of the firm whose clerks were loafing around pool rooms, or saloons, or viewing horse races during business hours. Competition is keen and profits small in these days, and clerks need to be ever on the alert to grasp every opportunity for extending business and increasing the profits. This they cannot do if they are away from the store or warehouse when they ought to be in it. It is a delicate thing for a merchant to tell his employees what they shall and what they shall not do, or define where they shall or shall not visit outside business hours, but in the instance in question the limitations are only confined to the hours of business. Were they, however, in some instances, extended to embrace the whole of the twenty-four, it would be a good thing rather than otherwise. No one would be justified in prohibiting an employee from merely viewing a horse race when off duty or of even visiting a saloon, provided excesses were not indulged in. But with the pool room, where men, yes, and boys, congregate to bet on horse races and to enjoy much of the excitement of the race without seeing it, it is different. Men go there to gamble, and a gambler is to be even less trusted than a drunkard. These pool rooms are a curse to any country, and Toronto knows it. Not only have the police been unable, owing to legal technicalities, to shut up those that have settled here, but the pool rooms have increased in number during the past week or so. They are no resorts for young men who have reputations at stake and who aim to make life successful, and merchants would, it seems to us, be justified in prohibiting their clerks to frequent such places.

Somebody has said that carelessness is at the bottom of every accident. It might with equal truth be applied to fires other than those caused by incendiaryism. Through lack of proper oversight on the part of the manufacturer a stove, furnace or flue is allowed to go out with a defect in it, and some day the building is discovered to be on fire. The bricklayer improperly builds a chimney, and one day the roof or garret is found to be in a blaze. inflammable material is left too near the fire-place and this results in the brigade being called out on another occasion. Other causes of fire through carelessness are seen in the handling of oil and in the allowing of oil, rags, waste and dirt to accumulate in heaps about the premises until spontaneous combustion ignites them. Last month the total loss by fires in Canada and the United States was the largest ever recorded. This, together with the fact that last year was a trying one for the fire insurance companies, is leading underwriters to seriously consider the advisability of advancing rates. In some places they have already decided to do so, notably Montreal for instance. There the increase to retailers is something like 40 per cent. But to whatever extent may the fires there be traceable in the first instance to carelessness, it is felt by the insurance men that the losses have been a good deal heavier than they would have been had there been an efficient fire brigade. Higher rates of insurance means an addition to the cost of doing business. This, in these days of keen competition and small profits, is anything but desirable. If business men in Montreal or in any other city, town, or village want low rates of insurance they not only need an efficient fire brigade but they need to exercise greater care in guarding against outbreaks on their own premises. The greater the vigilance exercised the fewer fires will there be. It must be remembered that there is an actuarial science in fire insurance as well as in life insurance, and as the ratio of fires falls, the rates must in time, follow. Oliver Wendell Holmes says that once upon a time it was arranged that every man and woman in the world should, at a given time, send up a simultaneous shout. Had the intention carried the noise would undoubtedly have been great. But if all the business men in the country were to simultaneously adopt measures for guarding more thoroughly against fire there would be a surprising falling off in the number of fires and in the losses resulting therefrom.

A notable feature about the fires that have occurred of late has been the number of sufferers that carried no insurance whatever. Storekeepers there always have been, and storekeepers there always will be, who will seemingly trust all to Providence and nothing to the fire insurance companies. But fire seems to have visited a good many more of them during the past month or so than formerly. The proportion, however, may not have been any greater, the larger showing being possibly the result of the increased number of fires. In some instances where a conflagration had visited a place, among those burned out were two, three and four merchants who carried no insurance on their stocks. Others, and some of them fairly well established firms, had carried insufficient insurance and were compelled to assign. Every merchant should not only insure his stock but do so to the extent of 60 per cent. of its value. Unless he has capital enough to liquidate every indebtedness, should his stock be destroyed, it is little short of criminal for a business man to neglect to properly insure.

There are comparatively few who realize the extent and value of the Canadian lobster industry. In 1869 the industry was valued at $15,275, while in 1891 it was worth $2,250,000, and factories, traps, etc., $860,000. In 1891 there were no less than 14,285,157 cans packed. For this purpose alone it required something like 71 1-2 millions of fish. But add to this the estimated 5,000,000 and over live lobsters marketed, and the catch can be placed at about 76 1-2 millions. Unfortunately this important industry is in danger of being gradually wiped out. The fecundity of the lobster is wonderful, every female on reaching maturity emitting from 12,000 to 20,000 eggs every season. But, there is a limit to everything, and the work of destruction seems to have reached a point where it must be curtailed if the industry is to be preserved to us. Lobsters do not travel long distances. At the approach of winter they seek the deep waters where the temperature is milder and more uniform. With the return of spring they come back to their summer haunts, and, as the season advances, gradually get nearer shore. Consequently there is a danger of exhaustion in localities where over-fishing is practiced. In some places the fishermen are learning this to their cost, the average size of the fish being gradually but surely getting smaller, and this too in spite of the enforcement of close seasons and regulations fixing a minimum size under which no lobster must be taken. The question of protecting the industry has become so important that the Department of Marine and Fisheries has thought it advisable to issue a supplementary report on the matter, and in it the deputy minister points out that it has become a matter of "imperative necessity not only to maintain intact present regulations but to adopt further measures in order to assure the healthy condition of a staple industry upon whose permanency and productiveness thousands of persons in the Maritime Provinces depend for a livelihood." It now takes five, six, seven, or eight lobsters to fill a can, while ten or twelve years ago two or three were sufficient. In the face of this, and with the experience of the United States as a further mentor, it is time something radical was done in the premises.

It is generally conceded that the future of the sugar market largely depends on the Cuban cane crop. It is already acknowledged that the European beet crop will be short. At the moment the situation in Cuba favors the contention that the crop will be short. Reports indicate it, and the falling off in the receipts emphasize it. The total stocks of sugar in the principal countries is a little more than two thousand tons in excess of a year ago at the same time, but this is offset by a decrease of 5,000 tons in the quantity afloat. M. Licht gives the quantity of sugar available for export in Germany and Austria as 65,000 tons less than last year, and for all Europe as 100,000 tons less. The raw market is in such a position that the more carefully it is watched and its fluctuations noted the better idea will the trade be able to gather regarding the future of the market. The Canadian refiners are decidedly strong in their views, and with their confreres across the line, believe that the market will go higher.

The business men of Winnipeg are determined to secure the desideratum of early closing. They met the other night and reorganized the Early Closing Association. It was decided to wait upon every merchant in the city and exchange views regarding the matter, and a committee was appointed to look after this particular duty. They will find, if they have not already done so, that they will have a hard row to hoe before they secure the consummation of their object. But Winnipeg merchants are live, progressive and persevering, and generally accomplish what they undertake, and they are going the right way about it.

PERSEVERING PATRONS.

One cannot help admiring perseverance, even if it be sometimes in pursuance of an unworthy object. Here are the Patrons of Industry, for instance. As far as their efforts in establishing Patron stores are concerned they have met with signal failure. Almost as fast as they have set them up they have been knocked down. And for good reason. Not only do they bind the "party of the second part" down to an agreement, compliance with which would swamp him, and, in fact, does swamp him, but many of them only buy of the Patron store just what they cannot get as cheap elsewhere. Instances occur frequently, but the latest to come under the notice of GROCER is that of the Patron storekeeper in Ballycroy. In a moment of weakness he something like a year ago covenanted with them to sell them goods on their own terms. For a while, like brothers, they stuck to him, and then, like cowards, suddenly left him with a large stock on hand. He has since been compelled to go out of business. And thus it will always be to the end of the chapter. Farmers are no more qualified to instruct a grocer or general merchant in regard to fixing the margin of profits upon which he shall live than they are barristers on points of law. It is not to be expected. It is not in their line. Consequently it is as much presumption on their part as it would be for a "city chap" who scarcely knew a plow from a harrow to deign to teach a farmer how to farm. It is scarcely probable that anyone would be found guileless enough to follow such instructions, but were it possible that someone, "in a moment of weakness," did so, failure would assuredly follow as does night the day. And yet this in substance is what the Patrons are doing when they undertake to induce storekeepers to sell them goods on their own terms. Why, it is ridiculous on the very face of it. Of course, in those days of much striving to get custom, it is a big temptation for a merchant to have held out before him, like a bunch of carrots before a donkey, the alluring patronage of a certain and important class of the residents in his neighborhood. But merchants should remember that they are such and not philanthropists, and that they are in business to make at least a living, and not for the mere privilege of filling the mouths of their customers without being remunerated for doing so. It is better to do a small business and clear $500 a year than a large one and not pay living expenses. When merchants are being approached with a view to selling themselves, body and breeches, to the Patrons, they should keep this in mind; and not only this, but the experience of those who have listened to the music of the sirens and been wrecked on the island of destruction.

In districts where the Patron stores have failed the Patrons are now beginning to buy wholesale. The secretaries of the lodges in these districts are in the habit, it seems, of canvassing the members, usually on meeting nights, with a view to learning how much tea this one will require, how much coal oil this particular one will want, and so on. Thus fortified, he sends off to the wholesale house that has been induced to sell them, and orders en bloc the commodities required. From the station the goods are usually carted to the house of one of the members, where they are apportioned out. Amusing incidents, and some of them for ridiculousness vying with the capers cut at corn husking parties, taffy pulls, etc., are told. During the course of one of those "divying ups" a few weeks ago, some distance east of Toronto, the sugar and coal oil by some means got beautifully mixed on the kitchen floor. From more than one source THE GROCER learns that one or more Toronto wholesale houses are not at all backward in accepting orders from Patrons.

CHATS WITH BUSINESS MEN.

"No, siree, it's no secret to me why Blank is so successful as a city traveler," remarked another C. T. to me, "and I'll enlighten you. He is an expert in teas, and he puts this qualification to good use. For instance, you run a grocery store. You know what the value of a good tea is in your store. But you cannot properly blend it yourself. By-and-bye along comes Blank. He learns your position. He'll take off his coat, and there and then mix your teas for you. If he does not catch the taste of your trade then he will eventually. What is the result? Why, he captures your custom, and Tom, Dick or Harry has got no show along side him. See."

I made one of a group of persons the other night who were awaiting the opening of the meeting of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association. Composing it were Robert Mills, A. G. Booth, R. Donald, and W. Thompson. The conversation turned on the sale of liquors. I don't know who started it, but I remember Mr. Donald remarking:

"Well, if a few years ago we had been told that grocers would have been able to have got along without selling liquor we would not have believed it."

"That's so," chimed in Messrs. Booth and Mills.

"And I don't believe there is as much liquor drank now as there used to be either," continued Mr. Booth. "For instance, I know people, some of whom used to be customers of mine for liquor, who at Christmas time will come to me and ask if I cannot get them a bottle of wine. They seem to be ashamed to go to a regular store and get it. Christmas seems to be about the only time now when some of them want wine, and I suppose they think they cannot celebrate it without it. But talk about drinking! I remember what times they used to have during threshing on the farm when I was a boy. I was raised on a farm. When I was a little fellow it used to be my duty on such occasions to carry around the pail of whiskey to the men. The thresher was driven by horse power, in spells of half an hour, and between times I'd take the pail around. Everybody—boy as well as man—would dip in the tin cup and take a drink."

"And everybody would be drunk by night, I suppose," chipped in Mr. Thompson.

"Indeed they would," rejoined Mr. Booth, as he took off his glasses and leisurely wiped them. "And, what is more, some of them would keep it up nearly all night. But you don't see any of that now," he concluded.

"Well, talking of the quantity of liquor drank now and years ago," added Mr. Donald, "jars and jemi-johns now come to our place for syrups and vinegar that I can well remember having filled often with liquor for the same people."

"But I struck a curious thing once when we handled liquors," remarked Mr. Robert Mills, as a smile overspread his features at the remembrance of it. "One day a flask was brought in to be filled with whiskey. It was a large black flask, and on it was pasted a black label on which was printed in letters of gold something like this, if I can remember rightly," explained he, as he traced on the palm of his left hand with his index finger:

"JOHN McCARTNEY,
Dealer in Wines and Liquors,
DUBLIN.

"Funerals Furnished on Shortest Notice."

Amid the laughter that followed Mr. Mills remarked that he had offered a dollar for the bottle but could not get it. Just then President Clark shouted "Order," and the experience meeting gave place to a business meeting.

"Making lots of money on starch?" jocularly queried I of a starch man a few days ago.

"We are, eh?" he rejoined. "Well, we're not. But we need to I can tell you," he added as a serious look overspread his features. "Do you know that it will take us at least a year to make up for the losses of the past? You may not credit it, but it is true."

"It is expected," said Joseph R. Devaney, one of Eby, Blain & Co.'s travelers, to me Saturday, "that navigation will open at Gravenhurst Monday and on the Muskoka lakes and Collingwood about a week later. Business is looking up at both Collingwood and Gravenhurst. By-the-bye, the Georgian Bay Navigation Company are putting a new steamer on the Muskoka lakes this season."

BYSTANDER.

'TIS A PLEASURE TO READ IT.

In these days, when commercial questions are so often viewed in the light of extreme partyism and discussed in the heat of party fire, it is a pleasure to read calm and unbiased opinions like those recently expressed by the N. Y. Commercial Bulletin on trade relations between the United States and Canada.

"There are intimations that the importance of more intimate commercial relations between this country and Canada is appreciated by the present Administration, and has already received some consideration from it," it begins. "The destruction of the commercial barriers between the two nations and the creation of a great and active market would be an immense commercial achievement, and as a political stroke would rival if not surpass the Louisiana purchase. On our side of the line the greatest obstacle to more intimate commercial relations with the Dominion is to be found in the belief that while Canada would be a desirable market for our manufactured goods; she would pour across the boundary crude products to an extent that would drive American farmers out of their business. The American farmers' fear of Canadian competition has been played on for years by politicians, and yet year after year Canada goes on buying more of our agricultural products than we buy of hers, and our farmers do not discover that Canada is the second or third best customer we have.

"It was even deemed necessary for the farmer to exclude Canadian barley and eggs three years ago in singular oblivion to the immense quantities of corn, wheat and provisions which Canada annually buys from us. In the fiscal year 1892 the breadstuffs sold to Canada amounted to $11,401,494, while the amount we bought of her was only $3,673,343, a condition of trade that ought to make the American farmer content to see the barriers somewhat reduced, if not entirely removed. The only two large items in our breadstuff imports from Canada, were wheat and barley, both of special varieties, grown little or not at all here, and imported because of their quality, and not because of their cheapness. The wheat and flour we sold Canada were worth nearly seven million dollars, the corn nearly two millions and the rye over two millions.

"Much greater was the disparity between our exports and imports of provisions. Of provisions, dairy products and eggs we sold to Canada $4,443,076, and bought of Canada $595,891 worth. Of all the items in this schedule, the only one of which we imported any considerable quantity from Canada was eggs. All the provisions we bought of Canada amounted to less than $57,000, and the butter and cheese we bought were less than $27,000, while the quantity we sold was worth $1,237,910. In the matter of vegetables and seeds, the trade was more nearly even, but the balance in our favor was about $200,000. The aggregate of all these food articles exported by us to Canada in 1892 was $16,855,054, while the amount imported from Canada was only $5,079,615. And yet the farmers along our northern frontier have been told till many of them believe it that Canadian competition would ruin them. It is mainly this mistaken notion that, as to our people, prevents a commercial arrangement that would be of great value to us and of incalculable value to Canada."

CANADIAN EGGS.

Complaints are being made by Canadian consignors of eggs to the United Kingdom of the unsatisfactory results in some cases. An instance is mentioned of carefully selected eggs put up by the best packers, and running uniform in size and quality, being sent at one and the same time to two different dealers in an English town, one of whom rendered account sales netting the consignor 18 1-3 cents per dozen, while the other dealer's sales netted only 8 1-4 cents per dozen. It is urged that such discrepancies are the consequence of some of the consignees having had little or no previous experience of the trade into which they have been induced to enter by the opening of the new Canadian export trade in eggs. On the whole, however, the trade of the past season is said to have been fairly satisfactory to the shippers. It is many years since stocks have been so well cleared out, and, the American demand having been sufficiently strong, in spite of the duty, to provide a good market in the United States, it has been a question whether the shippers might not have done better if they had sent fewer eggs to this country.—Grocers' Review, Manchester.

PROTECTION AGAINST BURGLARY.

Chief of Police Grasett has issued a circular drawing the attention of business men to an electric call system in connection with the police department of the city. These signal boxes cost about $50, and the expense of maintenance will reach $25 per year, which will be the only charge made to those who have the system put in their place of business. It is proposed to confine this protection to the district bounded by Simcoe, College, Carlton, Sherbourne and Esplanade streets. A working sample box has been placed in the chief's room at police headquarters, where it may be seen by those who desire to have it established. Several gentlemen connected with the different financial institutions inspected it Tuesday and were much pleased with the idea. Subscribers will have to sign a three years' contract when making their agreement. The system is to be run in connection with the present police electric patrol system under Patrol Sergeant Peckham, and the box may be placed in any part of the building protected. Within the signal box is the same arrangement as in the police patrol boxes, minus the telephone. There are five different signals, as follows: Police wagon, thieves, riot, test and fire. The machine will always be set for a fast call, and all that will be necessary to have the patrol wagon and some men on hand in about two minutes will be to press the button. Connected with the main box in each office will be a series of wires with small electric buttons under the edge of the counter in different parts of the building, so that it would require a half regiment of robbers to raid a bank. To prevent false alarms by persons thoughtlessly pressing the buttons, they are made double, so that it is necessary to take hold and squeeze them. When an alarm is sent it registers the number of the box on the chemical register at police headquarters, so there will be no mistake by men going to the wrong place. It will be the duty of some person in each office to place the pointer on the "test" branch and send a signal once each day to make sure that the line is in working order. The cost of this extra protection to business men is almost exactly the price of the machine and the cost of attention by the telephone company, who look after the police telephones.

ENGLISH WEIGHTS AND MEASURES

"We sell," remarks an English contemporary, "pickled cod by the barrel, trawled cod at so much each, hooked cod by the score, crimped cod by the pound, shrimps by the stone, soles by the pair, Dutch smelts by the basket, and English smelts by the hundred. Butter in Ireland is sold by the cask and the firkin, in England by the pound of 16 ozs., by the roll of 24 ozs., the stone and the hundred-weight, which is not 100 lbs., as in Canada and the United States, but 112 lbs. A load of straw is 1,296 lbs., of old hay 2,016 lbs., and of new hay 2,160 lbs., though it is not specified when hay becomes old. A firkin of butter is 56 lbs., a firkin of soap 64 lbs., and a firkin of raisins 112 lbs. A hogshead of beer is 54 gallons, but a hogshead of wine is 63 gallons. A pipe of Marsala is 93 gallons, of Madeira 92 gallons, of Bucellas 117 gallons, of port 103, and of Tenerife 100 gallons. A stone weight of a living man is 14 lbs., but a stone weight of a dead ox is 8 lbs., a stone of cheese is 16 lbs., of glass 5 lbs., of hemp 32 lbs. A barrel of beef is 200 lbs., of butter 224 lbs., flour 196 lbs., gunpowder 100 lbs., soft soap 256 lbs., beer 36 gallons, tar 26 1-4 gallons, while a barrel of herrings is 500 fish."

BERMUDA ONIONS.

Bermuda onions have been arriving in small quantities ever since the middle of December, but the steamers which arrived every week, always had less than 100 crates, until the middle of March, when a cargo of 250 crates came in, and since then arrivals have gradually increased, and with over 12,000 crates on this week's ship the season may be said to have fairly opened. Onions usually commence to arrive about the first of January, and by the first or middle of April stock arrives very freely, and receipts continue large until the last of June, when they stop abruptly. The total quantity received here last season was 244,484 crates, against 266,023 the previous season, while during 1890 there were 257,624 crates. The yield this season is estimated about the same as last year, the slight falling off during this and last season as compared to the two previous years being due to the increased acreage of lilies planted, brought on by the low prices realized for onions. Last year the market was not satisfactory to growers, as low prices prevailed a good portion of the season. A crate usually contains 52 pounds, which is slightly less than a bushel, which is 57 pounds. The cost of placing the onions on this market is the duty of 40c. per bushel, equal to about 36 to 37c. per crate; freight of 20c. per crate; and the shed tax of 1c. per crate, or about 57 to 58c. per crate in all. In addition to this, for all shipments valued above $100, a certificate is necessary, which costs the shipper $2.50 for each bill of lading. The Bermuda onion practically has no competition, as when they commence to arrive the season is so late for domestic onions that they are nearly all sprouted and poor, and not in favor with buyers, while the few Havana received are also of quality below the Bermudas. Late in the season shipments are made from Egypt, but do not come in any quantity until the Bermuda season is nearly over, and then they are a different style of onion, and do not conflict much with the nearer-by product. At Bermuda there is a Government inspector who examines all the stock sent out and he grades them "No. 1" and "No. 2." This keeps the standard up very high, as a single crate carelessly packed, or with small or poor onions is liable to cause the whole crate to be rejected and stamped "No. 2," which would materially affect the value when offered on the market here; so that while growers made a great time about the inspection when they were first made they have gradually improved their methods of packing, and the consequence is the standard is high, and buyers would rather have Bermuda than Havana or other onions, particularly out-of-town dealers, as they know just what they can expect for No. 1 stock. The price is usually settled, as two firms here handle the bulk of the stock either on commission or through their agents, who buy in Bermuda. When the arrivals commence to increase at the opening of the season they do so very rapidly, as, for instance, last year (1892) arrivals on steamer for week of March 21st were 50 crates; March 28th, 487 crates; April 5th, 1,352 crates; April 11th, 4,487 crates; April 18th, 13,931 crates; April 26th, 38,987 crates. This year the season is about a week earlier, but stock is increasing just as rapidly. Steamer on March 7th had 28 crates; March 14th, 245 crates; March 20th, 270 crates; March 27th, 635 crates; April 3rd, 2,621 crates; April 10th, 12,043 crates. Taking last season for a basis, there would be about 35,000 crates in next week, but as only one steamer is reported to be due next Monday, the Trinidad, it is not expected she will have over 25,000 crates, and some receivers estimate her cargo at only about 20,000 crates. Last week $2.25 per crate was realized, but with over 12,000 in this week receivers put the price down to $2, and stock will probably clean up on this basis before next week's cargo arrives.—N.Y. Bulletin.

HOT COFFEE SLOT MACHINES.

Shopkeepers are threatened with another kind of competition, as if among themselves there were not enough already.

It takes the form of a new development of the automatic machine, which, if its inventor's hopes are realized, will require an enlargement of Trafalgar Square to accommodate the unemployed licensed victuallers, soda water sellers, coffee house keepers, fruit merchants, and confectioners who will find themselves obliged to join the chorus of the "starving poor of Old England."

These new machines are a kind of miniature universal providers. Into the slot of one you put your coppers and receive in return a cup of tea, coffee, chocolate or perhaps gruel; from another lemonade or soda water and biscuits; a third dispenses soda and milk; a fourth devotes itself to retailing bitter ale or Scotch whiskey; another sells fruits; one more doles out sweets, and, lastly, there is one which hands its customers a basin of hot or cold water and a clean towel.

The system is, of course, open to indefinite developments, and every business will be liable to its inroads. A slight addition to the mechanism of the clean water and towel department will, no doubt, add shaving to its accomplishments, and a gentleman may in time be able to put his face into the slot and draw it out as smooth as a billiard ball.

And if, as soon as the supply is exhausted, the machine at once can display in its window a card with the word "Empty," there is no reason why it should not also be taught to whisper "I thank you," to each customer. —Lloyd's New Paper.

A RETIRED GROCER'S REFLECTIONS

Much has been written upon the subject of adulterations, and many investigations have been made with the result of demonstration that nearly every article we eat or drink is adulterated, in many cases with ingredients very prejudicial to human health. Somebody has written a book to inform people "how to detect adulterations in our daily food and drink," and, although the book says that it gives instructions for the employment of "simple means" of detection, the means suggested are in most cases highly impracticable, and in some instances dangerous. Thus the person who sets about the discovery of some supposed evil may, by error or accident—the upsetting of a bottle of sulphuric acid or a receiver of gas—do more injury in an hour than can be rectified in a lifetime.

The butcher cannot adulterate the beef and mutton, but he can send home short weight, and the baker, besides putting alum in the bread to make it white and retain water, can send home deficient weight; the same with the grocer and coal dealer; the dry goods man can slip his scissors on the wrong side of the finger and make a yard contain 33 inches. The writer does not mean to say that they do this, nor does he mean to say they don't. The argument is that people ought to possess the means of ascertaining who among storekeepers are honest and who are not; then the just would meet with justice and the unjust would suffer for their own sins.

But much of the responsibility rests with the consumer. Many persons, whose time is of no value, will walk several blocks to save a cent, and the public must learn the fact that there is a difference between cheapness and lowness of price; an article can be low in price, yet by no manner of means be cheap. The cities and manufacturing centres are over run with all all kinds of goods made up to attract the eye and purchaseable wholesale at ruinously low figures, and the temptation to deal in inferior articles is almost overpowering.

The storekeeper, however, who sets out on the conscientious principle of keeping no article whatever but those of good quality, is certain, by holding on in his course, of at length establishing an extensive business and most likely an ample fortune. In this, as in everything else, "honesty is the best policy."

The writer's advice to young men entering into business is to try to gain a name for keeping good goods, carefully selected from reliable jobbers. Perhaps he may see his competitor following a different plan with some apparent success, but his system has a bad foundation, and in the end such dealers are generally left behind. The most satisfactory principle for buyer and seller is for the storekeeper to put a certain profit on everything he sells, and in this case there is a regularity which secures the confidence of his customer and forms the basis of good business.—W. G. in Merchants Review.

ESSENTIALS TO SUCCESS.

I suppose there is not a young man who will read these pages but what is anxious to secure success in life and to become wealthy. He says: "I am going to be strictly honest, and always try to do what is right." Now, to be honest is certainly one of the most important elements of success. But being honest alone does not bring success. Another says: "I have capital offered me; I can go into business, and my prospects are bright," but if he does not know how to use his capital successfully, he will not succeed. Capital alone will not bring success.

Another says: "I have a good education, am a good penman and understand bookkeeping thoroughly." Such knowledge is almost indispensable, but this will not bring success. You may have all these—capital, education and honesty, and yet not succeed.

We see two young men start in life. They have just left college. Both go into a large mercantile house on the same footing. One attracts trade. Customers ask for him to wait upon them. He makes himself so important that his employers recognize his ability to make business, and, in a few years, give him an interest in the firm in order to retain his services. The other young man, thoroughly honest and upright, is well thought of, a good fellow, a nice fellow. He does his duties well, but there is nothing about him that attracts special attention above the hundreds of other young men about him, no particular force. There are plenty of young men of this kind. Many of them go through life, commanding about enough salary to live upon, but should they marry and have a family to support, they find it a hard struggle to make both ends meet.

What, then, is the secret of success? I will tell you in just five words: "He knows how to talk." He knows how to express himself. His conversation is entertaining. He has full command of his voice, and knows how to use it.

There is not a young man who reads this paper but can, with a little trouble, improve himself, and become possessed of this accomplishment to such a degree that, other things being equal, success will be sure to follow in his footsteps. A travelling salesman goes into a merchant's store to sell goods. He is informed that there is nothing wanted in his line, but he enters into conversation, and, before he realizes it he is looking at the salesman's goods, and is giving an order for the articles of merchandise he has been made to think he wanted. This ability is what makes successful men.

You ask, "How may I obtain this knowledge, this gift?"

Bacon says: "Reading maketh a full man; conversation, a ready man; writing, an exact man. The successful salesman needs to be full of his subject, ready in the expression of his ideas, and exact and reliable in his statements.

If you are afraid of your voice—and I have known some young men to be—go to a good teacher of elocution and cultivate the use of your voice in reading and reciting. Read aloud from the best authors. Perseverance in this line will modulate your voice, and so cultivate your expression that when the time comes, and you have something to say, you will be in a position to express yourself more fluently and with greater confidence.—Trade.

WEIGHING FINE CUT CHEWING.

It is a well-known fact that the retail dealer in tobacco and cigars in certain sections is badly handicapped in his sale of fine cut chewing tobacco from bulk stock, to retail customers, by the slovenly way in which the grocery clerks handle that commodity at retail.

The grocery clerk, in many cases, when asked for fine cut, opens the pail, grabs what he considers an ounce, thrusts it into a piece of paper, and tosses it to the customer; he does not weigh it, and as the customer accepts it without protest there can be but little doubt as to who is the gainer by the operation, and who is the loser.

It is to be supposed, as a rule, that the grocery proprietor knows nothing of this; the clerk probably weighs the tobacco when he is around, and all is as it should be. A tobacco retailer of an enquiring mind, whose store is in the neighborhood of one of these "guess weights," recently investigated the matter, and sent sixteen different people to get an ounce each of a certain brand of fine cut chewing tobacco from a certain grocer. When he obtained them, he weighed the sixteen packages, without the paper wrapping, and found that they registered close on to 18 ounces. A short calculation will show how much profit the grocer was making on his fine cut. The retailer claims that a number of his customers are attracted by the overweight.

This may be so—for a time—and the stand for the retailer to take is that of good condition and high quality. It is well known that no article deteriorates more quickly than fine cut chewing in bulk. Fish, butter, coffee, meats, etc., the usual surroundings of a grocery stock, will all play havoc with it under any circumstances, and cleanliness, good ventilation and proper moisture are what few retail grocers understand or believe necessary for tobacco. In fact, where such a lax system prevails as will permit a clerk to guess at instead of weigh the tobacco, it may be inferred that no greater care is given to the stock.

If the retailer understands his business and has proper storage for his fine cut, he can keep it any reasonable time in good condition without extra moisture, whereas the grocer will rely on quick sales, and have a moisture in full work. This, added to the flavor spoken of, will make his fine cut much inferior in general quality and more irregular than that of the retailer, and will eventually demonstrate to the consumer that quantity is not everything.

Too much water produces fermentation and mildew, and these may be, and often are, present in an embryotic state, just sufficient to spoil the taste of tobacco, and those customers who can stand it for the sake of obtaining a little overweight, are but little loss to any self-respecting retailer.

Of course, the grocer has a right to sell tobacco as he likes; if the matter is a very important one to the retailer, why not explain the situation to the grocer in a neighborly way? As a business man he, presumably, would stop it, but if he does not, it is only fair to suppose that the item of quality will adjust the difficulty before long, and bring the consumer to trade where he gets—not the most—but the best value for his money.—Tobacco.

U. S. DUTY ON CHOCOLATE.

A Washington despatch says that the Treasury Department has finally accepted the view that all sweetened chocolate which contains no other ingredients is dutiable at two cents per pound under paragraph 318 of the McKinley Tariff Act. A recent decision of the Board of General Appraisers undertook to make a distinction between sweetened chocolate for drinking purposes, and that which by shape and use was intended for eating as confectionery. This would have made the latter class dutiable at 50 per cent ad valorem, but the United States Circuit Court decided last fall that all chocolate was dutiable at two cents per pound unless combined with cream, nuts or other material which took it out of the class of chocolate and put it clearly in that of confectionery. Collectors of customs have now been directed to follow the decision of the court.

WOODSTOCK BOARD OF TRADE.

These officers were elected at the annual meeting of the Woodstock Board of Trade: President, Andrew Pattullo; vice-president, D. W. Karn; secretary-treasurer, J. G. Wallace; auditors, M. Douglass and R. W. Sawtell; council, John White, George Caldbeck, Dr. McLay, Jas. Scott, Jas. Sutherland, J. M. Grant, Alex. McIntosh, J. J. Hall, H. H. Powell, and R. Whitelaw; Board of Arbitration, H. Dickinson, T. J. Clarkson, V. L. Francis, R. W. Sawtell, R. W. Knight, R. T. Crawford, Thos. McClay, Dr. Mackay, Fred Millman, John Hall, E. W. Nesbitt, and J. R. Huggart. The total membership of the board is now 90. The receipts for the past year amounted to $200.34, and the disbursements to $237.12. A gratifying feature pointed out by the annual report was the few failures that had taken place in the town during the year, and also the smallness of the amounts involved.

BACON POWDER.

One of the loveliest things in young housekeepers to be found in these United States lives right here in Detroit, says the Free Press. She has been a wife about three months, and got into her own new little housey a week ago.

Day before yesterday she was going home about 4.30 o'clock, and as she passed the last grocery up that way, a thought struck her and she went in.

"Have you," she said to the smiling clerk, "any minced ham?"

"No, miss—ma'am," he replied in doubt.

"Pshaw," she exclaimed, "are you sure?"

"Quite so, ma'am; we sold the last this morning, but will have some more to-morrow, if you can wait."

"But I can't wait. Charles is so fond of minced ham, and he told me to be sure to have some this evening. It's too late for me to go back down street now, for he will be home by the time I get there, and what shall I do?"

"Possibly I might get you something else, ma'am?"

She hesitated betwixt conflicting emotions for a minute or more.

"I don't know," she said at last, patting her pretty little foot impatiently, "but I might make some bacon powder do for this evening. Have you any bacon powder?"

Then it was the clerk's Napoleonic tact came to his rescue, and gracefully retiring to look for it among the hams, he sent out the proprietor, who broke the news to her gently, and Charlie got no minced ham or its possible substitute that evening.

WILL GO UNDER IN TIME.

In speaking of the matter of credit and the causes contributing to success or failure in business, a brother editor remarks that he has no faith in the ultimate success of a man who depends upon cutting prices to sell his goods. In nine cases out of ten he will go under in time. Such a man cannot safely be given credit. It should be remembered, too, when a merchant becomes known to be a cutter, the value of his stock in all departments is greatly lessened in the estimation of his wholesaler, and of customers as well. Neither can credit be given safely to a man who drinks to excess. In these days of keen competition a man wants a clear head and a steady nerve, and these are not gained by excessive drinking. Another bad feature which makes credit timid is extravagant living. The man who spends money freely, and is known to be an extravagant liver, will usually bear watching carefully. Another safe rule to follow is not to trust any man too much. Opinions vary as to how much credit a man is entitled to, but it is safe to say that no man ought to be trusted for more than a quarter, or a third at most, of his visible assets.—Pharmaceutical Era.

THE DEPRESSION IN RICE.

"It is a very apparent and regrettable fact," says the New Orleans Picayune, "that rice, one of the leading products of this State, is now selling and has been sold for some time at prices which leave no margin of profit to the producers. So low, in fact, has a large amount of the rice offered sold that it is hardly worth as much money as oats. These are facts which, however unpalatable, cannot be easily controverted, and yet from a statistical point of view the ruling prices are not warranted. It is also a well known fact that Louisiana rice is now selling below the price in Europe of equal grades of foreign rice. In fact, some rice has actually been shipped from here to Europe this season, and there is a demand for more where even-running grades can be secured. It is, therefore, clear that foreign rice cannot be imported at a profit this season, hence the remnant of the domestic crop will have practically no competition to meet. If it can be shown that the supplies of domestic rice left undisturbed are not more than sufficient to last for the rest of the season, at the present rate of consumption, it should become at once apparent that the remnant of the crop ought to sell somewhere in the neighborhood of what foreign rice of equal grade could be imported for. As a matter of fact, domestic rice is now selling a good cent per pound and more below the parity of foreign rice.

"There yet remain five months of the season to elapse before new crop rice can be expected in any quantity. At the present rate of consumption the available stock of rice would not begin to suffice for the wants of the mills, while even at a considerably reduced consumption it is probable that the supply would scarcely suffice. Under the circumstances, therefore, there would appear to exist no good excuse for the ruinously low range of prices prevailing, and it is astonishing that the trade has not yet realized the actual strength of the statistical position of the cereal."

ADVERTISE PRICES.

In most of the newspaper advertising that is done by dry goods houses especially, it is a great feature to have the prices of the articles enumerated. That this plan is a very successful one in drawing trade cannot be doubted or it would not be kept up. While grocers are not as large advertisers as the dry goods dealers and do not as frequently quote prices, we believe their advertising would be much more effective if the prices of the articles were also given; in fact it may be said in a general way that every retailer who would do effective advertising should publish the prices.

Objections have been made to this system of advertising on the grounds that it gives competitors a chance to know the prices at which other dealers are selling, but this suggestion is not one of much force, from the fact that in so many lines of trade retailers do not handle exactly the same brands of goods; and even if they did it would make no difference so far as the consumer is concerned, for the latter will find out the prices any way and will go from store to store inquiring at what figures certain articles are sold.

Placards in the store bearing the prices of articles make a very attractive mode of advertisement, and the store which adopts such a method will sell more goods than the one which does not. There is something attractive to buyers about goods when the prices are attached to them. People will stop and look at the display in a show window where every article is neatly placarded with the prices; in an adjoining window there may be a similar display without any placards and there will be no crowd in front of that window. It is a peculiarity of the American people that the first question in regard to any article whatever, is concerning its price, and if that seems to be reasonable they may become purchasers.

The retailer who neither advertises prices in the daily paper nor by means of placards in his show window is not doing what he should. There are now manufacturing concerns whose business is to furnish stamping outfits for the making of price cards, or they will furnish the tickets already printed, and by the aid of these a most satisfactory display can be made. If any of our readers have not tried this plan, the sooner they begin the sooner will the profits of their business increase.—Grocers' Bulletin.

CANNED GOODS GOSSIP.

According to the News-Advertiser of Vancouver there is a slightly better catch of salmon, and signs of improvement in the run of the red variety. "The price now rules at $1 for pink, and 75 cents for white, which will probably remain at those levels until the run is over, unless it gets heavier than is at present anticipated," it says.

A line of choice Jersey three-pound tomatoes was sold at $1.17 1-2, delivered here. That price was subsequently bid for additional parcels of similar goods, and $1.15 stands as bottom price for ordinary standard, Jersey or other packs.—N. Y. Bulletin.

The report had circulation in New York that a bod of $1.15 was refused for the entire stock of canned tomatoes controlled by one of the largest holders.

There is another tomato prophet. His headquarters are in Philadelphia. He prophesies that three-pound standard tomatoes will sell at $1.25 per dozen before June 1st, 1893.

People who buy sardines may think they come from the Mediterranean, but as a matter of fact many of them are grown and prepared right here in Canada, a canning factory in the vicinity of Kamouraski employing three or four hundred hands in the work of putting up the little fish, which are caught near by, for the market, and it must be said for them that they tickle the palate quite as agreeably as their imported brethren.—Hamilton Herald.

VALENCIA RAISINS.

While the holders of California raisins are quarrelling among themselves, and cutting prices to the point that in some instances wipes out profit margins, those who possess the stock of Valentias stand shoulder to shoulder, feeling confident in the position of the fruit, and satisfied that the visible supply will barely prove sufficient to carry the trade through the season to next crop. Valencia raisins have stood the competition of California remarkably well, but it is a question whether the imported goods can hold their ground in years to come against the steady increase that is being made on the Pacific coast in vine culture. The California growers are being educated to lower prices, and the tapering off of their ideas serves to widen the scope of the fruit's usefulness, and makes it a serious obstacle to the sale and consumption of the imported. The consumption of Valencia has fallen off materially since 1886. In that year this country, including Canada, imported 1,123,688 boxes, in 1887 1,125,516 boxes, in 1888 1,109,236 boxes, in 1889 1,172,364 boxes, and in 1890 1,491,004 boxes. In the year following, or say 1891, there was a sudden falling off of over 50 per cent. In the importations from Spain, the total quantity brought forward in that year being only 722,192 boxes, though this was in some measure due to the smaller crop in comparison with the previous year, yet the crop in comparison with that of 1889 was larger. During the year just closed the importations to this country and Canada reached the total of 765,993 boxes, though to this quantity can be added 40,000 boxes now in transit, this out of a total of 2,376,136 boxes. The statistical position of the fruit to-day is better than has been known for many years at this period. Since the opening of the season last fall prices have been at a very reasonable point, and this being recognized by consumers and the trade, the fruit was distributed rapidly, particularly during the four months following first arrivals, with the result to-day of the market being credited with a supply of only 55,000 boxes all kinds. The Bam-boro is now in transit with 40,000 boxes, which shipment was said to close up the entire stock of Denia, thus bringing the total visible supply to less than 100,000 boxes, with a period of five months to cover before the first shipments of the new crop can be landed. This is certainly a small quantity when the average consumption is considered, and also the fact that from this total the requirements of Canada must be supplied. Holders certainly have good grounds for entertaining the belief of a scarcity, and materially higher prices than those now ruling, though it must be said that much depends upon the course of the market for California, and whether the holders of the latter variety can work successfully the scheme of booming the market. Though the situation of the home market appears to be for the moment depressed, or, more properly speaking, unsettled, there is no good reason for believing that values will remain long at their present low point. There has been no spring trade as yet, the season being unusually backward, but with the revival of interest the cheaper lots will soon disappear from the market, and with a clear field, those who have gone into the article as a speculation will quickly seize upon the opportunity to elevate the market to a more remunerative point, and thus open the way for an improvement in the position of the imported article.—N. Y. Bulletin.

THE STRENGTH OF MOLASSES.

The possibilities and future course of molasses is an interesting problem with importers in Montreal, especially those who made haste to offer for future delivery at the lower prices which ruled earlier in the spring. The market has taken a turn now, however, and the consequence is that the more urgent sellers have, if present indications hold good, overreached themselves. There was a possibility of a regular merry little war also between some of the French wholesale houses in Montreal, but the decided change that the market has taken at the Islands has stopped all thought of this, and now everyone is talking higher prices, while the very strong disposition of the sugar market tends to accentuate this feeling, for when the sugar market is strong or weak it has, to a certain extent, a corresponding influence on molasses.

The most unpalatable fact to some in the trade is the knowledge that they were warned early in March that the market in the Islands looked as though it was shaping itself for a change, but they refused to take the hint, and thereby lost considerable advantage, for those who sold at 30c. June delivery regret that they did so, while those who were offered stock at that price and did not close are equally put out.

All later advices from the Islands point to a maintenance of the firm feeling that recent cables have indicated. Prices opened at 12c. first cost about the middle of March, but the very next week they had jumped up 1c. to 13c., and now another advance of 1c. is cited, the cost at the Islands being 14c., which is equivalent to 31 1/2 to 32c. laid down in Montreal, a nice little margin for those who were lucky enough to accept the offers of 30c. June delivery made to them. Besides the crop is said to be below the average, while, as is well known, the spot supply in Montreal has been on a very slim basis for some time, and there is nothing to indicate that the stocks anywhere else are heavy. In fact, at Halifax it is well known that the reverse is the case and the market there has been strong throughout the spring. A recent report from that point stated that the price was expected to go higher, and the advices to dealers on that market from the Islands were even more bullish in tone than those received in Montreal. For instance, the statement was made that the Porto Rico crop would not be one-half that of last year, and that in Demarara the crop was light, while the Antigua one was late. In fact everything points to strength in molasses.

THE SPRING FRUIT SALES.

As we have pointed out before, the quantity of Mediterranean fruit that seeks Montreal as a place of sale each succeeding spring shows a large increase, which, if it goes on, promises to place the port in the front rank as a fruit port. As compared with last year the quantity offered is fully double, and may be more than that before the last steamer has sailed. Anyhow a much greater quantity is to be offered for public sale than in former seasons. The reason for this lies in the fact that buyers in Canada and throughout the Western States held off in anticipation of these spring sales in Montreal, and brokers there, in consequence, are looking for a much larger attendance this spring, and a corresponding increase in their harvest. Already one of the steamers, the Charrington, is at Quebec, where she will dock in the Louise basin, until the river opens, while the Fremona is only a few days behind, and may be reported in the gulf or river at any moment. The particulars of the cargoes of these two vessels have already been given, and a cable has been received that the Dracona has left Messina with a cargo of 20,000 Messina oranges and lemons, 6,000 Sarrento oranges and lemons, and 6,000 Coloma oranges and lemons, or 32,000 boxes in all. The total quantity of these three vessels is 126,800 boxes of oranges and lemons, fully two-thirds of which will be offered at public sale, the remainder having been bought for delivery in Canada and the Western States. The fact of such a quantity of fruit being offered for sale clearly shows the importance of the sale, and, besides, there is still another vessel to load for Montreal with a cargo of a similar kind.

LONDON GROCERS' ASSOCIATION.

The attendance was fairly good at the last regular meeting of the London Retail Grocers' Association. President W. H. Ferguson took the chair.

The president proposed that the first question for discussion be the notice of motion given at last meeting respecting the act relating to salaries of civil service employees, and requested a full discussion of the question. There was a very decided feeling through the whole discussion in favor of an amendment to the act. Civil service employees' salaries, it was contended, should not be exempt from garnishee or attachment any more than that of employees generally. All should be put on equal footing. The people pay taxes to support those offices, and the salaries of government employees are deemed to be sufficient to enable them to live well and pay their debts honorably, and the law should not (as it now does) protect those who may choose to take advantage of it by defying their creditors.

After considerable discussion it was decided that the secretary of the association should communicate, with other associations, with a view to obtaining united action in appealing to the proper authorities to amend the act as desired.

The next question taken up was that of bankrupt stocks. It was stated that not unfrequently bankrupt stocks were put on the market by auction and sold to the highest bidder and were frequently bought at a low figure and sold retail at less than regular cost, while again in some cases the creditors compromised at a low rate on the dollar and this in many cases gave the debtor an opportunity to go on again and cut prices lower than ever. Past experience shows that as a general thing it is the price cutter who makes a failure of his business, there being of course some cases of adversities and losses over which a business may have little or no control. Even though the proprietor may be a shrewd business man such cases command the sympathy of creditors and fellow business men generally.

It was reported having been noticed in THE CANADIAN GROCER that at one time the Sarnia Grocers' Association had handled bankrupt stocks thrown on the market there and found it advantageous to do so.

No decided plan of action was decided upon and the question was left with a committee to report ways and means of dealing with bankrupt stocks at the next meeting.

The proposed Pharmacy Act came in for a share of discussion, and while some of the members present expressed confidence in the Ontario Legislature not passing any such act, it was held by others that it would be well to be in a position to show the members of the Ontario Legislature that the large majority of the people they represent are not in favor of such restrictions. The inconvenience to the public generally would be very great, while the extra sale of a few bottles of patent medicines and common remedies that would go to the druggist would not benefit them to any great extent, and the possibility of procuring poisons made but little more difficult than at present. The secretary was instructed to also communicate with all retail grocers' associations requesting the Pharmacy Act also.

The meeting adjourned to meet again on May 9.

This association will be pleased to hear from any associations that the secretary may not reach by letter, relating to the above questions or any other questions of interest to the trade. A bill was recently presented in the Illinois State Legislature to so amend the garnishee law as to allow a merchant who supplied a family with the necessities of life a certain percentage of whatever salary was due to the head of the family, but it failed to pass, strange to say, for want of support from the retail merchants.

The bill promoted by the St. John Tax Relief Association has passed the New Brunswick Legislature. It reduces the number of aldermen to thirteen, to be elected by the city at large. To become law the bill must be endorsed by a majority of the ratepayers at a plebiscite to be taken in September.

Reports from all over the States to the American Cider Maker indicate that with some few exceptions apple orchards wintered well, the intense continuous cold keeping back the buds and preventing early or premature blossoming, thus preserving the fruit from late frosts and other climatic evils.

Petroleum recently sold at 68 1-8 on the Pittsburg market, which is the highest point reached for more than a year. The cause of the advance was a heavy speculative demand, the result of a strong bullish feeling based on reports of the activity of the Standard Oil Company in buying up oil territory.

The Patrons of Industry, the Grangers, the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress, the Knights of Labor, and the Toronto Trades and Labor Council have been formally organized as a political party. The Canadian Packing Company's buildings at London are being hurried to completion. Mr. Ginge, who has just arrived from Denmark, says the work of kilning will probably be commenced in about three weeks. The severe winter delayed the construction of the buildings. The specifications called for their Judge McDougall, at Toronto, has decided that 2 1-2 per cent. beer is intoxicating. The Quebec Legislature holds that 4 per cent. is not intoxicating. Doubtless both authorities speak from what has been observed in their localities. A deputation from the ratepayers association called on the Mayor of Toronto to urge that the city should be assessed only every five or ten years instead of yearly, and that real property should not be unjustly discriminated against by exempting personality, but that it should be taxed for its face value wherever found, and pay 30 per cent. instead of 10 per cent. as it does now.

A number of members of the Executive Committee of the Patrons of Industry waited upon the Government the other afternoon asking that holders of mortgages on land pay a proportionate share of the taxes on the land, that the centralization of law courts be broken up and division courts be given greater powers. In addition to this the deputation asked that municipal officials be elected instead of appointed, and that county crown attorneys take the initiative in the prosecution of combines.

DRY GOODS.

(From the Dry Goods Review.)

This week has shown little change in the wholesale trade. Orders have been perhaps slightly brisker, but last Saturday's snow gave trade a set-back. Nevertheless prospects are improving with regard to the city trade. But from rural districts orders show little increase, as the roads have not reached a state which entices trade. Farm produce, such as butter and eggs, is increasing in the volume marketed, and by next week this will have a strong effect on the retail dry goods trade.

Already some dealers are out with fall samples, but the houses which carry the largest ranges are holding back until prospects improve. Retailers are not yet in a good buying mood. The underwear for fall shows considerable improvement over that of last year in point of finish, appearance and quality. Ribbed goods are being displaced in medium grades by plain goods, and only very cheap grades of ribbed goods are in strong demand. There are two mills less on these very cheap ribs this year. Fancy stripes in plains are more numerous than in previous seasons. Pink, Shetland, sage, and light brown are the leading colors in these fancy lines.

Velvets and velveteens are in active demand in the Toronto market. Brown shades of golden, tabac and seals are scarce, and enquired after. Myrtle, is also a scarce color. The demand for greys and fawns is up to a year ago, but there is a falling off in the enquiry for navys.

Domestic union carpets can be compared very favorably with cheap tapestries. At prices ranging from 33 to 50 cents (wholesale) enormous quantities of tapestry are imported. Now at these prices unions can be bought which are superior in quality, and which are at the same time one-third wider. It may be asked, if this be so why are these unions not displacing cheap tapestries at a faster rate? The reason is that the consuming public do not know this, and it may be added that a great many of those men who handle carpets for a profit do not know it. Moreover people have got into the habit of buying these cheap tapestries, and the class of people who buy them do not change their habits very quickly or easily. The buying public is intensely conservative, and follows well beaten paths. Retail dealers should pay strong attention to domestic carpets.

The demand has been good for embroidered handkerchiefs, in silk, linen and cotton. Linen and cotton handkerchiefs, in embroidered, delicate shades on white material, and also in colored grounds are also popular.

On April 24th and the following days the Toronto wholesale millinery houses will make especial displays of summer millinery. This will no doubt attract a large number of buyers to the city.

NOTES

John Macdonald & Co. are running a special line of 43-inch wool dress goods in good patterns at 35 cents per yard, the original price of which was 50 cents. This is a bargain which is not often offered.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling are offering special lines in Black Eclipse cotton hosiery at prices varying from $1.25 to $3.50. These are shown also in children's sizes at various prices. Colors are also shown in these goods as well as the black.

In order to effect a speedy clearing of a range of 23-inch tweed effect dress goods, containing 300 pieces, Gordon, Mackay & Co. have reduced the price from 18 1-2 to 10c. Handsome assortment of patterns, and they can be retailled for 25 cents.

Delainette is a new material which is a substitute for prints. The particular beauty of the cloth is the manner in which it drapes suitable for blouses and many other uses. The colors are fast and washable. A full range is carried by Caldecott, Burton & Spence, in spots, florals and stripes. It is about equal in price to prints, retailing at 12 1-2 cents with a fair profit.

A special line of fine narrow embroidered edgings, in box lots of sixteen pieces, has been secured by Gordon, Mackay & Co., who are giving their customers the benefit by offering goods worth in the regular way six cents for four.

W. R. Brock & Co., early in the season, before the advance in raw cottons, made a heavy purchase of Hermsdorf's Absolutely Stainless Black Cotton Hose, in a line called "Buster," which can be retailled with a good margin at three pairs for 50 cents. Full fashioned throughout.

Notwithstanding the recent advance in price of linens, Gordon, Mackay & Co. have, through the foresight of their staple buyer, been able to pass into stock 35 cases containing damask napkins, damask sets, blocked damask tablings, loom damasks, towellings, etc., at old prices. This should interest retail merchants.

In their haberdashery and men's furnishing department John Macdonald & Co. have cleared out the odds and ends of two mills' stocks of summer underwear and fancy summer top-shirts. They have been selling these at the regular manufacturer's prices, so as not to conflict with their regular numbers of the same goods. They have also cleared the remaining stock of the Toronto Suspender Co., who have amalgamated with the Union Suspender Co., and they are offering these goods at prices to clear. They have also received repeat numbers in men's and boys' flannelette shirts, and some new numbers in neckwear. They are still pushing the Amazon skirt binding in the 18-yard lengths in which this material is now put up. Shipments of buttons are also to hand.

The Best Grocers Make
a point of Keeping it always in Stock.

Is Honest Goods and just the Thing on Which to make or Extend a Business.

[As there is often inequality in the prices of the various sellers on this market, owing to differences in buying conditions and other circumstances, and as prices are modified by both quantity and quality, the quotations given below and in our Prices Current necessarily take a wide range.]

TORONTO MARKETS.

TORONTO, April 20, 1893.
GROCERIES.

Nothing particular new has developed in the trade during the week. Business still rules quiet. And it is confined to no one or two lines, all apparently being under its sway. The country roads are still in bad condition, the snow fall of Friday last having again retarded the drying up process. In some districts the difficulty of getting over the roads has been so great that here and there a traveller has been compelled to confine his route to those places immediately on the line of the railways. All report business quiet in the country, but all are equally confident that a fairly good business will be done when the existing impediments to the movement of trade are removed. Country merchants all seem to have their stocks fairly well assorted and are awaiting the opening up of freer communication between themselves and the surrounding agriculturists, who are now, owing to the condition of the roads, practically cut off.

Coffee continues quiet but steady in price, with good grades still scarce. Dried fruits remain much as before, while Brazilian nuts are firmer in sympathy with the higher prices ruling in New York. Demand continues light for rice and spices. Sugars rule firm, but there is not many moving. Syrups and molasses are still selling in small quantities and at unchanged prices. Teas are sharing in the general quietude prevailing, and also in the strength which is at the moment characterizing such commodities as sugar, canned goods, etc. No complaints are heard regarding payments.

COFFEES.

Options have been lower in New York, but they have reacted. The drop was altogether confined to options, spot goods being unchanged. Good grades are still scarce here, and demand during the past week has been ordinary only. This market does not appear to have been affected by the fluctuation in New York, owing to the fact that there are practically no high priced or really good coffees here. The Rio market did not go down in sympathy with New York. About the only thing to be got on this market in the way of Java coffees is the green article, which is worth 30 to 32c. We quote Rio 20½ to 22c., East Indian 27 to 30c., South American 21 to 23c., Mocha 26 to 30c., Santos 21 to 22c.

DRIED FRUIT.

There is no improvement appreciable in dried fruits. If anything the quietness is more pronounced. It is in currants, at all events, and this was the only line in which there has been anything like activity for some time. In Valencia raisins the market is quiet and featureless. Ordinary off-stalk are quoted all the way from 4¼ to 5¼c. The demand if anything is principally for a second and fair quality fruit, which sells at 4¼ to 4¾c. Layers are selling at 6½ to 7½c. The New York market seems to be a little firmer on Valencia raisins. Currants are still selling fairly well, although the movement is not so brisk as a week or so ago. Fine fruit is very scarce. Vostizzas sell in cases at 9 to 9½c.; Patras at 6½ to 7c., and Provincials at 5¾ to 6¼c. in barrels and half-barrels respectively. Prunes are not much enquired after and prices are unchanged at 7¾ to 8½c. in cases. Dates quiet and unchanged, at 5½ to 6c. in cases.

NUTS.

Demand just fair. Brazil nuts have advanced ¼c. a pound in New York, and stocks here are small and prices firm at 11 to 11½c. a pound. Peanuts are unchanged at 13 to 14c. for roasted and at 11 to 12½c. for green.

RICE AND SPICES.

Demand for rice is light and prices are unchanged, 3¾ to 4c. being the idea. New crop is not expected here till June.

Spices quiet. Whole ginger is quoted at 20 to 25c. Pure white pepper is quoted at 20 to 28c. and pure black at 14 to 16c.

SUGAR.

The outside markets are firm. In New York centrifugals are higher, 3¾ to 4c. now being asked. The market here has been quiet during the week, but prices are firm. Refiners will not shade prices, nor are they holding out any inducements for the purchase of large lots, expecting still further advances; 5½ is the idea for granulated, but in some instances this price can be shaded as much as ¼c. Yellows are quoted at from 4c. to 4¾c., the latter figure being for cream. Paris lump is quoted higher at 5½ to 6c. The total importers' stocks in the four ports of the United States on April 11, were 5,697 tons, against 22,536 tons the same time last year. The total receipts the past week were 26,073 tons compared with 34,448 a year ago. Since the previous week stocks in all hands decreased 8,927 tons.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Syrups are in light demand and prices firm at 25 to 48c. a gallon. Syrups appear to be good stock at the moment. Much the same applies to molasses as to syrups; 28 to 45c. is the range of prices.

TEAS.

The market does not exhibit much life yet, although if anything the tendency is towards a freer movement. Low grade Assams and Ceylons seem to be at the moment occupying the most attention. If anything Assams have probably the call. Low grade Assams are a little hard to get, and it is held that they cannot be laid down here at less than 19½c. The market in England is firmer on Assams and Ceylons of medium grade up. Stocks of Japan teas in first hands west of Montreal are estimated by more than one authority to be not much more than 500 packages. Pingsuey teas have advanced 1½ to 2c. a pound in England, and they are selling freely at the higher prices. On this market Japans sell at 13c. for low grade, 17½ to 19c. for medium, and 28 to 35c. for high-priced; blacks are worth 14½c. for low grade, 18 to 23c. for medium, 30 to 45c. for fine, while fancy runs as high as 60 to 70c. Not many of the last mentioned quality are sold here.

BUTTER AND CHEESE

A marked change developed in the Toronto butter market during the week. Receipts, more liberal than the market could well absorb, has caused a decided slump in prices, and to-day jobbers will not dicker over a cent or so when it is a question of making a sale or not. Demand is fairly good. Large dairy rolls are particularly easy, on account of the large receipts; 18 to 19c. is the idea for half-barrel lots, and although 20c. is obtained for an odd basket now and then, plenty of this kind is being sold at 19c. There are no dairy tubs of any consequence coming in; the fine article is worth 20 to 21c. Supply of pound dairy rolls is also liberal and prices are lower at 18 to 21c. Good creamery butter is scarce, but there is not much wanted. Sales in fact are dropping off, owing to the plentiful supply of large and pound rolls of dairy; 20 to 21c. is the ruling price for creamery tubs, and pound prints sell at 24 to 25c. There is not much offering, the creameries being just about stopping and going into the making of cheese.

There is more 'cheese offering than the market can take care of. New stock will be coming in pretty soon, and prices are easy at 11 to 11½c.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—Not much enquiry. Jobbers are paying $1.25 to $1.35 and selling at $1.50 to $1.60.

DRIED APPLES—Dull and easy. Jobbers are paying 4½ to 4¾c. and selling at 5 to 5¼c.

EVAPORATED APPLES—Quiet; 8c. would be readily paid at outside points for car lots, if they could be got. Small lots are selling at 8 to 8½c.

EGGS—The market is demoralized. Receipts have been liberal during the week, while the buying has been of a hand-to-mouth character. A customer who wants a five-case lot is a curiosity at the moment. Prices range from 10½ to 11c., and they are weak at these figures.

HONEY—No change. Light comb would sell well at 16c., but it is scarce, while dark is plentiful and in poor demand at 8c. It is easier to sell the former at 16c. than the latter at 8c.

POULTRY—Scarce and wanted, with chickens quoted higher at 80 to 90c. Turkeys are unchanged at 13 to 14c. a pound, and geese at 8 to 10c. a pound.

POTATOES—The feeling is easier and 80c. seems to be the highest price that is being paid for carloads on track. Offerings are liberal and demand light. Small lots are selling out of store at 90 to 95c.

ONIONS—Quiet and unchanged, red being quoted at $2 and yellow at $2.50 per barrel.

HOPS—There are not so many selling and prices are unchanged, small lots going out at 18 to 20c. Yearlings are quoted at 15 to 16c. Some hops can be obtained at figures a little lower than those quoted, but the quality is not first class. The feeling is somewhat unsettled.

HOGS AND PROVISIONS.

There are not many hogs coming in and the packers are taking care of about all arriving. Prices are a little better than a week ago, $7 to $7.35 now being the idea. Demand for lard is fair, but we quote prices fractionally lower, although a 50-tierce lot sold a few days ago for local consumption at 12¾c. There is a fair demand for hog products generally.

BACON—Long clear 10½c. Smoked backs are 12½ to 13c., bellies 13½ to 14c., rolls 10½ to 10¾c.

HAMS—In good demand and firm at 13c.

LARD—Pure Canadian is 13 to 13½c. in tubs, 13 to 13¾c. in pails and 12½ to 13c. in tierces. Compound 10 to 10¾c.

BARREL PORK—Canadian heavy mess $20.50, Canadian short cut $21 to $21.50.

DRESSED MEATS—Beef fores are 4½ to 5½c., hindquarters 6 to 8½c., veal 8 to 9½c. lamb 8½ to 9½c.

GREEN FRUIT.

Trade continues brisk. A good movement is reported in oranges, and while those of California growth are a little easier, Floridas and Messinas are dearer. Lemons are firmer in sympathy with New York, where, at the last auction sale, $5 was paid for extra fancy stock. Prices in New York are from 50 to 75c. higher. Owing to the cold weather the few pineapples that have been arriving have been large'y green. Larger receipts and improved quality are expected shortly. Demand here is good at unchanged prices. Bananas are selling as before and freely. Apples are lower at $1 to $2, although jobbers are trying to get a little more than the outside price for fancy stock. There is no improvement in the outside markets, either English or American. We quote as follows: Oranges—Valencias $6.00 to $6.50 per case; Floridas $3.25 to $4 per box; Messinas and Palermos $3.25 to $4 per box; California seedlings, $3 to $3.25 per box; ditto Navals, $3.50 to $4; lemons, $3.50 to $4.50; bananas, $1.40 to $2.25; pineapples, 20 to 30c.; apples, $1 for market stock, and $1.50 to $2 for good to fancy.

MAPLE SYRUP.

The supply is not very plentiful owing to the unfavorable weather. Advices from the east say the make is very light and will soon cease altogether. Syrup is quoted as before at 80 to 90c., according to size of tin, but sugar is quoted firmer at 9c. a pound.

FISH AND OYSTERS.

Business is not brisk. Whitefish, trout, suckers and herring, finnan haddie are scarce, while such varieties as pike, perch, haddock, ciscoes and cod are plentiful. Ciscoes are a good deal cheaper in consequence of the more liberal receipts. Pike is quoted 1c. lower. Black bass, dore and musk-along are out of season till June 16. We quote: Manitoba whitefish, 7½c.; fresh salmon, 20c.; haddock, 6c.; skinned and boned cod-fish, 6½c.; Labrador herring, $3 per half bbl.; shore herring, $2.75 per bbl.; Digby herring, 11 to 12½c.; boneless fish, 4c.; boneless cod, 7 to 8c.; pike, 7c.; ciscoes, $1.35 a hundred; finnan haddie, 7½c.; perch, $2 to $3 per hundred, as to size; suckers,

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.

Business is on the quiet side, but prices are being well maintained. Tomatoes and corn are the most active commodities in this line. Local jobbers say that if prices in the United States advance another 5c. they will be on a basis at which they can profitably export. And some of them are firm in the opinion that the desired figure will be reached before many weeks have elapsed. The demand for tomatoes on the local market is fairly active at 85c. to $1, with the greater part selling at 95c. to $1. From present appearances it looks as if stocks will be pretty well cleaned out before the season is over, but no great advance over present prices is anticipated. Peas are in fairly good demand, although the movement is not so free as in tomatoes. The bulk of the peas are being sold in the neighborhood of $1, while the range is from 85c. to $1.45, the outside price of course being for the sifted article. Corn is in good, active demand, and prices are unchanged at 90c. to $1.25, the outside figure being for extra. There is more prospect of stocks of corn being exhausted than either tomatoes or peas, one of the reasons of course being that the season has got a longer life, it being in the fall before new goods come in. Beans are selling fairly well at 90c. to $1. A good many peaches are selling at firm and unchanged prices, viz., $2.10 to $2.25 for 2's and at $3.25 to $3.75 for 3's. It is claimed that stocks will be exhausted before the season is over. Apples are beginning to meet with more enquiry, and, owing to the large exports being made to Great Britain, prices are firm. We quote 85c. to $1 for 3's and $2 to $2.25 for gallons. There is a fair demand for all other fruits, especially plums, which are going out at $1.50 to $1.75 for 2's and at $2.60 to $2.75 for 3's. Salmon continues in active demand, especially the better brands of good red salmon. Prices of red are unchanged at $1.50 to $1.60 for talls and at $1.80 to $1.85 for flats. Some off brands, light in color, can be obtained as low as $1.30. There is a fair demand for lobsters at $2 to $2.10 for talls and at $2.50 for flats. Stocks are gradually being reduced and prices are firm. Sardines are in light demand at unchanged prices.

MONTREAL.

The canned goods market is exceptionally dull, and although sellers show a disposition to concede the fact does not appear to influence buyers in the slightest. Some further purchases of salmon for future delivery are reported at the former basis.

mend this brand to their customers:

MARKETS—Continued.

$3 per cwt.; blue back herring, $2 to $3 per hundred; oysters, $1.20 to $1.25 for stds., and $1.75 for select's.

HIDES, SKINS, WOOL, TALLOW.

HIDES—Are in good demand, but it is difficult making buff selections owing to there being so many seconds and grubby hides. For good selections 5¼c. is the idea, but car lots would probably go at ¼c. less, with a large proportion of No. 2 selling at 75c. to $1 per cwt. lower.

SKINS—Calfskins are considerably weaker, and in the United States have taken a drop of fully 1 to 1½c. a pound. If this state of affairs continues there will be a decline of 1c. on this market; 8 to 9c. is now the ruling price. Sheepskins are merely nominal, but for good fresh skins $1.35 to $1.45 is being paid.

TALLOW—This article has been entirely too high, so much so in fact that there is but little business doing now, and no confidence in it unless it can be bought at 5¼c. First-class tallow in the United States has fallen to this price, while for second class 4¾ to 5c. are the ruling figures. This will materially affect or influence the price of rendered in Canada.

WOOL—There is a scarcity of good white wool for blanket purposes and it is likely that many of our manufacturers will be short before the new clip comes in and will have to use the imported article, such as white East Indian. The mills seem to be pretty well supplied in fine wools, and are not willing to pay the advance asked just now, preferring to first work their stocks down. Fleece wool is nominal at 17 to 19c., clothing 25 to 26c., Canada South Down 27 to 28c.; white Indian, suitable for blankets, 17 to 19c., gray East Indian 11 to 13c., B. A.'s white clothing 32 to 34c., cross breeds 26 to 28c., Canada extra 26 to 27c. Canada super is scarce and good selection would readily fetch 23c.

SEEDS.

Alsike is still in good demand for the United States market, and there is considerable difficulty experienced in filling these orders; in fact in some instances jobbers are actually unable to do so. In other seeds, such as red clover and timothy, the demand is not so urgent as it was, although prices are well maintained. Since last week's snow fall country dealers have been placing fewer orders. Prime red clover is quoted at $8.85 to $9, and extra choice at $9 to $9.15. Alsike runs all the way from $7.05 for good to $8.50 for choice. Timothy sells at $2.52 to $2.90 for prime to choice, $2.60 to $2.65 per bushel for choice, and $2.75 to $2.90 for unhulled flail threshed.

PETROLEUM.

The Petrolia Advertiser in its weekly report, says: "The volume of business on the Exchange lately has been of the lightest, and the price might as well be stereotyped, so regular is the quotation, $1.18. There is an increased inquiry for refined oil, and for the balance of the season the leading refiners will be kept busy. There seems to be a general feeling among the manufacturers that, taking the whole situation into consideration, from this time forward the business will demand the best energies of the trade, and all look forward to a good fall business." Refined, 10c. in barrels, and 7½c. in bulk.

Following are the quotations in Toronto: Canada refined oil, 13 to 13½c.; carbon safety, 17½ to 18c.; Canada water white, 19c.; American water white, 21 to 22c., photogene, 25c.

TORONTO TRADE NOTES.

Valencia raisins are a little firmer in New York.

Brazil nuts are ½c. dearer in New York.

Pingsuey teas are 1 to 1½c. a pound higher in New York.

A cable received by a local broker says Ceylon tea is firmer in England

Perkins, Ince & Co. expect a shipment of their crescent brand currants about May 1.

Sloan & Crowther report a good demand this week for Ceylon and Darjeeling teas.

Lucas, Steele & Bristol, of Hamilton, are offering good values in prunes, also sweet and sour dried cherries.

It is estimated that there are not much more than 500 packages of low grade Japan teas in first hands west of Montreal.

James Turner & Co., Hamilton, have given Wright & Co. instructions to increase their import order of some weeks ago for Batty & Co.'s pickles.

Latest mail advices from San Francisco state that very few evaporated apricots or peaches remain unsold on the Coast; that there are still a few prunes, but just enough raisins to be interesting in the present situation of the market for those goods.—N. Y. Bulletin.

The following biscuits have been recently introduced by Huntley & Palmer, Reading, England:—Breakfast biscuits, a new specialty, remarkable for its lightness and delicacy, an agreeable addition to the table at all times; extra chocolate wafers, one of their well-known sugar wafers, containing a layer of delicious chocolate; thin tea biscuits, a nice crisp biscuit of fine quality, slightly sweetened.

A correspondent of a New York house, under date of Feb. 2nd, writes thus regarding the Zanzibar clove crop:—"My special native agent has just returned from a two weeks' trip to Pemba. He was carefully instructed to get reliable news of stock remaining there, and reports at least 10,000 bales unsold. There must also be about 4,000 bales now held by Arabs in Zanzibar. The next crop, as it now appears on the trees, promises to be enormous, and the weather during the past month very favorable."

Thos. G. Cranwell & Co., Baltimore, write as follows: "Extensive preparations are being made for the pineapple season, which will open about the middle of May. Everything points to a very successful season, and there is every reason to believe that the quality will be better and prices more satisfactory than ever before. The Baltimore houses have exceptional facilities for handling and packing pineapples, and we may look for a decided improvement in the quality of the cheaper as well as the finer grades.

There was a marked stimulus given to the packing of fine pineapples last season by the introduction of new and extensive machinery, and no pains will be spared to still further improve the quality of the goods during the coming packing season. The extra eyeless and coreless pineapples will be as near perfection as it is possible to make them."

MONTREAL MARKETS.

MONTREAL, April 20, 1893.
GROCERIES.

The firmness of sugar brightened up the grocery market to a certain extent, but the backwardness of the opening of navigation has been a drawback in so far as the actual movement is concerned. The wholesale houses say they have lots of orders for shipment after the boats have commenced to run, but that in the meantime business is quiet. The city retail trade, however, seems to be brisk, especially with some of the French wholesale houses, who seem to be placing lots of goods in the east end. The tone of values generally is firm. Refined sugar firmly maintains the advance it has made, and there does not seem to be any prospect of a change. Barbadoes molasses are strong and higher on spot in consequence of firmer advices from the Islands, holders there refusing to take firm offers. Syrups are quiet, and teas have furnished a moderate volume of business. Remittances generally are reported to be satisfactory, in fact, as soon as navigation opens everyone anticipates a good brisk business.

SUGAR.

The sugar market is steadier even than it was a week ago, the advance that we have recorded being fully maintained. Business, however, is quiet for immediate shipment, but all the houses have a good sheaf of orders which call for shipment as soon as navigation opens. We quote granulated firm at 4 7-8c. and yellows 3 7-8c. to 4 1-2c., according to quality. In New York the market is firm at 4 15-16c. for granulated. Cable advices quote first beets f.o.b. at Hamburg 16s. 11-12d. for April and 16s. 3d. for May delivery, and the tendency of the market upward.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Latest advices from the Islands quote Barbadoes firm at 14s. first cost, which is 1c. advance on previous quotations. Locally the market is firm and higher for spot business, at 33 1-2c. to 34c., the advices from primary sources influencing holders, while the upward tendency of the sugar market voluntarily has a sympathetic effect as well.

Syrups are quiet and featureless on spot, the idea being about 13 3-4c. to 2c. per lb. and 18c. to 20c. for American.

TEAS.

The tea market is quiet, and small business is reported in gunpowders and blacks on English account, but the transactions are generally for small lots. About 1,200 packages of Japans have also changed hands, prices being somewhat firmer than a week ago. For the

BURNHAM'S CLAM BOUILLON.

FLOUR AND FEED.

TORONTO.

The flour market continues dull and easy, and in some instances lower prices are quoted.

FLOUR.—City millers' and dealers' prices are: Manitoba patents, $4.35 to $4.50; strong bakers' $3.75 to $4.00; white wheat patents, $3.50 to $3.75; straight roller, $3.15 to $3.30, low grades, per bag, $1.00 to $1.25; Ontario family $3.35 to $3.85.

Car prices are: Toronto freights—Manitoba patents, $4.25 to $4.35; Manitoba strong bakers' $3.85 to $4.00; Ontario patents, $3.25 to $3.50; straight roller, $3.00 to $3.20; extra, $2.70 to $2.85; low grades, per bag, $1.10 to $1.25.

MEAL.—Oatmeal is $4.00. to $4.20. Cornmeal is $3.25 to $3.50.

FEED.—Bran (ton lots) $17, ditto (on track) $14.50 to $15, shorts (ton lots) $17 to $18, ditto (on track) $16; mixed feed $20 to $22, feeding corn 57 to 58c., oats 32½ to 33½c.

HAY.—Baled timothy, demand is good and supply fair at $9.25 to $9.50.

STRAW.—Plentiful and demand limited, at $5.50 to $6.

MONTREAL.

The strong tone of the wheat market has influenced holders of flour here to a certain extent, but it cannot be said to have affected buyers for the market rules quiet, and the prospect of an exceptionally late opening of navigation does not help matters. We quote winter wheat $4.00 to $4.25; spring patents $4.20 to $4.30; straight rollers $3.50 to $3.65; extra $3.10 to $3.25; superfine $2.60 to $2.90; city strong bakers' $4; strong bakers' $3.75 to $4.00.

ST. JOHN, N. B.

Some dealers are talking higher prices for breadstuffs, while others express a different opinion, though reports would seem to lead buyers to expect very little change, as outside markets are higher one day and lower the next. Quotations are: Manitoba $5 to $5.10, high grade Ontario $4.20 to $4.30, medium patents $4 to $4.15.

Oatmeal.—Market is steady, at $4.40 to $4.50.

Cornmeal.—There is no change in values and sales are made at $2.70 to $2.80.

Feed.—No change, at $23.50 to $24.50.

Oats.—42 to 45c.

inside figures we quote: Low goods, 13 to 14c., good to common 15 to 18 1-2c., fine 19 to 21 1-2c., and finest 23 to 31c. A lot was also sold ex-bond for New York at 12c. Green teas are firm, with sales of some round lots at 15c. to 18c. and one lot at 21c.

COFFEES AND SPICES.

The local market for coffee still refuses to be influenced by the feeling in New York, for stocks here are so light that holders refuse to make any concession. Several good-sized parcels of Maracaibo have changed hands at 21c. to 22c., and we quote prices unchanged as follows: Jamaica 19 to 20c., Maracaibo 21 1-2 to 22c., Rio 19 to 21c., Java 24 to 27c., and Mocha 25 to 28c., these prices being for strict wholesale lots.

Spices are firm, and business is reported at the following prices. Black pepper 8 to 9c., Pimento 6 1-2c., nutmegs 50 to 52 1-2c. to $1.

RICE.

There is a very fair distributive movement in rice. The new crop will be in about the end of May, and, as it is being offered at a cheaper figure millers will be able to make contracts at a lower price than last year. We quote spot prices for round lots unchanged as follows: Standard, $3.85; choice, $4; Japans, $4.25; Louisiana, $5.25, and Carolina, $7.50.

DRIED FRUIT

The market for dried fruit is quiet. Sales of Valencia off-stalk have transpired at 4 1-4c. for common, and good brands 4 1-2c. to 4 3-4c. Layers are steady, and have changed hands at 6c. for round lots. Currants are dull, and quoted nominally at 5 to 5 1-2c.

GREEN FRUIT.

There has been a fair business in oranges from stocks on spot for immediate requirements. We quote Floridas $4 to $4.50, California $2.25 to $3, Messina, $2.50 to $2.75, Valencias $5 to $5.50, blood oranges $2.25 to $4.

The demand for lemons has been rather quiet. We quote fancy $2.75 to $3, and common to good $1.50 to $2.

Dried fruit is quiet, evaporated apples moving quietly at 8 to 9 1-2c., and peaches and apricots 19 to 21c.

Strawberries are meeting with a fair demand at 50 to 60c. per box.

A small business has been done in bananas at the following prices: Firsts $2 to $2.50, seconds $1.25 to $2.

Pine apples are slow, and we quote 15 to 20c. as to quality.

FISH.

The fish market is very quiet, the season being over. Herrings are quoted at $3.85 to $4.25 as to quality, green cod $6.50 to $7 for No. 1, and $7.50 for large and dry cod $4.50. In fresh fish, haddock are selling at 3 1-2 to 4c., Halifax herrings $2.25, and fresh B.C. salmon 18 to 20c. per lb. as to case.

BEANS.

The market is steady with a moderate business doing at the following: $1.60 to $1.65 for Western hand picked, and $1.25 to $1.50 for ordinary to good. Lower grade sells at $1 to $1.10.

HONEY.

The market is very slow, and we quote prices nominally unchanged: Extracted 5 1-2 to 7c., as to quality, and comb 12 1-2 to 13c., dark buckwheat 8 to 9c.

HOPS.

There is no life to the market, a few lots of Townships, which changed hands at 17c. being the only business. We quote 15c. to 17c. as a range, old hops 6c. to 9c.

MAPLE PRODUCTS.

Receipts of maple products have been fewer this week, but prices are not much lower, except for the possible outside figure. We quote syrup in the wood 5 1-2 to 6c., and in tins 65 to 70c. for small and 80 to 90c. for large. Sugar is quiet at 7c. to 7 1-2c.

ONIONS

The market remains about the same, but the range of valuation is somewhat modified from a week ago. We quote red and yellows $2.75 to $3.

POTATOES.

Potatoes continue unchanged, and we quote 95c. to $1 per bag, according to quality in large lots.

EGGS.

The egg market has gradually worked lower to 12 1-2 to 13c., but it is kept well cleaned up, and there is no large accumulation of stock.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

The butter market shows no particular change. Arrivals of new butter are still moderate, and the stock of old creamery is being gradually worked off. We quote: New creamery, 24c.; held creamery firsts, 20 1-2 to 21c.; held creamery seconds, 20c.; new townships' dairy, 22 to 23c.; laid western, 18 to 19.

Cheese absolutely featureless.

MONTREAL TRADE NOTES.

New York buyers picked up about 500 packages of Japan tea which was held in bond here at 12c.

London cables to firms here say the raw sugar market there is firm at 16s. for spot and futures.

C. P. Hebert & Co. report the country demand good, and say they have no reason to complain of collections.

A New York broker, who was here this week, said that there had been considerable excitement in Pingsuey and Oolong on that market.

Vipond, McBride & Co. have 300 bunches of fancy Port Lunon bananas arriving this week; also several lots fancy pine apples.

Dried fruit brokers here report some round purchases of Valencia off-stalk raisins in New York on Montreal and Toronto accounts.

A cable from Japan reports that the cold, wet, dismal spring which has ruled there makes it probable that incoming crops will be late, and that the notion that it would be early is dispelled.

Receipts of new crop rice are expected here about the end of May, and, as it will be laid down at a cheaper figure, millers are now willing to make contracts at a lower price than for the same time last year.

Frank Major & Co. have removed from their old premises at the foot of St. Francis Xavier street to a new and more modious office and warehouse at 16 St. John street, where they will be in a better position to handle their numerous agencies—Keen's Mustard, Keen's Oxford Blue, Sunlight Soap, etc.

ST. JOHN, N. B., MARKETS

ST. JOHN, N. B., April 20, 1893.

With the exception of sugar, there is very little change in values in the grocery line. Flour is reported firmer, though quotations are unchanged. Beans are dull and uninteresting, several car lots having been offered, and apparently remain unsold.

SUGARS.—Still excited and only selling in small lots. The advance in price is fully 3-8c. per lb., granulated being quoted at 4.90c. to 5 1-8c., extra 3-7-8 to 4 1-4c., and yellows 3-3-4c. to 4c.

SYRUPS.—Are quiet. The advance in sugars does not seem to have affected syrups at all. It is in fair demand at regular prices. Molasses, also, is without change. Barbadoes new is quoted 32 to 33c., old 29 to 30c.

EGGS.—Are lower; market well supplied; price quoted 15 to 17c.

BUTTER.—In good demand at regular prices, 19 to 20c.

POTATOES.—Market quiet and well supplied; are selling at $1.60 to $2.25.

CHEESE.—Fair demand, 10 1-2 to 11 1-2c.

ONIONS are quoted $3.50 to $4.

FISH.—Nothing new to offer. Dry cods, large, are quoted at $4.50 to $4.75; medium cod, $3.95 to $4.25; pollock, $2.15 to $2.40. Smoked herring are scarce and higher at 9 to 11c.; finnan haddock, 6c.; fresh Gaspereaux $1 to $1.25 per 100.

ST. JOHN TRADE NOTES.

White & Titus are closing out their grocery business.

Wm. Logan says Sterling Soap sales are rapidly increasing.

Stephens & Figures expect to move to a larger store on the opposite side of Dock street.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. Joyce, one of Oakville's prosperous merchants, was in Toronto Tuesday picking up bargains.

James Blain, one of Gilford's progressive merchants, was in the city a few days the past week purchasing general supplies.

John Morrow, of Montreal, is in the city. He reports that business is beginning to improve in the commercial metropolis.

J. F. Eby, of Eby, Blain & Co., is back from Detroit. Mr. Eby had a pleasant trip, and says lots of good things about the pretty little "City of the Straits."

Andy Gunn, of the firm of Gunn & Flavell, has just returned from a business trip out to the Coast. Trade prospects, he says, are pretty good in British Columbia, but owing to the unsettled feeling in Chicago, dealers are not inclined at the moment to place orders for future delivery.

Edward Hawes, who has been in the employ of J. W. Cowan & Co., as traveller for a number of years, has severed his connection with the firm and gone to Winnipeg to start in the commission business there. While with the cocoa and chocolate firm he proved himself a successful salesman, and those who know him best wish him success in his new undertaking.

CRITIQUES ISSUE 14.

At last the grocer is promised freedom from his most burdensome winter complaint-producer, viz., questionable eggs. A man professes to have discovered a way to make artificial eggs, and if successful he will revolutionize things generally. The only thing he will fail in for sure is in producing that agreeable flavor which fresh eggs impart to the spring-time breakfast.

A communication signed "S. H." requires some attention. I acknowledge my error in not distinguishing between pot and cup in testing teas. Of course we all use both here, and it is quite possible for a person who smokes to cause a certain flavor of tobacco to impregnate the tea-pot. The moral is quite evident, and we have before mentioned the necessity for abstaining during business hours from tobacco of any kind, and we trust that certain notable offenders will desist hereafter.

We imagine we still hear the loud applause of the bakers' dozen grocers who heard young Mr. Donald's address at the last meeting. Why on earth more members do not come out when special efforts are made to interest them, is not easily answered. The president is not an "electrical" chairman, but he is thoughtful and faithful, and ought to be supported better than he is. I am told on good authority, that Mr. Donald's address contained nothing whatever new, although he travelled all the way from the start of a store until the grocer retired into his well-earned rest—in the grave. Of course nothing new can be said on grocery stores, their sins, failures and wants. An essay read, rather than a speech made, on such a subject, would be better policy, if only for the better digest which could be published of it.

When a miller makes any money he makes a whole pile, but start to lose, and the progress downward is just as rapid. The business must be quite exhilarating at times.

The average commentary of the average grocer just now anent raisins is like this: "If ever I do get out of raisins I swear I will never buy a large quantity again."

It would be interesting to know the numbers of the elect few who do not put in "just a little granulated sugar to lighten the color of their maple products. Also, it would be interesting to find out how many people "are sure that they never use beet sugar, nor could they think of such a thing." Poor deluded mortals.

The recital of the many association benefits ought to convince the croakers that an association can be made a direct helper in business success.

So long as there are bussard-people just so long will there be bazaar stores.

The whole question of branding, including dates on canned fruits and vegetables, names of cheese factories on cheese, also dates of manufacture, and so on, is so full of difficulties to the middleman that chances on a happy connotation is hardly to be hoped for.

The article on "Date Sugar" reminds me that the date is one of the things which a grocer does not care if they should fail to grow or not. Another of the same is salt herrings.

We have to say that our old and eccentric friend, W. C. Macdonald, of Montreal, is not the manufacturer referred to in our paragraph of last week. As everyone knows, Mr. Macdonald runs his own factory as he thinks best, and, although at times it seems a peculiar style of running, the fact remains that he takes no orders from the tobacco agreement, per the secretary. This much cannot be said for others, however, who ought to have more spunk and sense.

STRAIGHT MOYUNE.

POOR MACKEREL PROSPECTS.

Regarding mackerel prospects on the Atlantic Coast, the Boston Commercial Bulletin says: The prospects for the early fleet certainly appear very discouraging. They have been scouring the Southern fishing grounds now for several weeks, and the only catch to announce besides the few barrels landed at Fortress Monroe referred to in our last report, is this almost equally small one of Thursday. The other vessels were reported without any mackerel. A comparison with the first arrivals of other early seasons is extremely disappointing. In 1885, the last early season, the schooner Caroline Vought landed 10,000 small medium-sized mackerel on April 23; on April 12th of the previous year the schooner Alice C. Jordan arrived at New York with 7,000 fish, and was immediately followed by another vessel with 150 barrels; on March 28th, 1885, the first fare landed was that of the schooner Emma W. Brown, consisting of 125 barrels, while the Nellie N. Rowe arrived soon afterwards with an equal quantity. So the record runs, and the farther back comparison proceeds the less satisfactory this year's first landing appears. Not only, however, was the landing of Thursday very small in amount, but the fish were extremely diminutive in size, weighing, so we hear, but about 20 pounds to the hundred. Beyond the above news, the market seems void of affairs of consequence. Trade is very dull and transactions small even for April.

ASSOCIATION TALK

The Retail Clerks' Association of St. Louis has passed a resolution asking the city council to make the license of "fake stores" $600 per week.

A member of the Minneapolis Retail Grocers' Association told his fellows the other night that while he had no means of knowing whether he had lost trade or not by early closing, he did know two things: First, that the past year had been the best he had ever had in his business; and secondly, that where he before abhorred the grocery business because of its exactions, he now enjoyed it. The president of the association said that last July he began closing at 7 p.m., and, save on Saturday evenings, he had never deviated from that hour. His business the last year was the best he had had. As to the agreements, he had figured his profits in sugar, flour and oil, the association agreement goods, and they aggregated $2,000.

Retail Grocers' Associations and Clerks' Associations in England are busy considering the early closing question.

It is proposed by the grocers' and butchers' organizations in all the principal cities of the United States to hold a convention in Chicago at some time during the continuance of the World's Fair for considering these abuses which exist in trade and for devising some remedy for them. Hundreds of grocers and butchers in New England, New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Ohio, Missouri, Illinois and other States have through their secretaries expressed a desire to come.

MR. E. ROBERTS, CAMBERWELL.

A thorough business man—whether as a manufacturer or an organizer—should be thoroughly well acquainted with all the details of the establishment over which he presides. It is not always that the most practical man is the best business man, nor the best organizer a practical workman; but the head of the firm of the extensive and old-established confectionery works at Camberwell is both the one and the other, and it needed only a few minutes in the company of Mr. Roberts to learn how thoroughly well he was acquainted with every department of the business scientifically, practically, and commercially. On the occasion of a recent visit a very short conversation revealed how careful and detailed was the personal superintendence of the head of the firm, and the explanations and descriptions of the methods of manufacture, the state of trade, and the growth of popular taste for the highest class and most artistic productions of the sugar confectioner were as interesting as the subsequent inspection of the dainty little showroom, which might be called a sweet boudoir, were it not more correct to call it a boudoir of sweets. Here were arranged in glass cases specimens of the firm's multifarious articles, which indicate unmistakably that, however it may be considered that our American and Parisian neighbors excel in confectionery, we have at least one English house whose goods are in every respect equal to either Transatlantic or Continental competitors. We should think it impossible to surpass in beauty of design, in delicacy of tint, in charm of variety, and exquisiteness of flavor the high class dessert confections which are the characteristic of this firm. A box of "Fantaisies Amandes" artistically presented in a careful arrangement of fantastic shapes was particularly striking; another attractive box was that of "Marzipan Moulees," which was made up of crystallized goods of various shapes in green, pink, buff, brown, and parti-colors. A basket of strawberries appeared so true to nature that one might be led to think they had been raised in a hot house. In this particular class of work there could be no possible doubt that the Camberwell firm is pre-eminent, and this is borne out by the numerous diplomas and medals which have been awarded to Mr. Roberts at various British, Colonial, and Continental exhibitions. Chocolate goods, in their most popular form, are also in evidence; and coffee creams, nongatines, kaiser creams, and many others, in endless variety and entangling nomenclature, bewilder the vision and embarrass the memory. Chocolate confections receive much attention, and are produced in the best style and the highest quality at the Camberwell works; and it may be safely averred that they are equal to any produced at home or abroad. They are attractively packed, and should aid the retailer in his efforts to make a pretty window or counter display. Packet goods form a large proportion of this firm's novelties. The forms are as numerous as their contents are varied, and include caramels, toffee, butter Scotch, old English sweetmeats, cachous, Swiss creams, almond rock, nougat rock, creams, neapolitan squares, marzipan potatoes and carrots, noyau, cokernut ice, jellies, etc. They range in price from one penny upwards, and whether the one or the other, may be relied on for purity and quality. Fancy sugar work for cake decorations is prepared in abundance by Mr. Roberts; and whether figures or flowers they are clearly less of a scarcity than is generally assumed. The roses and picotees for this purpose are simply perfection, and ambitious students in icing and piping cannot do better than take a lesson from the models which these supply. A prettily piped cake, covered with flowers, is always attractive, and those who can do the piping, but not the flowers, may here obtain the missing link, and crown their efforts with completeness. Bakers and confectioners are also catered for in other ways. Jams, sugars, currants, peels, etc., are supplied; but the particular branch of trade which has built up their large warehouses and the extensive business is confectionery. It is not confined to the specialties previously named. It extends to the uttermost corners of the sugar and chocolate world; and, whether they be simple toiled goods, mixtures, gums, or dessert dainties, they are of uniform excellence, and will bear the most critical tests of comparison to which they may be subjected.

The stock in trade of J. P. O. Higgins, grocer, of London, amounting to $4,172, will be offered for sale by auction on April 26th.

The bill to amend the Pharmacy Act in such manner as to deprive the general merchant of the right to sell patent medicines, was introduced in the Ontario Legislature Tuesday and was read a first time. The bill is not expected to pass, but at the same time those opposed to it should write their representatives asking them to vote against the measure.

THE FLUCTUATIONS OF SUGAR.

For some little time past more than ordinary interest has centred around the movements in prices of sugars, and at present there is just enough uncertainty surrounding the situation to render it problematical whether speculative manipulation or relation of supply and demand is responsible for the movements in values. That the refiners are keeping on the right side, as far as their interests are concerned, is plain, but circumstantial evidence is strong that handlers of raw sugars have thus far secured the greater advantage from the upward movement in prices. In illustration, we present the following comparison of prices for standard granulated refined and centrifugal raws :

	April 15 1893.	Jan. 1 1893.	April 15 1892.
Refined, granulated	4.94c.	4.69c.	4.38c.
Raw, centrifugal...	3.75c.	3.46c.	3.13c.
Difference.....	1.19c.	1.23c.	1.25c.

On the face of the returns it would appear that refiners' profits have been gradually diminished, and that the speculative interest identified with the raw sugar market has the better end of the stick, temporarily at least. Information has gone out from sources close to the throne that the refiners have stocked up heavily in anticipation of a further advance, and in jobbing circles the impression prevails that refined suguars will be dearer before they are cheaper. As to the speculative influences behind the market for raw sugars, there is a variety of opinion, and not a little doubt exists as to the accuracy of statistics on the coming crops, since it is the result of years of experience that accurate statistics have been the exception rather than the rule in nearly all lines of merchandise at times when speculative interest ran high. At last accounts the appearances were that there is some shortage in the supply of raw sugars. In this connection there comes to the front that only 31,000 tons were delivered in Havana and Matanzas during the week ending April 12th, against 40,000 tons in the previous week. Behind this are estimates that the coming crop in Cuba will be at least 100,000 tons short of that of last season, and that European supply available for export will show quite as much shortage. In other words, the trade statisticians make it appear that the new supply of raw sugar the world over will be about 200,000 tons short. Should these estimates be approximately correct, the late movement in prices would seem to be justified, but there are wheels within wheels in sugar as in other speculation, and it would seem proper to suggest that speculators' "points" be taken with allowance. Up to the present time the movements in prices have not attracted a great deal of foreign refined sugar to this side of the Atlantic. Only soft foreign sugars can yet be marketed here in competition with American product, and none but the low grades find outlet here except at prices "below the market." There is some evidence, however, that American refiners fear possible foreign competition more than they do the speculation in raw sugars. In this connection the contraction of the difference between prices for raw and refined sugar, as outlined above, is at least suggestive.—N. Y. Bulletin.

It was initiated during the agitation for a reform in the system of taxation. The object of the union is to act in concert on all questions and matters affecting the general wholesale trade, but in no case to conflict with the Board of Trade. The officers of the season are: President, Mr. J. H. Ashdown; first vice-president, Mr. R. J. Whittle; second vice-president, Ald. Bole; secretary-treasurer, Mr. S. A. D. Bertrand.

W. J. Ballantine, grocer, of Hamilton, has removed from his old store in James street to more commodious premises in King street west. "I think," said a commercial traveller to GROCER, "that he has got the finest grocery store in Canada to-day—well, certainly in Western Canada. It is worth anyone's while to see it. Instead of having pictures hung up here and there at all angles, he has mirrors resting on the top of the shelves and ranging all round the store, so that you can see yourself no matter what part of the store you are standing in. The shelves and counters are of mahogany."

Our cousins across the line are at the moment wrestling with three questions of financial and commercial import. They are the gold movement, tariff reform, and an adverse balance of trade. Canada is interested principally in the two first. The purely financial question began to look particularly grave about two years ago when the outflow of gold to Europe assumed such enormous proportions. That was in 1891, when from February to July over seventy million dollars' worth went out. Financial men felt a little uneasy then, but consoled themselves with the hope that it would about all return again when the demand set in for American cereals. To what extent these expectations were realized is a matter of history. To make matters still worse, the exports of gold during the twelve months ending with February 1892 last was over 90 $\frac{3}{4}$ million dollars. Since then the outflow to Europe has continued. During the present month alone some ten millions has gone forth. As everyone knows, the drain upon the U. S. Treasury is not on foreign account only. The ill-vised Sherman Silver Act of 1890 is responsible for much of the present unsatisfactory condition of affairs. By this Act the Government is committed to the purchase of 4,000,000 worth of silver bullion every month, payment in Treasury notes. The notes thus issued are virtually payable in gold. The law demands that the sum of \$100,000,000 in gold shall be kept in the Treasury as a reserve fund. And this amount was stipulated because it was about one-third of what was believed to be the actual volume of the old legal tender notes outstanding. Owing to the rapidity with which the free gold—the sum over and above the \$100,000,000—was going out it has been for time recognized that this reserve fund was in danger of being tapped, and various schemes were suggested for preventing this. Early last week Secretary Carlisle, in the hope of at least palming off the evil day, issued an order suspending the issuing of gold certificates. And such authorities as the N. Y. Bulletin expressed the opinion then that there would be enough of free gold to keep things going till September. But instead of there being sufficient for five months there was not enough for that many days, for on Friday last there came such a demand for the precious metal for export that not only was the free gold absorbed, but the reserve fund itself was drawn upon to the extent of two or three million dollars. Now that the inevitable has taken place the administration, it may be depended upon, will make a vigorous effort to provide a remedy. A special session of Congress is talked of and the prompt repeal of the Sherman Act expected. The situation is no doubt critical, but, at the same time, there are not many who anticipate a financial disaster. Some go so far as to say that as the reserve was intended for such an emergency, it is only proper that it should be utilized at the moment, and they furthermore claim, as an evidence of the United States being able to meet her obligations, that there are \$600,000,000 in gold in the country. This line of argument may be reasonable enough as far as it goes, but the financial world is at the moment looking upon the United States much in the same way as people usually do upon a bank that has found itself compelled to draw upon its reserve fund—with suspicion. Shortly before the Harrison Administration went out of office it for a time seriously considered the advisability of issuing bonds in order to avert a financial disaster; and now the question is again mooted. But the President and the Secretary of the Treasury have determined only to do this as a last resort. In the meantime the financial world awaits the outcome with much concern. The banking and mercantile interests of Canada became somewhat alarmed some months ago at the turn of affairs in the United States when the value of the silver dollar dropped to about 65 cents. At that time the banks here began to tighten their restrictions regarding American currency. And within the last few days a number of them have decided henceforth to receive silver certificates under the Sherman Act of 1890 for collection only and not on deposit.

Tariff reform during an election campaign and tariff reform during the process of actual reformation are two different things. This the Cleveland Administration is learning. Tariff reform means less money to run the Government with, and therein lies the difficulty in the present instance. The average duties collected under the McKinley Act are 50 per cent. Basing his estimate on this the retiring Secretary placed the receipts from customs for the coming fiscal year at $210,000,000. Now a 33 per cent. tariff would only yield $120,000,000. This would of course mean a deficit, something under all circumstances to be avoided. Under such conditions it is conceded a low rate of duty on goods now dutiable cannot yield sufficient revenue for the maintenance of the Government unless articles like sugar and tea, now on the free list, are taken therefrom and made dutiable. This would mean taxing the "poor man's breakfast table," something which would bring a hornet's nest about the ears of the Administration. Then it is generally conceded that wool, coal and iron will be placed on the free list, and although the loss of revenue from this source would not be large it would be something. Whisky is already taxed 90 cents a gallon, and no less an authority than Prof. David A. Wells holds the opinion that to increase this would stimulate fraud and reduce the visible production, and of course the revenue, from this source. It is held therefore, in order to secure the desideratum of a low rate of duties, that one or other of two things must be done—levy revenue duties on sugar and other free articles or to impose an income tax. The "looping off of the mouldering branches" of the United States tariff is made all the more difficult in consequence of the unsatisfactory condition of the treasury at the moment and a good many are of the opinion that the undertaking will have to be deferred for a year or more.

Regarding the adverse balance of trade in the United States. In spite of a McKinley Act, the disparity between imports and exports during the past eight months has been enormous. Taking March alone, the excess of imports over exports was never so large before. The exact amount is not known, but it is thought to be at least $90,000,000 for the month. For the eight months ending in February the excess of imports over exports was more than 150½ million dollars. The principal falling off in the exports has been in agricultural products, which were 76.37 per cent. of the total amount exported against 80 per cent. for the same period the year before. But disappointment is also expressed at the poor results obtained from an effort to push certain manufactured articles. Produce of the mine, forest and fisheries show an increased percentage. The exports of breadstuffs decreased from $217,763,097 in 1892 to $138,916,537 in 1893. Manufactures of copper fell off about 3½ million dollars, sewing machines about 1½ millions, locomotives over a million. Leather, wool, raw cotton, carriages and horse cars, all show decreases. The increase in the total value of imports during the eight months was about $84,000. The free imports increased in eight months from $277,266,469 to $326,206,699, while the dutiable imports increased $246,511,277 to $281,620,443. The imports of coffee from Venezuela, Colombia and Hayti, dutiable under the President's proclamation, were $197,211 in February, raising the total imports for eight months to $2,673,809. One of the striking articles of import in the dutiable list during the past eight months has been potatoes, of which 1,835,681 bushels, valued at $4,780,848, have been imported, against 63,044 bushels, valued at $36,785, during the corresponding eight months of the preceding year. The duty now assessed on potatoes is twenty-five cents per bushel, which has covered into the Treasury about $450,000 during the past eight months. The rate under the Act of 1883 was fifteen cents per bushel, which would have reduced by $180,000 the tax which has been paid by consumers on the foreign potatoes imported to cover the shortage in American crop.

What Mr. John Charlton is in the Dominion Parliament Mr. Charles McKenzie seems to be in the Ontario Legislature—the chief promoter of legislation to guard the Sabbath as a rest day. For some time it has rankled in his breast to see stores kept open Saturday nights, often till the midnight hour, knowing that the clerks have often to spend one, two or more hours in straightening up goods in order to have everything in apple-pie order for Monday's opening. His ruminations on the matter were ultimately crystalized into a bill which he presented at Friday's session of the House. By its provisions all stores in the province were to be closed not later than 10 o'clock Saturday nights. Mr. McKenzie explained that his reason for introducing the measure was to give all concerned time to get through their labors before midnight. Some of the members characterized the bill as "unjust and unfair," and the Attorney-General suggested that it be withdrawn. This settled it, and withdrawn it was. The spirit that animated the promoter of the bill was right enough. Ten o'clock is plenty late enough for any store to keep open Saturday night. In fact, coming down to the fine point, there does not seem to be any logical reason why a store should be kept open any later that night than any other in the week. In most places the majority of the consumers leave work earlier that day than any other in the week, and consequently they are able to lay in their stocks of groceries, etc., earlier. That so many of them do not is true. But all that is wanted to induce them to do so is a little education. As it is, the proportion of late purchases Saturday is not nearly so large as it was a decade or so ago. A good many people who at one time ordered their groceries Saturday now do so Friday, and the number who have adopted this method is gradually increasing. Straws show which way the wind blows. And it is evident, judging from the drift of things, that late storekeeping is tottering to its fall all along the line.

Apropos of the above. Is not the season near at hand when it is customary for shorter hours to go into vogue in the wholesale trade? Business is now getting into the necessary shape to allow this being done without causing inconvenience to either the wholesaler or to his customers, and another week or so will likely see the usual placard, announcing early closing for the summer months, hanging in prominent places around the warehouses.

* * *

The discussion of the question of early closing brings to mind the fact that the retail grocers of Brooklyn, N. Y., are at the moment wrestling with the question of Sunday closing. The question was introduced at the last meeting of the United Grocers' Association of that city by one who expressed himself as being "very much opposed" to keeping stores open on Sunday and "did not believe that he suffered by keeping his store closed from Saturday till Monday." A lively discussion, pro and con, ensued and it ultimately wound up with the association deciding to have a debate on the topic at the next meeting, "the disputants to remain unknown." To the average Canadian there does not appear to be any con side to the question. Grocers on this side of the line find six days a week binding enough. But of course we are not in Brooklyn, nor in any other of the several cities of the United States where so many grocery stores are kept open Sunday as well as any other day in the week. If we were our views on Sunday closing would probably be a little different from what they are at the moment; for a good deal often depends on environment. But the advice the grocers in this country would give those across the line is, "Close up on Sunday by all means."

A movement is on foot in Montreal to bring about a daily meeting of merchants to talk over trade questions. There is much to commend the proposition. The great trouble with business men is that they are not well enough acquainted with each other, and the consummation of the idea to hold daily meetings would do much toward bringing about the desired state of affairs.

SEND THE GOODS ORDERED.

A subscriber from Kamloops, B.C., writes that wholesale houses often send substitutes for the goods he ordered. "I have," he says, "several times ordered brands advertised in THE GROCER, and my order has been filled with brands about which I knew nothing and which I was afraid to recommend to my customers."

If there is one thing that men are particular about it is getting what they order or pay for. The average private individual, when he asks his storekeeper for a certain article which he has tried to his satisfaction, expects to get it. To offer a substitute to some such would be to displease them, or to send them different from that which they ordered would perchance be the losing of their custom. But the case is all the more aggravated when the retailer is himself the buyer. To send him, as in the case of our Kamloops correspondent, a substitute may entail a serious loss. He may probably have a large number of customers whom he has been furnishing with a certain line of goods. By and by the wholesale house sends him along a substitute "just as good" as the article ordered. If he be a wide-awake and progressive merchant he will recommend to his customers only those goods of whose quality and purity he is certain. How then can he recommend that about which he knows nothing beyond what his wholesaler has told him? The substitute may be as good, or even better, than the article ordered. But that is not the question. It is the principal thing that is at issue. If the house has not the particular line of goods in stock, it is on rare occasions that it cannot be obtained from some other in the trade, and it is better to do this even if the order is thereby shorn of some of its profit. Where the article is unobtainable acquaint the retailer with the fact and then tell him that there is such and such in stock equally as good or better if it be so. In these days of quick telegraphic and telephonic communication this is as a rule not difficult. Granted that the particular line ordered is in stock and that the substitute is forwarded because it really is better value, the policy is a poor one. The proper course to pursue under such circumstances is to send the goods ordered, but the opportunity should be taken advantage of to acquaint the retailer with the fact. Such a course would increase the confidence of the retailer in that particular house instead of decreasing it as is evidently the case in that of our Kamloops correspondent. In a word, wholesalers should always try and send the goods ordered.

CHATS WITH BUSINESS MEN.

I had a talk Saturday with T. E. Owens, representing Miller & Co., canners, of Trenton. He has recently returned from England, where for some months he has been representing his firm. When I queried him regarding the canned goods situation in Great Britain, he leaned back against a shelf in Sloan & Crowther's sample room and tilted his shining silk hat back half-a-dozen degrees, and remarked: "Well the prospects are good. But it is like this: Only the big canners in this country can expect to do a profitable business over there. You want to know why. Well, it is because of the competition of the Americans. They are cutting things down so fine that the margin of profit is small indeed. Consequently unless you are a big canner and can take care of big orders there is nothing in it for you. And it's no use doing business for love, is it? Where the Yankees have the advantage over us is in the matter of freights. And before we can expect to compete successfully with them we must have not only lower freights but lower rates of interest and our canners must be satisfied to take smaller profits. The canners are willing enough to lose some of their profits, but the difficulty is in getting the banks and the steamship companies to make any concessions. Before I left Liverpool I saw the English representatives of one line. I told them that concessions on their part would mean more money to them in the long run, while they would, at the same time, be assisting in building up a Canadian industry as well as increasing their own business. They seemed to coincide with what I said and gave me a letter to the head offices in Montreal. But I don't know yet whether anything will come of it," he concluded as some of his friends came and took him away from me.

"Business! There is no business. Roads! There are no roads. Its nothing but plowed fields," was the remark a traveller threw at me Saturday. "And I'm going out Monday to attend the funeral."

I was talking with a friend of mine a few days ago, when one of us made use of the word "luck." It reached the ears of J. W. Borsberry of Oshawa, one of Eby, Blain & Co's eastern travellers. "Luck, did you say," he remarked, as he rushed up to us. Well, I can tell you something about luck. Yesterday, while I was in the Benson house, waiting for train time, a man approached me with the request to buy a package of pins for crimping the hair. He told me that there were prizes offered in connection with them. Among the prizes was a piano, some watches, and I don't know what. I knew the fellow, so I remarked, 'Alright Jim, I'll invest a quarter with you. I'll take that package there. It has the piano.' I gave him the quarter, reached out and picked up the package, and, sure enough, when I undid it there was the check for the piano. And here it is," he added, as he dipped down into a pocket of his vest, pulled out the document and unfolded it for our inspection. "I'm going up town this afternoon to get the instrument," he concluded as he stored the prize ticket away. Mr. Borsberry will now have music from garret to cellar, and be congratulated by the "boys" wherever he goes.

"You'd be surprised if you knew what a good many of our dried and evaporated apples are being used for," said an exporter to me the other day.

"Well, what is it?" I queried.

"Well, you'll perhaps hardly believe me when I tell you. Anyhow they are used for coloring German prints. And that is one of the reasons why evaporated apples have been so scarce here for some time and where we would send carlots now if we could get them."

"Yes, there is no doubt about it, the taste for creamery butter and in fact dairy too, to some extent, is running towards pound rolls," said a butter man to me. "Why it is I can't say, unless it be because of greater convenience in handling. Anyhow, one thing is sure, pound rolls are like spring hats, getting all the go, and it was never so apparent as it is this spring."

"What do you think the retail grocers are making a great run on now?" was the question put to me by Andy Gunn the other day.

"Don't know; give it up," I said.

Well, it's pork cuttings and a good many of them are using them as leaders."

BYSTANDER.

THE REDUCTION IN SOAP.

When the price of tallow and soap stocks advanced an increase in the price of soaps generally followed. But the St. Croix Soap Mfg. Co., of St. Stephen, N. B., kept their price on their brand of "Surprise Soap" until compelled to advance by the large number of orders they received, and the continued advance in prices of soap stocks. Now that prices of soap stocks are lower, though not as low as they were, they hasten to give the trade the benefit of the reduction, having reduced the price of their "Sunprise," to about the same as before the advance, the slight difference being more in terms than in price, which they feel is more in accord with the advanced ideas of the trade of to-day and will be a benefit to all. The large reduction in price is hardly justified by the present price of stocks and the unsettled state of the markets, but their motto is "Whatever you do, do well," and their policy has always been to protect the interests of their customers, knowing that by so doing they are looking after their own interests and will eventually merit and receive the good will and confidence of the trade and the people.

HINTS OF TEA BUYING.

DEAR GROCER,—While the purchase of tea requires no more attention, in relation to the requirements of the trade, than any other commodity, yet there is one point in the purchase of tea that is peculiar to itself, which, for our mutual benefit, I wish to point out.

If we want to buy coffee, sugar, syrup, soap, or almost any other commodity, we ask for a certain grade, or standpoint, and ascertain the lowest quotation, but, in purchasing tea we are confronted with the fact that it is difficult to grade with any exactness. We can ask for four or five kinds of Japan, ten, or twelve kinds of China, and about thirty kinds of India and Ceylon tea, according to their respective districts, but in no case is there a grading of the tea as to quality but by sampling.

How does this affect the purchase of the article? The general experience of the trade will be that when a grocer requires, say an Assam tea, he will be guided by his idea of profit, and to that end he wants a tea from 25c. to 35c. in price. Canvassers submit samples, making a guess at what the grocer will ultimately pay, which point the grocer intends to conceal. We are all liable to be prejudiced in favor of the tea for which the highest price is asked. Those who know the customer best will have the advantage of making the proper cut to meet his view. Blarney and persuasion play their part, and the grocer gets the "balance of a line" that has sold all the way from 30c. to 37c., for 29c., which he could with ordinary prudence have purchased for 27c.

How much more simple and safe for the grocer, and more satisfactory for the drummer if the price you mean to pay were plainly stated. In such a case, every traveller, knowing that a certain price will be paid, will vie with every other one to give as good value for the money as the size of the transaction will warrant, the grocer will get better value while the traveller and his employer will have made a clear gain in time saved, that is now spent in distrustful negotiations.

D. S. MACORQUODALE,

35 and 37 Front street east, Toronto.

P.S.—I would like to suggest that all cups and spoons be spotlessly clean, that water be fully boiling, and that all cups be alike and mixed with numbers on the bottom corresponding to the numbers of the samples when laid in a row. If travellers are present at the draw, have their verdict on paper before looking at the bottom of the cups, and pay no attention to talk that follows when somebody finds he has been praising his neighbor's sample!

A TRAVELLER'S GLEANINGS.

I came across the cutest trick I've heard of in a long time the other day. One or two merchants in Queen street west, have about one of the most novel ways of advertising their business. Saturday night, just after they have closed up for the week, when eggs are 15c. a dozen, they stick up on their window shutters a placard like this: "Fine fresh eggs, guaranteed, 12c. a dozen." Every passer-by notices it, and of course decides upon going there on Monday for their eggs. When they go in on Monday morning of course they are just out of them. They had them on Saturday, but are out of them now. Is there anything else they want.

A traveller has been through Toronto selling an English pickle at from 90c. to $1.10 a dozen. A bigger fraud to my mind was never perpetrated upon the grocer. These pickles never saw the old country. Look at them, gentleman, and if you don't say that the grocer is a trustful man after that my name isn't what it is.

It would be a good thing if the bankrupt stocks went back went back to the wholesale men or manufacturers. It would be the means of putting a stop to the cutting and slashing of prices by those who now buy them. The men who are going around buying in stocks are a great source of evil. This is about how it is done: The buyer of stocks enters the store of the man he thinks a little weak, and approaches him something after this fashion:

"Say, can you tell me where a fellow could buy a stock cheap, say about 60 or 70c. on the dollar? I want to get a stock or two if I can."

The anxious one bites, but cautiously at first. He replies, in an evasive manner, "Well, I know a man who would sell out if he had the opportunity, providing he got a fair figure for his stock. It's as good as this one."

"If it is as good as this one I'll give him 70c. cash for it right on the spot," adds the bankrupt stock man.

"Would you give me 70c. for this stock?" asks the grocer.

"Yes, sir."

"Well, I'll sell it to you." And the bargain is made and the grocer sells out, the buyer either keeps the stock where it is or moves it to another store, sticks up bills of sale, stays there until he cuts the throat of every grocer in the neighborhood, and then leaves. The grocer very often puts the money in his pocket and leaves for parts unknown, leaving his creditors to mourn his loss.

It seems to me there are too many branch banks in the city. Many of them were started to make positions for sons of stockholders. It all means extra expense, and it means, "Stick it on to the public." That is why you have to pay 8 per cent. on a loan and only get 3½ per cent. on deposits.

TRAVELLER.

GETTING AT THE PATRONS.

A Montreal despatch says: Wholesale merchants here are complaining loudly of the business tactics of the Patrons of Industry in Ontario. A number of wholesale merchants have refused to open accounts with the retailers appointed by the Patrons, as they claim it is unfair to the rest of the retail trade. Some of the Patrons' retailers have sent letters to the wholesale merchants asking to be supplied with false inventories so they can show bills for higher prices than they have paid. In some cases blank invoices have been asked for. The wholesale men claim that the patrons are instituting a system of business boycott. One retailer writing in the Star, states that many of the local associations of the Patrons have dropped the retailers altogether and are dealing directly with the wholesalers in Toronto.

IMPROVED BUTTER MAKING.

A recent patent claims that butter of an exceptional quality is made in twenty or thirty minutes by means of the inventor's centrifugal apparatus. With the cream at a temperature of 60 degrees F. 120 revolutions per minute are necessary, but if it is raised to 75 degrees F., 60 revolutions per minute will suffice. The cream should be four days old. The apparatus chiefly consists of a vessel containing the cream, a rotary disc mounted so as to be partly immersed in the cream and capable of picking this up in the form of films, and means whereby the contents of the vessel can be rapidly heated by the application of hot water to the jacket or false bottom, and by the circulation of the cream, by means of discs, over the warm surface.—N. Y. Bulletin.

SHE MADE HIM UNDERSTAND.

Manayunk has quite a large population of foreigners, who, at times, have a hard time making themselves understood by the natives. The other day a Polish woman who has recently moved into Rochelle avenue with her husband and fourteen children, walked into Lackey's grocery store and, after taking a general survey of the place, stepped up to one of the sugar weighers and said: "Eyes, eyes, eyes." The clerk, though somewhat of a linguist, failed to comprehend what she wanted, and shook his head. The woman again looked about the store, and seeing a bushel measure walked over and sat down upon it. After sitting for several moments she sprang up, clapped her hands, and cackled like a hen that had laid an egg. This gave the clerk an idea, and, reaching down behind the counter he picked up a handful of eggs. 'Tis proved to be what she wanted, and, buying a dozen, she hurried to her home on Rochelle avenue.—Phila. Grocery World.

THE TOMATO IN CANS.

Each year when fresh tomatoes first appear on the market in the large cities they are retailed at from 10 to 20c. per pound. This, of course, is very early in the season, and their consumption is very limited, being confined to the comparatively wealthy class of people. With advancing season, the price diminishes, as the supply increases, and retailers sell them in a city like Chicago at 5c. per pound or equal to \$3 per bushel of sixty pounds. Very few people, however, when they buy a can of tomatoes at retail for 10c., the average price of the last few years, realize that it takes an average of sixty pounds of tomatoes to fill a dozen cans and that one can contains in the concentrated form five pounds, which in the fresh state would cost 25c. It seems marvelous that this can be, and is really done. The explanation is simple enough. The packer contracts with the grower to take the crop grown on so many acres. The grower has a sure market near his farm and gets from 20 to 25c. per bushel, $\frac{1}{3}$ d of a cent or 5-12c. at most per pound, and the crop grown and delivered in this way, free of cost of freight, commission, shrinkage, etc., pays the farmer better than anything he can raise on the same quantity of land, giving him from \$40 to \$100 per acre as a return for his time and work in tending and delivering the crop. The packing gives employment to can-makers, box-makers, lithographers, nail-makers and a host of others, besides the gang of people employed in the cannery. The packer can still sell the three-pound tomatoes in cans from 80 to 90c. per dozen to the jobber, and the jobber to the retailer at a small advance, so that the consumer gets the product of five pounds of fresh tomatoes for 10c., delivered in the kitchen ready for use at any minute and preserved so as to keep for ten years if so required. If sliced raw tomatoes are wanted, then canned goods won't fill the bill. For cooking purposes in any kind whatever the canned article is in every way preferable, cheaper in actual cost and ready for use without any waste in time or work in peeling and preparing, without loss from green or rotten spots and with much less time in cooking. The flavor is better because the stock is fresher when canned than the goods that have been shipped and have lain around in a cellar or store for a week or more. In the cooked state the tomato retains all its wholesome and hygienic value the same as in the raw state. We scarcely attach to the tomato the full hygienic value as food which it possesses. In therapeutic virtue it will double discount "little liver pills," or big pills of any kind. The juice of the tomato is of an acid character and is a veritable cleanser of the liver and purifier of the blood. It seems to dissolve fatty matter, and sweep away impurities of any kind. The writer saw this exemplified in a cannery, where a shute, used for slaughter house offal, was also used to discharge the skins, cores and refuse of tomatoes. The shute in question became clean and free from taint of any kind as soon as tomato canning season commenced, while at other times it was an abomination to the olfactories and a menace to the health of the people in its vicinity. The men working at the bench capping, etc., frequently use a tomato to get an extra "clean" pair of hands after specially dirty work. (Of course these tomatoes are not canned after being so used.) Well, this ought to be enough to convince a purblind skeptic as to the virtue of tomatoes as liver medicine. Strange to say there are only three million cases of these goods consumed per year, say seventy-two million cans or one and one-tenth can per capita, about 11 cents worth in value, while we use sixty-four pounds of sugar per capita per year—value, \$3.75.

There is no fear of the tomato pack being too large unless speculative holders begin to prevent the consumption of the goods by booming and holding for higher prices.

At an average retail price of 10c. or 12c. per can, in place of a consumption equalling only one and a tenth cans per capita, the consumption ought and soon will rise to six cans per capita, requiring to meet it a pack of fifteen million cases each year, in place of three or four millions as at present.—Chicago Grocer.

A BIG COLD STORAGE BUILDING.

H. E. Dickerson, representing the A. J. Dexter Cold Storage system, of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, has been in town during the past few months supervising the erection, now about completed, of the large cold storage building which has been built on the steamboat dock by the Bay of Quinte Railway and Navigation Company. This building is the largest of the kind in Canada being 60x30 feet and 30 feet high and divided into six compartments varying in size. The walls composed of successive layers of wood and paper are twenty-nine inches thick. About 80,000 feet of lumber, 100,000 square feet of inodorous paper, and 2,600 pounds of nails were used in the construction. Six hundred tons of ice will be used in the building. This system of cold storage is claimed to be superior to any other and is much in vogue in the United States where it has proved very successful. The system comprises a series of rooms in which the temperature can be regulated at will in each separate room in a way adapted for the better preservation of the products to be carried in that room. As a result it is possible to carry at the same time eggs, butter, cheese, fruits, poultry, fish, etc., etc., in an unvarying temperature suited to a perfect preservation of each without subjecting any one to the peculiar odors of another. The temperature varies generally from 10° to 33° above zero. The atmosphere in each department is always dry, the ventilation is perfect, and there is no need of artificial heat. This fine structure will be of great benefit to business men of this district in shipping perishable goods, and must result in attracting a great deal of freight to the line of the Bay of Quinte Railway.—Deseronto Tribune.

A BIG FLY PAPER ORDER.

In their trade bulletin for April 1, Talcott, Frisbie & Co. of this city mention that they have ordered a car-load of tanglefoot fly paper for arrival May 1, and they proceed to figure up what that means. There are 50 sheets in a box, 10 boxes in a case and 700 cases in a car. That means 350,000 sheets. Each sheet is capable of catching 1,000 flies. If every one does its full duty, 350,000,000 flies will be caught. Arranged in line these flies would make a procession 2,071 miles long. Carefully piled up they would make a cube 90 feet on each side. The circular does not say whether this enterprising firm intends to exhibit in the cube or the processional form at the end of the season. The people would vote for the procession, with the nearest fly at the city limits and the line running thence 2,071 miles in any one direction.—Hartford Courant.

PROFITS IN RAW SUGAR.

The heavy purchases of Java sugar made by English houses early in the season, and referred to by us at the time, stand to realize their owners enormous profits, the total gains of one London firm being estimated at over $1,000,000 on holdings of about 200,000 tons. These early purchases of Java and other Eastern sugars were of a purely speculative character, the operators taking their chances on the future of the market, which has turned out very fortunate so far. Of course a considerable portion of these sugars, which will not be shipped before June or July, have already been resold at a very handsome profit; and from appearances at present, there is every prospect of values being maintained if not still further advanced. A very important factor in the situation is that the American Trust, failing to obtain its necessary supplies of the cane product in Brazil and Cuba, has been compelled to buy from English holders, and it is this important competition which is likely to sustain prices on the other side for some time to come. Besides, English and Scotch refiners, believing that they could buy cheaper by playing the waiting game and getting middlemen to carry the produce until they required it, held off, and are now forced to buy from speculators at present figures, in competition with the American Sugar Trust, which has bought several cargoes recently at a cost and freight price delivered at New York.—Trade Bulletin.

DON'T LOSE YOUR GRIP.

Recently we heard a conversation between two business men, in which reference was made to a certain firm. One said to the other: "Blank & Co. don't seem to be doing a very big business now-a-days." "No," replied the other, "they have lost their grip." Now, why should a business firm or individual lose their or his grip on the patronage of consumers or retailers. In some cases the answer is easily found. Neglect of business, bad methods, presuming too much on an established reputation for integrity, lack of energy, etc., are among the reasons that may be assigned for the loss of grip in business—the phrase meaning simply that a firm or individual is falling behind in the race, not that disaster is immediately impending. There are many business men who actually have lost their grip, but are not aware of the fact. Dry rot has set in, and it is only a question of time when the slow decay will result in the death of the business. Speaking in commercial terms, they are practically dead, and the sooner their corpses are removed from public view the better. The injection of new blood and energy into the slowly dying business may arrest the process of decay, and give to it a new lease of life, but unless this expedient is resorted to, the diagnosis is easily made and the case is hopeless.

In the case of a loss of grip in business, as with many diseases of the human system, prevention is better than cure, but in the early stages, when the pulmonary symptoms make their appearance there is yet time to apply a remedy. It is well, therefore, to know these symptoms, which include a feeling of contentment on the part of the business man and a disposition to rest satisfied with the volume that the business has attained, declining sales, a decrease in the average number of new customers within a given time, a material increase in the number of complaints of customers. A sound axiom in business is, to put it roughly: Insure the satisfaction of your customers, but never be satisfied yourself with the volume of your sales. The merchant who is insatiable, ever reaching out for more trade, will generally get it, he is in little danger of losing his grip. But some men overreach themselves, their insatiability inducing them to resort to practices that are destructive to business as surely as dry rot. Everyone has known such cases, and noticed the ill effects of a descent from a lofty standard of business morality to the low plane of which adulteration is practiced with intent to deceive, short weight and measure are given, and bogus labels employed. It may appear that the loss of grip is attributable to many other causes, and in support of this view the many failures of retail dealers reported weekly may be urged. We do not pretend to have enumerated all of the causes, but most of the failures in business are of men who have never secured a grip. Lack of capital, lack of ability, or lack of experience, either singly or combined, have prevented them establishing themselves, and, although their business existence may have been prolonged, their chances at the outset were nevertheless hopeless.—Merchants' Review.

COUNTRY ROADS.

At the meeting of the Canadian Institute, of Toronto, on Saturday, Alan Macdougall, C.E., read a paper on road improvement. He pointed out that whilst the most careful attention had been paid to improving railway and vessel transport, so that freight can be carried at the lowest cost, no attention has been paid to road improvement. The condition of our common roads is what it was 30 years ago. In spite of the keen competition to which they are subjected farmers have not yet realized how much they lose in taking a ton of produce to market over a bad road. Enormous sums are wasted every year in so-called roads repairs under the statute labor system. In any well-settled township the value of this labor ranges from $3,000 to $5,000 per annum, which if properly expended would be ample to make good roads and maintain them in good condition. Any movement for road improvement must strike at the abolition of statute labor and the introduction of more practical methods of management. The common road must be treated as a channel of commerce, farmers must pay attention to the economic questions involved in cheap transport, and remember that whilst they object to a slight increase in rates by railways they pay lavishly for transport over every mile of a bad road from the farm to the railway station. If it costs $1 to haul 100 bushels of wheat one mile on dirt roads, and by improving them the cost can be reduced to 20 cents per mile, the price of the wheat is raised accordingly. Many schemes have been proposed. The lecturer favored those which tended to put the construction of roads beyond the influence of local politics. He considers road construction companies composed of influential men in each country, with a well-qualified engineer, would construct good roads and give the best value for money expended; the stockholders all being in the country would have a personal interest in the judicious expenditure of the money, and the work would be carried out more thoroughly than under any of the systems now in operation. The cost of the improvements would be levied on the adjoining property on the local improvement plan, or under a clause similar to chap. 184, section 569, of the Municipal Act, which governs the procedure in drainage matters.

TALLOW'S RISE AND FALL.

There have been such fluctuations in the prices of hog products, and such movements in related interests of all kinds, as to make it worth while to our readers to inquire into the inwardness of these matters. Of course, it was not necessary to learn that there had been a general and unusual advance in pork and lard, in hams and bacon, for the well known reason that the hog crop of 1892 was very short, so generally short that even the vast and compensating sweep of production, which in our country often equalizes the market, did not in this case do it.

But why did tallow and other products of the fatty kinds so closely sympathize with all the incidents of the hog market? Was there a short supply of cattle and sheep? Inquiry does not establish the fact of a short supply, either local or general in these. How then is the very unusual rise in tallow, $4\frac{1}{2}$ to $8\frac{3}{4}$ c., or nearly 100 per cent., and its return downward to $5\frac{3}{4}$ c. to be accounted for?

The answer comes from two sources. First, on account of the failure of the farmers to furnish the usual supply of porkers, for various reasons, such as diseases in the herds of swine, the more profitable marketing of their corn, etc., and an increased demand for fats in preparation of "compound lard" and other articles in which the proportion of lard usually found ceased to appear, indeed, became "small and beautifully less." This increased use of fats as a substitute for lard, both legitimate and otherwise, accounts largely for the increased demand and the consequent upward tendency in prices. But this does not explain the matter fully. To get at the entire secret it would be necessary to know all about the second cause, speculation.

The supply of a certain leading produce is short, and speculation and enterprise are on the alert to win a harvest from this and other fields. Money is to be made, and who shall make it? and how shall it be made? are the questions of interest to the broker, the manufacturer, the jobber and the retailer, not to mention the army of consumers.

So, while the supply of cattle, sheep, etc. is acknowledged to have been about normal, the shortage in hogs increased the demand for other products, and this sent up the prices. Then speculation did its best in manipulating for profit, and still higher prices resulted. Now the retail dealer and the consumer come in with their important part to play and pay. Soap goes higher because makers use tallow. People complain at the change from old prices and fail to find the hidden cause, unless the dealer can take time to find out for himself, and then laboriously to explain to every customer. Well, tallow has been way up for these and other reasons. We have eaten more of it than we probably were aware, and now it is sinking to its normal value. The lessons of the tallow market are not very different from that of other products which from time to time become compensating elements in manufacture and trade.—Commercial Enquirer.

DIAMOND CRYSTAL SALT

❖ THE process by which this Salt is made is different from any other one of the kind in existence. That PERFECTION in the manufacture of such a variable article as Salt should be attained at once was not to be expected, and while the remarkable purity of Diamond Crystal Salt was generally conceded very soon after it was placed on the market, still the manufacturers were obliged to admit that at first it was not in every respect a perfect BUTTER Salt. Although much thought was spent and many experiments made, it was not until after FOUR YEARS of such effort that the trouble was discovered and the defects entirely remedied.

In spite of its defects, however, many dealers in butter, especially those who stored their goods for several months, insisted that this Salt should be used, since they had learned by repeated tests that it was the best Salt they could find for preserving butter and holding its flavor. To their first success—Purity—they have added a second by securing all the conditions essential in a Salt to be used for producing the Highest Grade of Butter.

THE BANANA TRADE.

Ever since bananas became an article of commerce this market has always led in the importation, but during the past several years there has been a growing competition for the rapidly increasing trade, with Philadelphia, Baltimore, Boston and New Orleans in the field, anxious to secure a portion of the business that in the past has been controlled largely by our importers. Bananas are received here from the islands of Jamaica and Cuba, also Port Limon on the Central American coast and Aspinwall. In some of the growing sections the fruit is raised and shipped by owners of large plantations, while in other localities it is gathered by the natives, and brought down to the coast where local merchants purchase the same, and resell to vessels calling for cargoes. The fruit upon arrival here is assorted into three and four qualities, first selections where a buyer seeks to obtain the best that the cargo contains; second, the "first run," a selection of prime green fruit made by the importer; third, seconds a line of fruit in the course of ripening, and fourth, the ripe fruit which must be disposed of immediately, and is usually taken by local venders. The green fruit in large bunches commands most money, and is wanted usually for shipment to distant interior points, or to be laid away for reserved stock by the dealers. The departure of vessels from the various tropical ports is usually made known here by cable information, and those who are to handle the cargoes upon arrival immediately lay their wires for trade by notifying the most prominent buyers of all sections of the date the fruit is expected, and then await responses in the way of orders. The steamer once at the wharf the fruit is discharged rapidly, selections made and shipped, and the unsold portion taken into store to await the sale through chance orders, or local demand.

In certain seasons of the year, though more particularly through the fall and winter months, it frequently happens that cargoes will come to hand, and sufficient orders will not have been accumulated to care for the major portion of the fruit. Under such circumstances the importer finds it necessary to create an outlet, and though at the time some will positively deny the charge, preferring to give the impression that they have found a good market for their fruit, coupled with remunerative prices, they consign their goods to interior dealers, satisfied to obtain the best terms possible so long as the burden of stock is lifted from their hands. Now to return to the subject of competition. No one market, of course, can expect to hold a mortgage upon the trade of the country. New York, as we have previously stated, has led in the importation of this class of fruit, but the shipments to other markets appear to be gradually increasing, and, our local importers claim, to the detriment of the trade. Here there is naturally a heavy, and perhaps the largest demand for the fruit. The local sale is enormous, but in the past there has always been sufficient stock to supply the necessities of interior customers. With this port holding its own in the way of imports, the various neighboring markets are doing their utmost to rival us as importers, with the result of heavy shipments being received at Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore. With all four ports competing for the same trade, it is but natural that the market should be kept in a disturbed and unsettled condition. Prices are "cut" to attract the demand, and consignments are made broadcast which serve to check the natural trade, as many interior buyers find it no longer necessary to purchase stock when they can frequently have same in the shape of consigned goods upon application.

New Orleans during the past two or three years has made rapid strides in the importation of bananas. From a few thousand bunches, she has run her annual receipts up to hundreds of thousands, and to-day crowding this market for the trade of the country. The great advantages of the Gulf port is her convenience to the growing sections, and the assistance given by the railroads to the merchants of that city. Did the importers of New Orleans confine their attention to the trade of the West and Southwest, no objection would be raised by those interested in this locality, but when shipments are made from this far-off Southern city up into New York State, and even crossing the border into Canada, our importers consider they have good ground for complaining of the enterprise and ambition of the Crescent City. It is said in the trade here that consignments have been made from that city to Buffalo, and also to Montreal, a fact that many find difficult to comprehend in the face of an Inter-State Commerce law, but we learn upon investigation that it is not alone upon "cut rates" that advantages are gained, but that the railroad companies place no restrictions upon quantities loaded into cars, the rule being pile to the roof without regard to weight, whereas from this market the companies place restrictions upon the quantities to be carried, holding shippers down to what they consider a carload. The railroads South have not an overplus of business, being situated differently in this respect from their Northern friends, hence the former are putting forth every endeavor to increase their traffic, to do which they turn down the Inter-State Commerce laws, taking the chances of being investigated by the authorities. New York is desirous of retaining the trade in bananas, but she certainly is placed at a great disadvantage when the above facts are seriously considered.—N. Y. Bulletin.

THE RICE CONTROVERSY.

The New York Bulletin has received the following addition to the pending rice controversy: "New Orleans, April 20th, 1893—Official statement of the rice situation in Louisiana April 1st, 1893: Receipts at New Orleans to date, 1,679,803 sacks rough, equal to 167,980,300 lbs. clean; 5,756 barrels clean, equal to 1,726,800; total, 169,707,100. Estimated interior stock, 150,000 sacks rough, equal to 15,000,000; estimated milled by country mills, 50,000 sacks rough, equal to 5,000,000; shipments to Charleston, Savannah and New York direct (not included in receipts), 55,000 sacks rough, equal to 5,500,000; total crop, 195,207,100. Visible supply, New Orleans stock, 369,527 sacks rough, equal to 36,952,700; 25,318 barrels clean, equal to 7,595,400 pounds; 6,235 barrels brewers, 1,870,500 pounds; total 46,418,600 pounds. Estimated interior stock, 15,000,000 pounds; total supply, 61,418,600 pounds; showing a total distribution of 133,788,500 pounds clean, or 68 1-2 per cent. of the crop, leaving only 31 1-2 per cent. of the crop unsold. Allowing 8 per cent. of the above total supply for No. 2 or 'brewers' rice, would show a supply of 56,505,112 pounds of edible rice, and 4,913,488 pounds of brewers. The reports of sales at the Board of Trade are those made by actual members, and do not include sales made by receivers, who dispose of their holdings outside of the Board, nor sales of country mills disposed of elsewhere. The above figures do not include 10,000,000 pounds of last season's crop milled and marketed with the present crop. The foregoing is the official count compiled by the appointed special committee of the Board of Trade in order to place the true situation before the trade. All other statements greatly at variance with these figures are made through ignorance or for speculative purposes. (Signed) Henry Gehl, J. A. Hubbard, Gordon S. Orme, F. G. Ernst, Committee."

EXCITEMENT IN SUGAR AT MONTREAL.

The excitement in sugar still keeps up, and many jobbers in Montreal are commencing to ask one another, where is the advance going to stop? Although they admit that the position of refined stock is not yet upon a basis equivalent to that of the raw product, some of them think that speculation has something to do with the frequent jumps that occur as well as the strong position of the raw sugar market. This belief, however, does not check their disposition to buy, for it is generally admitted that the refiners are having all the demand they care about at present. In fact the latter declare that they are not free sellers just at present, intimating as their reason for this that tendency is upward and that consequently they don't care to be bound to any heavy contracts with the possibility of having to make deliveries on a very narrow margin. They are operating very cautiously therefore and it is to this fact principally that the sugar market is not more active than it is. On Thursday last both the Montreal refiners advanced their prices 1-16c. on granulated and 1/8c. on yellows, and before it has actually had time to become established they are talking of a further rise. Advices from the outside certainly afford them strong support. Prices of beet sugar in Europe are to-day £4 sterling a ton above the parity of last year. This is apparently due to the deficient crops both of beet and cane for the present season, and the prevalent drought in Germany, France and Austria checking the growth of the young plants. Cane descriptions of sugar share fully in the advance, indeed advices from Cuba indicate plainly that she leads if anything in the enhancement of prices. Refined sugar follows, and New York was on Tuesday again higher, granulated being quoted at 5 1-16c. London advices quote beet 17s. for April and May, and Hamburg also comes advanced.

CONFERENCES ON THE TARIFF.

There was an important conference at the Board of Trade rooms in Montreal Monday morning last, when the Hon. Messrs. Foster, Mackenzie, Bowell, and Ouimet, met delegations from several branches of business, in regard to suggestions about tariff revision. The ministers received no less than seven deputations during the day. The delegates who waited upon the ministers were as follows:

Boots and shoes—Messrs. C. F. Smith, J. C. Holden, H. B. Ames, J. T. Hagar and Geo. Slatter.

Leather and shoe findings—Messrs. L. H. Packard (chairman), J. E. M. Whitney, David Rea, Leslie Dowker, F. C. A. McIndoe, Hector Lamontagne, A. G. Whitney and J. M. Wardlow.

Tanners—Messrs. C. Duclos, E. F. Moseley, P. Galibert, D. Scott, B. Goyer, G. W. Sadler, C. C. Cleveland, M.P. (Danville), J. A. Stevenson and C. T. Shaw.

Wall paper manufacturers—Messrs. Colin McArthur & Co., and J. C. Watson & Co.

Dry goods importers—Messrs. R. L. Gault, E. B. Greenshields, James Slessor, Frank May and A. Leclaire.

Spruce lumber and pulp—Hon. L. Tourville, Hon. J. K. Ward, J. Forman, A. McLaurin and W. Angers.

Of course all the conferences were strictly private. Representatives of the various branches of the iron trade meet the members on Tuesday.

A BUSY SOAP FACTORY.

Numbered among the successful soap manufacturers of the Dominion is the firm of William Logan of St. John, N. B. The works have a capacity of fifty tons per week, and Mr. Logan reports that they are not only running full blast, but are compelled occasionally to work overtime in order to keep pace with the demand. The firm is at the moment pushing the Sterling and Fairy brands of soap. Sterling is a high class laundry soap, while Fairy is principally adapted for use in bath or toilet, and is reputed to be among the prettiest made in Canada. Both these soaps have large sales over the provinces as far west as Toronto. W. J. Forrestall represents the firm in Ontario and L. N. Dobbin in Montreal.

PERSONAL MENTION.

J. A. Milligan, who previously ran a store in Owen Sound, has bought out the general store of J. D. Elliott, Tottenham.

W. G. Ross of Owen Sound was in the city this week, buying supplies for the first boats, goods to be shipped at once, it being expected that the boats will start this week.

Mr. Ross reports open water at Parry Sound, but not all the way through.

Thomas Nicholson of Buffalo, formerly one of Eby, Blain & Co's city travellers, was in the city this week renewing acquaintance-ships.

The trade will regret to learn that Alex. Fisher, of Lindsay, is ill with congestion of the brain. He has been sick since Good Friday.

David Moore seems to have got the sympathy of the trade and of his fellow travellers in the domestic troubles that have fallen upon him.

Mr. Grier of Codbury & Son, cocoa mfrs., is here and is taking a look over the field with Mr. Magor, Montreal, the Canadian representative.

When J. Lockhart Watt of Watt & Scott, Toronto, sailed for Europe a few weeks ago it was chiefly in response to a call from his father who was ill at his home in Ireland and wished to see him. A letter received here a few days ago from Mr. Watt conveyed the sad intelligence that he was too late to see his father alive, he having died four hours before his arrival.

TRADE SALES.

The stock of Howson & Co., general dry goods, Walkerton, valued at $7,812.03, was sold at 57 cents on the dollar. J. F. Gibson was the purchaser.

F. M. Unwin, crockery and glassware Barrie, assigned to Chas Langley, with a stock valued at $3,197.85. His stock was sold at 49 cents on the dollar to R. A. Dutton of Barrie.

At Suckling's on Tuesday the grocery stock of J. Beilby, 84 Dundas street, Toronto, valued at $911.24, and furniture $280, was sold to Dahl Bros., Orangeville, at 64c. on the dollar.

The stock of J. P. O'Higgins, a London grocer, is to be sold by the assignee this week. As is usual, the bankrupt knew more than his brother grocers and could run his own business. So he refused to join the association or co-operate with its members. Being also a price cutter and not having the delinquent list he got a good many bad accounts. This is the second time he has failed. The association has decided to watch the sale and to bid it in if the price does not go high enough to keep the buyer from slaughtering it.

The Wolfville (N.S.) Acadian of last week contains a half column advertisement announcing the opening of R. Prat's general store in that place. Mr. Prat was formerly a member of the firm of Prat & Collins, that dissolved some weeks ago. Judging from the advertisement in question, Mr. Prat is a live business man. A unique feature of the "ad" is an invitation to the public to drink cocoa with him on the afternoons and evenings of April 29 and May 1.

The preparation is covered by an English patent.

In a review of the United States fruit crop, the N. Y. Bulletin says that strawberries give a fair promise. Blackberries are not doing very well South, and advices from Maryland, and more southerly points are to the effect that growers believe the crop will be almost a failure, except for the early harvest variety, or wild berry, which looks promising. The outlook for peaches is very favorable, and unless all indications fail the crop will be simply immense.

Mr. John Cameron, general agent of the McLean Company, trade journal publishers, Toronto, called on The Gazette on Tuesday. The company he represents are extensive publishers of journals devoted to the interests of the various branches of trade and supply information in the different branches of dry goods, hardware, etc., which proves of great value to dealers. The general agent is peculiarly adapted for his present calling, and is meeting with gratifying success.—Gazette, Picton.

It costs something to live and a good deal to die; in fact, everything costs, says a bright exchange. Someone estimates that getting born costs the people of the United States $250,000 annually; getting married, $300,000,000, and getting buried, $75,000,000. It might be added that getting drunk costs the people of the United States more than $900,000,000 annually, or over one and a half times as much as getting born, married and buried, and more than all the bread and meat consumed in the nation.

Not even bad eggs are laid in vain. Years ago those that had survived their culinary usefulness were of no value to dealers, who used to pay garbage collectors to take them away. Nowadays bad eggs are almost a regular article of commerce. The yolks can be so treated as to make a most valuable dressing for kid and other fine leathers. Instead of paying to have bad eggs taken away, the dealers sell them to the makers of this dressing at a fair price. Large quantities of this egg yolk dressing are exported to Europe.

A novel method of advertising was hit on by a Tennessee storekeeper. He advertised that on a certain day he would have a large photograph of his store taken, and people from the surrounding country were invited to be present. He further announced that every one whose face appeared in the picture would be entitled to a free copy. The result was the biggest sort of an opening. In order to get a copy of the finished picture each person was obliged to call a second time, and upon such an occasion would be apt to buy something before leaving.

The North Sydney Herald says: There are many people in our own Dominion who have little or no idea of the magnitude of the grape-growing industry and wine manufacture in Canada. The following facts, taken from statistical records, are authentic: (1) There are at least 5,000 acres of land planted in vines, Robt. A. McGuinness, a Liverpool egg importer, in an interview with the Montreal Trade Bulletin, stated that Prince Edward Island and the other Maritime Provinces ship considerable quantities of eggs to England, which are of very good size and quality and much appreciated. Mr. McGuinness is now on his way to the egg sections of Ontario, and he advises shippers using the large cases of 120 dozen capacity, to pack the eggs in three layers instead of four, as has hitherto been done. By this means they get better ventilation and are preferred by buyers. To be adapted to this change the cases require to be made less deep but wider. Eggs should be packed in nice bright and sweet oat-hulls and never in straw, unless it be kiln-dried.

DRY GOODS.

(From the Dry Goods Review.)

The week has been almost uneventful except as regards millinery. The millinery houses made an extra display on the 24th and following days, and a huge trade was done in summer fancies. This had a strong effect upon the dry goods trade, and the trade, which has been a poor average brightened up considerably. This is a season when the parcels are not large because dealers are well stocked for spring trade. But spring goods are being called for from city dealers, and from the larger dealers in the towns. These orders are repeats of the best selling lines. Summer goods are being enquired for, but the orders are not bulky. Dealers are sparing in the attention bestowed on these lines. Fall samples are having a similar experience, most retail dealers declaring that they will not place orders at present. The wholesale dealers in knit underwear, top-shirts, grey flannels, etc., have placed the bulk of their orders and settled the styles for the fall. Grey flannels are the only line which promise to rule lower, and even in these a lower price seems to be obtained at the expense of quality.

A feature of the week has been the firmness in prints. The advance reported from Manchester will have an effect on prices, and few cuts will be secured by the retailers. Repeats can only be obtained at advances, and this will have the effect of making good English prints scarce towards the close of the season.

NOTES

W. R. Brock & Co. have had numerous repeats of their popular lines of dress goods. They report an extensive sale in shot effects and whipcords.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. have opened up to-day ten cases American Indigo prints which they guarantee absolutely fast color. This will be of interest to those merchants who have bought some of the numerous navy prints on the market which have proved unwashable.

W. R. Brock & Co. have opened up a case of frillings in a number of popular styles and prices. This includes ostrich, chiffon, Lisse, and other styles. Three cases of handkerchiefs has been added to their stock, including plain linen, cambric, hem-stitched and colored borders. They now show a thoroughly complete stock in this department.

Colored hose for ladies and misses in both cotton and cashmere will be largely used this season. Gordon, Mackay & Co. are showing a fine range of these goods to match the various shades of tan shoes, also assorted greys and cardinals, put up in boxes containing half dozen pairs and guaranteed fast colors.

John Macdonald & Co. are making a strong effort to keep all classes of their stock in full range for the sorting trade. This is a feature of trade which they take special pains to uphold, and a dealer is always sure of an excellent range to choose from, just when many houses are without a full stock. In staples, such as cottons, flannelettes, prints, linens, cretonnes, etc., they have excellent ranges, and in some lines special prices.

W. R. Brock & Co. have just received a large shipment of French and German Balbriggan underwear. One line has been purchased under special circumstances and can be retailed in all sizes at 50 cents each. They have just passed into stock several cases of Irish Pointe, Guipure, fancy cotton and other laces. Veilings and lace curtains are also opened up, being repeats of popular lines. They have been very successful with the lines they have shown this season.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling have been opening up some drives in fancy sateens, art furniture sateens, and cretonnes. These goods they claim to be offering at less than regular prices. They are also showing some very attractive lines in pink, cream, and indigo-blue blouse-cloths. In prints they have some very striking novelties just to hand. Some prime values in linens are also being offered. These include tablings, glass cloths, towellings, etc. In dress goods some navy blue serges are being shown and also plain cashmeres. These comprise all the latest novelties in weaves and shades.

Alexander & Anderson have received a large repeat of imported prints which are being sold at old prices. These orders had been placed before the recent advance in Great Britain and on the continent, and will be sold at old prices. Scarce shades in venetians have been filled up; these include fawns, browns, slates, navys, etc. English flannelettes in great range have just been opened up. They report a strong demand for these very popular goods. They expect to show in a few days a shipment of all wool French delaines in black grounds. These will be worthy of inspection on account of the latest patterns and designs being included. They have also received shipments of celebrated black wool cashmeres, making the range in this line of goods complete at present. Colored Henriettas, such as cardinal, garnet, navys, and other scarce goods have been repeated several times, and still are in good demand.

TORONTO MARKETS.

TORONTO, April 27, 1893.
GROCERIES.

Trade exhibits some improvement this week, although it is slight, the movement of merchandise still being small. The country roads are in a little better condition, and to this is doubtless largely attributable the slight improvement in business. Travellers' reports are more satisfactory. If there is one line more than another that shows the most improvement it is canned goods, but even here the wants are confined to small lots at well maintained prices. Coffees are without change here, and the outside markets are recovering from the recent slump. Dried fruits are meeting with a little better enquiry. A fairly good business is being done in spices, while rice continues quiet and unchanged. Sugar is quiet and firm at the recent advance. Syrups and molasses remain without change of any description. Teas seem to be, if anything, in rather better demand, but the movement is still light. No complaints are heard regarding payments.

COFFEES.

Trade here continues quiet and without special feature to note. The outside markets have recovered considerably from the recent drop and are now characterized by an upward tendency. Advices from New York state that good Rio grades are scarce and hard to obtain and command higher prices. The declines have been altogether in the lower grades and these have regained more than one-half what they lost. On Monday the market in New York was about $\frac{1}{2}$ c. above that of Saturday. During the decline last week, futures dropped 65 points and spot $\frac{1}{2}$ c. a pound. The local market is still bare of good coffees and prices are unchanged. We quote: Rio 20½ to 22c., East Indian 27 to 30c., South American 21 to 23c., Mocha 26 to 30c., Santos 21 to 22c.

DRIED FRUIT.

A slightly improved enquiry is reported in this line, but it is not much to boast about. No special feature has developed and prices rule steady. Valencia raisins are meeting with a little better demand, that is for the better grades. Prices remain as before. The ruling price for good off-stalk fruit is around 5c. with medium going at 4c., fine at 6c. and selects in 28 lb. boxes at 7c. We quote layers at 7 to 7½c. in boxes. Demand is fair for currants. There are no changes and nothing special to note beyond the fact that outside advices would indicate a short crop next season and the consequent higher prices. There is very little good fruit here. Finest Vostizzas sell at 9 to 9½c. in cases, Patras at 6½ to 7c. and Provincials at 5½ to 6¼c. in barrels and half-barrels respectively. A few cases of prunes are going out at 7½ to 8½c. for Bosmas in cases. Dates are not much wanted and good Hallowses sell at 5½c.

NUTS.

Demand in this line is light. Brazil nuts are firm at 11 to 11½c. a pound. Sicily shelled almonds have advanced and we quote 32 to 35c. a pound; unshelled sell at 16 to 17c. Peanuts are unchanged at 13 to 14c. for roasted and 11 to 12½ for green.

RICE AND SPICES.

The demand is still light for rice, buyers holding off in anticipation of lower prices when the new crop arrives, which will probably be in another month; 3½c. is still the idea for ordinary.

Spices are in fairly active demand for all grades. Whole ginger is quoted at 20 to 25c., pure white pepper at 20 to 28c., and pure black at 14 to 16c.

SUGAR.

Prices are fractionally higher than a week ago, and the market is strong at the advance. New York gained 1-16c. on granulated Monday. The demand on the Toronto market is light, being for small lots only, and there appears to be an absence of any speculative tendency. Granulated sells at 5½ to 5¾c., but the outside figure is the price most quoted. In yellows the range is 4½c. for dark, 4¾c. for medium, 4½c. for bright, and 4¾c. for cream. The refiners are strong in their views, and one of them was on Tuesday quoting 5¾c. for granulated laid down here. Cables to Willett & Gray of New York report stocks in six principal Cuban ports on April 18 at 224,000 tons, and crop receipts at same ports to April 11 559,625 tons. This authority reduces former estimates of the Cuban crop to 800,000 tons against 975,000 tons last year, a decrease of 18 per cent. They also say that it may be noted that in 1892 some 30,000 tons of sugar were made in the United States from imported Cuban molasses, while this year 5,000 tons will probably cover the quantity, the remainder being manufactured in Cuba and appears in the estimate. This is a difference of from 20,000 to 25,000 tons manufactured in the United States, as well as 15,000 extra stock in Cuba at the beginning of 1892 from the preceding crop, making a total deficiency of supplies of 35,000 to 40,000 tons available from crop over and above the figures of the crop shortage.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Syrups are not by any means moving fast, but prices are steady at 2 to 3½c. in barrels and half-barrels. Molasses quiet, with New Orleans selling in barrels and half-barrels at 30 to 32c.

TEAS.

A slight improvement has developed in the demand during the last few days. The increase is principally in Ceylons, Indians, and Assams. There has been some enquiry during the last few days from the States for low and medium, and samples have, in response, been forwarded. The next six weeks or two months are expected to be marked by considerable activity. THE GROCER some weeks ago published a statement, received through a local house, in which it was stated that the Japan market was expected to open earlier than usual, but these calculations have since been knocked out by adverse weather conditions. A few days ago Mr. Dallas, who represents Muor-ylan, Heeman & Co., of Yokohama, the largest shippers of Japan teas, received advices stating that the season will open about same time as last year, possibly a week later, the weather not being so favorable as expected at first. The first teas are high-priced and the second crop of medium and fine won't arrive here for the next three months, and then only in small quantities.

BUTTER AND CHEESE

The butter market is in better shape than a week ago. Receipts were rather light some days ago, but they are now getting more liberal. Receipts are still confined to large rolls there being practically no tubs arriving. Rolls selling from about 17 to 18c. seem to be most in demand, although for the choice article prices run as high as 20c. There are no creamery tubs on this market and the supply of pound prints is limited. The latter sell as before at 24 to 25c. Not much creamery is being made, preparations being made for cheese making, which begins about May 1. Some of the cheese factories have already begun operations.

The cheese market continues dull. There is no export demand and offerings are in consequence larger than the trade can take care of. Prices are easy at 11 to 11½c.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—Much about the same as before. Car lots of good medium hand-picked could have been obtained at $1.35, and $1.50 is the price jobbers are asking for a similar bean; inferior quality can be got at almost any price.

DRIED APPLES—Continue dull and easy. Most jobbers are not inclined to pay more than 4 to 4½c., while the selling price ranges from 4¾ to 5c.

EVAPORATED APPLES—Not much doing. Small lots are selling at 9 to 9½c., and probably this price would be paid for car lots, that being the only kind that seems to be wanted.

EGGS—If anything the market is a little steadier, although the demand is still light, but receipts are not large; 11 to 11½c. is the idea.

HONEY—Demand is still light. Sales of lots of good strained honey are reported at 7 to 8c., while for the ordinary dark article there seems to be no quotable value, dealers seemingly being glad to take what they can get.

POULTRY—Scarce and wanted, with chickens quoted higher at 80 to 90c. Turkeys are unchanged at 13 to 14c. a pound, and geese at 8 to 10c. a pound.

POTATOES—Dull and easy; 80c. seems to be about the idea for carlots on track; lots out of store are generally quoted at 90c., but they can be picked up here and there from farmers' wagons at much lower figures, some being thus obtained as low as 75c.

ONIONS—Quiet and unchanged at $2 per barrel for red and $2.50 per barrel for yellow.

HOPS—The feeling is dull and unsettled, 18 to 20c. seems to be the jobbing price of 92's, while for yearlings 14 to 16c. is quoted.

HOGS AND PROVISIONS.

The feeling is steadier in hogs at the moment, prices ranging all the way from $7.25 to $7.50, and packers are taking all that come in at these prices. Hog products seem to be a little steadier, and stocks of lard on this market are not large.

BACON—Long clear 10½c. Smoked backs are 12½ to 13c., bellies 13½ to 14c., rolls 10½ to 10¾c.

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.

Some improvement has developed in this line during the week and a good healthy sorting up trade is being done. Tomatoes are meeting with more enquiry and there is less disposition to sell at lower prices. This increased demand is likely to be maintained for sometime, being as it now is on the eve of the opening of navigation. The demand is for the better brands selling at 95c. to $1.00, but we quote the range at from 85c. to $1. Reports have just been received here stating that recent shipments made to Liverpool have netted a better profit than could be obtained here for five and ten case lots. The price netted is said to be equal to 93c. here. In consequence of this a Toronto house has decided to send another carload. Peas are also in better demand than a week ago, and prices range as before at from 85c. to $1 for ordinary and $1.45 for sifted. Corn is in decidedly better request than a week ago, and while there has been no advance in prices they are firm at 85c. to $1 for ordinary and $1.25 for extra, the principal demand being for the dollar goods. Beans quiet and unchanged at 90c. to $1. Salmon is in active demand considering the time of year. This applies more particularly to the better class of fish, ranging in prices from $1.55 to $1.65 for talls and $1.70 to $1.80 in flats. Of course lower goods are to be obtained, and a light pink can be got around $1.30. As the present demand is likely to continue a hardening of prices is expected shortly, on account of the lightness of stocks. In lobster, the demand is active for the better grades; $2 to $2.10 for talls and $2.50 for flats is about the idea. There is not much doing in sardines and prices are unchanged. Peaches remain much as before at $2.10 to $2.25 for 2's and at $3.25 to $3.75 for 3's. The demand that sprung up a couple of weeks ago for peaches continues brisk at $1.45 to $1.55. A good many canned apples are being exported and that keeps stocks light and prices firm. Local demand for this line is light and prices are unchanged at 85c. to $1 for 3's and $2 to $2.25 for gallons. Demand for other fruits is slack.

MONTREAL.

There is no demand for canned goods worth mentioning. Some of the wholesale houses are moving out small lots of tomatoes and other vegetables at about cost, but the market as a whole is extremely dull.

DRESSED MEATS—Beef fores are 4½ to 5½c., hindquarters 6 to 8½c., veal 8 to 9½c. lamb 8½ to 9½c.

GREEN FRUIT.

There has been a falling off in the volume of business in this line owing to the cold weather. The demand for oranges lighter, more attention being given to bananas, the demand for which is heavy. Advices from California say stock of oranges is getting light and that higher prices are looked for. Receipts of bananas during the past week have aggregated some fourteen cars. There are a few strawberries on this market and they sell at from 23 to 25c. a box. Pine apples continue in demand and lemons are selling freely. There is not much demand for apples and the few wanted are generally supplied by the farmers. There is a little improvement in the English market but not sufficiently so to warrant any exporting being done. We quote as follows: Oranges—Valencias $6.00 to $6.50 per case; ditto, Jumbos, 8 to $8.50 per case; Floridas $3.25 to $4 per box; Messinas and Palermos $3.25 to $3.75 per box; California seedlings, $3 to $3.25 per box; ditto Navals, $3.75 to $4.25; lemons, $3 to $4; bananas, $1 to $2.25; pineapples, extras 25c., No. 1 18 to 20c., No. 2 13 to 15c., No. 3 9 to 11c.; apples $1 to $2 for ordinary, while fancy brings a little more.

MAPLE SYRUP.

There is a good demand for maple syrup, but sugar is not selling very fast. While supplies are not large they are bigger than anticipated ten days ago. Syrup is quoted lower at 75 to 80c. in tins, and 85 to 90c. per imperial gallon in kegs. Maple sugar is dearer, being now quoted at 9 to 9½c. a pound.

FISH AND OYSTERS

All fresh fish are scarce, and the market is in consequence dull and featureless, without any change in prices. We quote as follows: Manitoba whitefish, 7½c.; fresh salmon, 20c.; haddock, 6c.; skinned and boned codfish, 6½c.; Labrador herring, $3 per half bbl.; shore herring, $2.75 per bbl.; Digby herring, 11 to 12½c.; boneless fish, 4c.; boneless cod, 7 to 8c.; pike, 7c.; ciscoes, $1.35 a hundred; finnan haddie, 7½c.; perch, $2 to $3 per hundred, as to size; suckers, $3 per cwt.; blue back herring, $2 to $3 per hundred; oysters, $1.20 to $1.25 for stds., and $1.75 for selects.

HIDES, SKINS, WOOL, TALLOW.

HIDES—There is a fair demand for all well-selected buffs and prices are steady. There is no accumulation of stock in this market, but in the country there is an accumulation owing to there being so many grubby and No. 2 hides. This kind of stock is neglected. For good selections 5¼c. is the idea, but car lots would probably go at ¼c. less, with a large proportion of No. 2 selling at 75c. to $1 per cwt. lower.

SKINS—Calfskins are weaker, and the price has gone down from 5 to 10c. per skin, and there are expectations of a further decline, as this class of stock has been selling too high compared with the price of the articles into which it is manufactured. Jobbers are paying 7 to 8c., and are selling selects at an advance of 1c. on these figures. There are not many sheepskins coming in, and prices are nominal at $1.35 to $1.45.

TALLOW—Market is demoralized. Jobbers are selling good prime rendered tallow at 6c. a pound. All they are offering is 5 to 5½c., but they do not seem to be getting any at these figures. Rough is unchanged at 2½c.

WOOL—The market is quiet, and the excitement consequent upon the upward tendency of prices at the sales in London has subsided. Business was checked for the moment, as most of our manufacturers had good stocks of wool and were looking for a decline instead of an advance. The mills are running day and night. Prices in all tweed, flannel and blanket wools are well maintained. Fleece wool is nominal at 17 to 19c., clothing 25 to 26c., Canada South Down 27 to 28c.; white Indian, suitable for blankets, 17 to 19c., gray East Indian 11 to 13c., B. A.'s white clothing 32 to 34c., cross breeds 26 to 28c., Canada extra 25 to 27c. Canada super is scarce and good selection would readily fetch 23c.

SEEDS

Trade generally is quiet. Red clover is quoted 15c. per bushel lower. Alsike is scarce and higher. A good jobbing trade is being done in timothy, but prices are lower in sympathy with the Western market. Prime red clover is quoted at $8.70 to $8.85, extra choice $8.85 to $9, and $9 to $9.15 for Mammoth or Large Lake. Alsike runs all the way from $7.80 for good to $8.90 for choice. Timothy sells at $2.45 to $2.50 for choice, $2.53 to $2.65 for extra, and $2.65 to $2.80 for unhulled flail threshed.

PETROLEUM.

The Petrolea Advertiser in its weekly report, says: "During the past week there has been very little change on the face of matters in connection with the trade. The demand for crude has not grown any brisker, but though there is no excitement to be seen there is yet a fair, steady trade going on just the same. The Imperial Oil Company are taking in most of the crude and prices range about $1.15 f.o.b. Imperial Co.'s refinery. What the future may have in store for us can only be a matter of conjecture; there are so many circumstances liable to arise, the influence of which may work entirely antagonistic to the general desire, that it would be folly to prophecy on the matter. The indications at present all point to a lively trade, and good values this fall, and there seems to be a general disposition among holders of stock to believe that such will be the case." Refined 10c. in barrels, and 7½c. in bulk.

MARKET NOTES.

Smith & Keighley are in receipt of a fresh supply of fine Bosnia prunes.

Davidson & Hay report the arrival of Roberts' jellies and creams.

Sloan & Growther are in receipt of two car loads of fine red salmon, Britannia brand.

Advices received from New York by Warren Bros. & Boomer state that the coffee market there, after a short period of inactivity, is again firm in response to an advance of 1 to 1½c. and that another similar advance was anticipated when buyers from the west came in.

Clemes Bros. have just received three cars of bananas, among which is a car of fancy firsts.

Perkins, Ince & Co. report having received a small shipment of choice autumnal flavor Darjeeling tea.

Perkins, Ince & Co. have a choice Assam orange Pekoe which they consider exceptional value.

Sloan & Crowther have received fifty cases of Morton's fresh herrings in tall tins. The stock is excellent.

Enquiries for samples of low and medium grade teas have been received on this market from the States.

Sloan & Crowther have received a line of 500 quarter-boxes of layer Valencia raisins, "Golden" brand, which are selling rapidly.

Eby, Blain & Co. report the arrival of 77 cases of Batger's (London, Eng.) table jellies, jams and university marmalades.

Detroit jobbers are selling sugars on a combination price, and are making a profit. Chicago and Eastern houses do not attempt to cut them out.

Some satisfactory sales of Canadian canned tomatoes have been made in Liverpool and another shipment is now being made from Toronto.

A cable from Liverpool to Lockhart Watt & Scott quotes Valencia oranges higher at 17s. and Egyptian onions lower at 9s. The same firm also received a cable from Messina announcing a stiff market and advance in shelled almonds.

"I am a bull on medium and low grade Japan teas," said J. F. Eby. "I believe they will be very scarce before the new crop will be here, and I would not be surprised if we would see prices a cent higher. We will not have new teas for three months, and these will be high priced. Low grades will not arrive for some time later. The stocks in Chicago and New York are light. They bought from us last year and may again this."

A contemporary, referring the products of E. Roberts, the well known English confectioner, says: "We should like to make special mention, in closing, of Mr. Roberts' invalid and table jellies, and of his Royal (patent) table cream. These are all extremely delicious. They are prepared for the table instantly, and are remarkably cheap. We commend them to the notice of all who wish to please their families or their guests, and especially to proprietors of restaurants and those who have the management of railway refreshment rooms."

MONTREAL MARKETS.

MONTREAL, April 27, 1893.
GROCERIES

Taking the grocery market as a whole the week has been a quiet one, for all the jobbers complain that the country roads are almost impassable, especially in some of the Eastern sections of Ontario and throughout Quebec. This interferes with the actual movement at the moment, but future prospects seem to be encouraging on the whole, and this week the trade has given indications of a little more activity in a general way. The fact of inland navigation opening up shortly means more business for all the houses here have been flying orders for shipment as soon as this occurs for some time back. The tone of values on all the leading staples is as firm as ever. The notable feature in this connection has been the further advance in sugar, and it is more than likely that prices on it will go still higher, for refiners are not free sellers at the moment. Teas are firm, and have furnished a limited turnover. Coffee has been unsettled in New York, but the fact has not affected prices here as yet. Spices are firm and unchanged. The molasses market is unsettled for the reason that holders in the Islands will not make buyers here a firm offer. Payments are generally reported as favorable.

SUGAR.

The boom in sugars continues, another advance transpiring on Thursday last of a sixteenth of a cent in granulated and an eighth of a cent in yellows, and the demand is active at the advance, but refiners, in the face of the strong and advancing raw markets, are refusing to accept large contracts. We now quote refiners' prices for round lots firm at 5c. for granulated and 4 to 4 1-2c. for yellows, and it is possible that there may be another advance on this basis before the week end. In fact, if our market here was on an equivalent basis with the ruling figure in New York granulated would be selling at about 5 1-4c., for latest advices from that market said that the price there was 5 1-16c. In raw advices from all primary centres reflect continued strength. London cables quote beet at 16s. 3d., for April, and 16s. 4 1-2d. for May, Java 17s. 9d., and fair refining 15s. 9d. Business in centrifugals has been done at 4 1-16c., cost and freight New York, which is equal to 4 3-16 Montreal.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The molasses market is strong, and holders at the Island refuse to make any firm offers to importers here, the most recent idea being 19c. f.o.b., but we cannot learn that any business has been done at this basis. All accounts now agree about the crop being smaller than was expected. On spot values are firm at the figures quoted last week, viz., 33 1-2 to 34c. The market for syrup is dull, and values are more or less nominal at 13-4 to 2 1-4c. per lb. for Canadian in wood, and 18c. to 20c. per gallon for American.

TEAS

The tea market rules quiet, but there have been one or two round lots of Japans moved during the week at about former prices, which we quote as follows: Low grades, 13 to 14c.; good to common, 15 to 18 1-2c.; fine 19 to 21 1-2c., and finest 23 to 31c. Greens rule firm under a fair enquiry, and business in fair quantities of gunpowders has

FLOUR AND FEED.

TORONTO.

Flour market continues to rule dull, and there is so much wheat in sight that millers have not the heart to buy. Mill feed continues quiet and easy. Oats are higher.

FLOUR.—City millers' and dealers' prices are: Manitoba patents, $4.35 to $4.40; strong bakers' $3.80 to $4.10; white wheat patents, $3.50 to $4.00; straight roller, $3.15 to $3.30; low grades, per bag, $1.00 to $1.25; Ontario family $3.35 to $3.75.

Car prices are: Toronto freights—Manitoba patents, $4.25 to $4.40; Manitoba strong bakers' $3.85 to $4.10; Ontario patents, $3.25 to $3.50; straight roller, $3.00 to $3.20; extra, $2.70 to $2.85; low grades, per bag, $1.00 to $1.25.

MEAL.—Oatmeal is $4.00. to $4.20. Cornmeal is $3.25 to $3.50.

FEED.—Bran (ton lots) $15.50, do (on track) $14.50 to $15, shorts (ton lots) $16, ditto (on track) $15; mixed feed $20 to $22, feeding corn 57 to 58c., oats 33 to 34c.

HAY.—Baled timothy, demand is good and supply fair at $9.25 to $9.50.

STRAW.—Plentiful and demand limited, at $5.50 to $6.

MONTREAL.

The expectations of a recovery in prices of flour from the low level which they have occupied have not been fulfilled, for when it comes to the question of making a sale the actual basis is generally as low as ever. Winter wheat $4.00 to $4.25; spring patents $4.20 to $4.30; straight rollers $3.50 to $3.65; extra $3.10 to $3.25; superfine $2.60 to $2.90; city strong bakers' $4; strong bakers' $3.75 to $4.00.

transpired at 15 to 21c. Blacks have not furnished any business of importance and are steady at former rates.

Cables to importers here from Japan state, as we have intimated before, that the new crop will open much later than expected. In fact, instead of the market opening the first week in April, it will be fully the first week in May, and the quantity to be offered is expected to be about the same as last year.

COFFEES AND SPICES.

The market here continues steady, despite the unsettled feeling elsewhere, and some business has transpired during the week. Sales of Maracaibo have been made here at 20 1-2 to 22c., and Rio has changed hands at 19 1-2c. We quote Jamaica, 19 to 20c.; Maracaibo, 21 1-2 to 22c.; Rio, 19 to 21c.; Java, 24 to 27c.; and Mocha, 25 to 28c., these prices being for strict wholesale lots.

Advices from New York, however, to brokers here state that the market there is in a very unsettled condition owing to the failure of a large coffee firm who have branches in several European cities.

Spices continue firm, business transpiring of moderate dimensions at the prices given by us last week. We quote: Black pepper, 8 to 9c.; Pimento, 6 1-2c.; nutmegs, 50 to 52 1-2c. to $1.

RICE.

There is no change in rice, a fairly good business moving, the sales, however, being generally of moderate quantities. We quote: Standard, $3.85; choice, $4; Japans, $4.25; Louisiana, $5.25, and Carolina, $7.50.

DRIED FRUIT

A moderate business has transpired in Valencia raisins during the week, sales of good common off-stalk being made at 4 to 4 1-4c., and of the cheap trash at low as 3 1-2c. We quote first Valencias at 4 1-2c., common 4 to 4 1-2c. There has been some small enquiry for layers, also a few round lots being turned over during the week at 5 7-8 to 6c. Currants are quiet, and there must be very little money in them at present prices, which rule at 5 to 5 1-2c.

GREEN FRUIT.

There is little doing either in oranges or lemons, as everyone in the trade is holding off for the big auction sales. The ice has not cleared out of the Cape Rouge narrows yet, and until it does the Charington can not come up. We quote oranges: Floridas, $4 to $4.50; California, $2.25 to $3; Messina, $2.50 to $2.75; Valencias, $5 to $5.50; blood oranges, $2.25 to $4. Lemons: Fancy, $2.75 to $3; and common to good, $1.50 to $2.

Strawberries are selling well at 25 to 30c. per box in lots of a dozen crates to jobbers.

Bananas are quiet, receipts being fair. First rule at $2.25, and seconds at $1.50 to $2, with common at 75c. to $1.25.

FISH.

The season is now fairly over for pickled fish, and prices are purely nominal. In fresh fish a few lots of B.C. salmon have arrived by express, and are selling at 18 to 20c. by the case. Haddock are quiet at 3 1-2 to 4c. per lb.

BEANS.

The market is quiet and steady at $1.60 to $1.65 for hand picked Western, with ordinary to good $1.25 to $1.50, and inferior stock $1. to $1.10.

HONEY

Buyers seem to be pretty well supplied and the market rules slow in consequence. Comb ranges from 9 to 13c., according to quality.

HOPS.

There is no further change in hops, but the market is as dull as ever. We quote good to choice 16 to 18c., medium 14 to 15c., and old hops 6 to 9c.

MAPLE PRODUCTS.

Syrup in the wood has been moving pretty freely at 5 1-2 to 6c., and in tins at 60 to 70c. Sugar is quiet at 6 1-2 to 8c.

ONIONS

The market is dull and firm, the supply on this market being nearly all in the hands of one firm. Yellows move at $3 to $3.50, and reds at $3 to $3.25.

POTATOES.

As we anticipated some time ago warmer weather brought freer receipts of potatoes, and the market rules lower in consequence. Early rose has sold at 82c., and a car load of choice changed hands the other day at 90c. Whites are quoted at 70 to 75c. per bag of 90 lbs., all these figures being quite a reduction on last week's prices.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market continues quiet, but holders of pork are somewhat firmer in their views, $21 being now the idea for Canada short cut. Smoked meats are in fair demand at steady prices. Canadian short cut, per bbl, $20.75 to $21; mess pork, Western, new, per bbl, $20.50 to $21; hams, city cured, per lb., 12 1-2 to 13 1-4c.; lard, Canadian, in pails, 12 1-2 to 13c.; bacon, per lb., 11 1-2 to 12 1-2c.; lard, com. refined, per lb., 10 1-2 to 11c.

EGGS.

There has been a fair demand for eggs during the week, and although the prices have eased off somewhat the decline is not so sharp as in former weeks. We quote 12c. the basis.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

The cheese market fails to present anything of interest. Some new stock has, it is said, been sold at country points, but the quantity is inconsiderable, and not reliable as any indication of what the position will be when the season has a genuine opening.

The butter market continues much the same. According to all accounts holders of held dairy stock are going to have a turn in their favor shortly. Some Americans are, it is understood, looking around this market to see what can be picked up cheaply, but as stocks are not large, holders are disposed to bide a bit especially as there will soon be some boats going down below, and there is a strong probability that buyers there will want some butter with keeping qualities, and the held dairy on spot is the only supply of this description available. There is only one large line, some 1,000 boxes Kamouraska, the remainder being made up of an aggregation of small lots. New dairy is arriving in moderate quantities and meets with a fair sale on local account at 22 to 23c. Some small parcels of new creamery are also received from time to time and disposed of principally to city grocers, but the price in these cases can hardly be quoted as a regular wholesale one. New townships dairy, 22 to 23c.; old creamery, 20 1-2 to 21c.; old dairy, 18 to 18 1-2c.

MONTREAL TRADE NOTES.

With the raw article at its present price sugar men figure that granulated made from it would cost on the inside 5 1-4 to 5 3-8c.

The fruit men are all impatiently waiting for the ice to get out of the Cape Rouge narrows so that the S.S. Charington and her fruit cargo can get through. Another fruit boat, the Freneoda, which has a cargo of 60,000 packages oranges and lemons, has been reported at Cape Ray.

Caverhill, Rose, Hughes & Co. are offering some special lines of pressed apples, in quarts this week. They also strongly recommend their Sterling corn.

Messrs. Wm. T. Costigan & Co. report several good sized orders for B.C. salmon for forward delivery at about 10c. inside of the ruling spot prices.

L. Chaput, Sons & Co. are busy on city orders. Mr. Geo. Frion says that their spring business in this connection has been fully up to the average.

C. P. Hebert & Co. say they have no reason to complain of their orders from the country, and that as soon as navigation opens they have a lot of goods to go forward.

Cable advices from Japan this week say opening of the market for the new crop will be fully a month late. Mr. Hughes, of Caverhill, Rose, Hughes & Co., says that all early drawing teas are very firmly held.

There is some hope of the canal opening on Monday, but the chance is considered slim by a good many. There are a lot of boat orders awaiting the event, and the lateness of the season is a serious grievance with many.

Mr. Lindsay, of Kimlock, Lindsay & Co., says that their travellers report the roads in an exceptionally wretched condition throughout the townships. He attributes a good deal of the backwardness of trade to this fact.

Grocers generally expected that the refiners here would advance the price of sugar another sixteenth of a cent on Tuesday, but the cable came citing a decline of 1 1-2d. in England, and this is presumed checked the idea for the time being.

Holders of molasses at the Islands are causing dealers in the article on this market a good deal of anxiety at present. They are quite willing to listen to bids, but show a decided disinclination about making a firm offer, and the amount of cabling that is going on is a caution.

Stewart, Munn & Co. have been receiving fair orders for their lines of boneless fish, cod, etc., from the west. The firm's varied and extensive exhibit for the World's Fair at Chicago went forward last week. It consisted of several tons weight of the lines of goods which they handle, such as the boneless fish mentioned above, liquid gine, etc., etc., quite a varied and instructive illustration of the resources of our Maritime Provinces and seacoasts.

NEVER SELL TO DRY GOODS HOUSES.

TORONTO, April 19th, 1893.

DEAR GROCER,—In your last issue there is a report of what took place at the last meeting of the Retail Grocers' Association, and we notice that the question was asked by one worthy member of the Association whether or not the manufacturers of Morse's Mottled sold this brand of soap to dry goods houses, to which no person appeared to be able to reply. We beg to say emphatically that we do not and have never sold this specialty of ours to any but the legitimate trade, in which we cannot include dry goods houses in this connection.

Yours respectfully,
JOHN TAYLOR & CO.,

ANSWER TO CORRESPONDENTS.

DEAR GROCER,—Do you know if their are any practical works in pork-packing printed? If you know of any could you tell me where it could be procured. If you would answer the above through THE GROCER, you would greatly obliged.

A SUBSCRIBER.

[There does not appear to be any work published on pork-packing. Packers spoken to regarding the matter say that the best information regarding pork-packing is to be obtained from Cincinnati Prices Current, subscription price $5 a year.—ED. GROCER.]

NIXEY'S BLACK LEAD.

The following is a brief description of the exhibit of W. G. Nixey, Black Lead Manufacturer, 12 Soho Square, London, England at the World's Fair. In E. department, group No. 24, position 25, corner of gangway, space occupied 6 feet square, a handsome black case polished completely with Nixey's celebrated black lead, surrounded by an iron rail, coated with Nixey's eggshell enamel Berlin black. The case is surmounted with the Royal Arms of the British Empire, the contents being as follows: At the base we notice Nixey's fraud detecting money tills, celebrated throughout the world, at various prices from 10s. 6d. to 36s. 6d. Specimens at the raw material in the refined condition of Nixey's black lead are shown in tasteful trays of Coalport China, also the material for Nixey's Soho square blue and Nixey's carvers' knife polish. On coming to the trophy the visitor will observe tier above tier, in the following order, specimen packages of Messrs Nixey's household commodities in their well known labels. "Nixey's Carvers' Knife Polish," celebrated for its complete and perfect knife polishing powers and freedom from the usual irritation found in other productions so that it does not wear the blades like others. "Nixey's Carvers' Emery Flour," unequalled for cleaning and polishing brass, steel and metal work, equal to new. "Nixey's Soho Square Washing Blue," the most economical, purest and best; only half the usual quantity required. "Nixey's Silver Moonlight Plumbago Stove Polish" for surpassing all other light silvery plumbago polishes, surmounted by the world renowned Nixey's celebrated refined black lead, a deep lasting black polish of unrivalled brilliancy with a bust of the inventor and patentee polished with Nixey's refined black lead. Highest awards having been secured at all the recent exhibitions where shown.

BOOKKEEPING IN THE ROUGH.

Among the many odd modes of book-keeping which have come under my observation—not excepting that of the tavern keeper who kept his accounts on the plastered walls of the room and who while absent was well-nigh bankrupted by his wife with a white-wash brush—that of my old colored friend, Uncle Cephas' struck me as the most original.

The old man, like many of his race, had mortgaged steer, cart and other pitiful belongings to buy the necessities of life. Pay day came. The account was so much larger than he expected—being indeed hopelessly beyond his slender resources—that he disputed its accuracy most vigorously in true African eloquence, of which he was a master.

But all was without avail. The merchant, his creditor, only replied that he relied on his books, Uncle Cephas on his head, and that when it came to a question of ink against memory, the ink must carry it.

The old man affirmed that he kept books too, and that they would prove him right. The merchant asked him to produce them. The crowd which had been collected by the loud dispute tittered, for Uncle Cephas was illiteracy itself.

Nothing daunted, the old man muttered something about fetching them in the cart, climbed into that vehicle and drove off. A little later he again hove in sight, surrounded by much plunder. Aware of his oddities, the crowd was on tiptoe to see the denouement.

"Mr. Chisel," he said, addressing the merchant, as with great deliberation he proceeded to unload, "here's my books. Dese three barrels shows how much heaben dust [flour] I's had; dese corn-cob stoppers tells how many jugs er 'lasses I's toted away; dese paper strings says how many times you's wrapped up sugar an' cawfee for me; an' as to how many sides er Baltimore [bacon] I's hauled home, jes' come an' count de greasy spots in my ole cyart bottom wid yo' own eyes. Dey all tells de trufe. I's pertic'lar 'bout my books as you is 'bout yone."

By that time the merchant's bookkeeper had discovered that goods bought by a different person of similar name had been, by mistake, charged to the old man, and that Uncle Cephas's account was the right one. But to this day the latter believes that his own unerring system of bookkeeping saved him, and he still follows it more assiduously than ever.—Kate Field's Washington.

GENERAL STORE KEEPERS SAFE.

There was a hot debate in the Local Legislature Monday on the bill to amend the Pharmacy Act. The feeling against the bill ran high, and but for the joint efforts of the leaders on both sides of the House it would not have been given a second reading. The promoter of the bill, Mr. McKay, of Oxford, assured the House that the objectionable features, namely, the attempt to prohibit the sale of patent medicines by general storekeepers, had been expunged. Notwithstanding this reassuring intimation the majority of the House was evidently prepared to throw out the measure. There are several clauses whose meaning cannot be grasped easily by laymen. For instance, certain poisons and their products are to be scheduled, but these products include disinfectants, and perhaps many articles in household use. This partly explains why the opposition is persisted in—notwithstanding the attempts to meet it. The bill was referred to a special committee, and if it passes the House in any shape, which is doubtful, it will first be very much modified.

SUGAR CANE IN THE SOUTH.

A cheerful view of cane prospects in Louisiana is published by the Planter as follows: "The winter of 1892-3 was cooler than the average. This prevented the sprouting of the early cut cane stubbles in the autumn, and under ordinary circumstances would give us a better ratoon crop this year. The cool weather has, however, continued until within the last few days, and fears have been expressed in some quarters that the stubble cane crop might turn out less good than was expected. Every examination of the stubble shows them to be sound, and only awaiting warmer weather for active germination. Cane stubbles in the black lands, which are warmer owing to their color, are already making a splendid show, fully up to ordinary seasons, indicating the beneficial effect of the cool weather last fall on their preservation. It is sandy land stubbles alone that seem so backward, and with the warm weather now prevailing, and which it is fair to expect will continue from this on, these canes will rapidly make a good showing, and we can certainly assure ourselves of better crop conditions in our fields than an average. The seed cane during the planting season was reported very good in almost every direction, and the plant cane crop now is reported as showing up finely in all quarters, and from present appearances the cane crop of 1893 will give a material increase in yield over that of 1892.

CRITIQUES ISSUE APRIL 21.

We have been busy all week trying to buy granulated sugar at the GROCER'S quotation of 47-Sc. (Our young friend has been reading the Montreal market report for that of Toronto.—Ed. GROCER.)

Yes, when you strike a Patron of Industry of the peddling type you have in hand one of the meanest and most miserable of human beings. The best element in the society has joined it for the purpose of bettering the general status of the farmer, and does not take any stock in the skin-a-flea policy.

We are waiting for that smart Alic of a traveller who mixes your teas gratis to give us a call. A very casual thought or two will show up the utter absurdity of any man being able to do such a thing, and keep up his regular business as well.

Starch having gone up it now behooves the retailer to give up low prices and be sensible. If starch is up one cent per pound, it should be worth the difference to the consumer.

Speaking of eggs and the satisfactory-ness or reverse of their shipment to the Old Land, reminds one that last year was the very worst, both as regards quality and size, which the Toronto grocers have ever had. Such a thing as giving satisfaction was always out of the question. Whether the best stock went to the Old Land, or none was to be had we say not, but here may be found the reason for the grumbling heard anent Old Land returns for consignments.

The new scheme for burglar protection reminds us of young Stern's scheme of five years ago. Much the same procedure was followed, but the poor fellow had not enough money to make it successful. Most of us invested forty or fifty dollars though before finding this interesting fact out.

The article on English weights and measures makes us think that a well balanced English salesman must be very well informed to be entirely useful. By the way, the hay becomes old after September 1st, and the 8-lb. stone only refers to one market in London. In one place in Scotland a stone of meat was 17 1-2 pounds. Many curious facts could be brought to light by a discussion on these curious usages.

That knowledge of "how to talk" is most essential to a clerk, we have in our eye a couple of clerks who do not talk at all, let alone talk enough. The consequence is that the only time you hear them saying half a dozen words together is when they are alone and getting off a yarn. Customers buy best when they have not time to think. Do not overdo it, but keep up a nice steady conversation when selling goods, and success will surely follow. There are people with whom this rule will not work. It is important then to know also when to shut up.

The man who wrote that article on "Tobacco" does not understand the beautifully moulded businesslike principles which animate the average Toronto tobaccoist. They certainly cannot be held up as patterns to anyone. Meanwhile let grocers who sell tobaccos profit by the criticisms regarding cleanliness.

Rice does not depress much in price hereabouts.

Our experience of displaying show tickets and prices is satisfactory. Care should always be taken to avoid apparent conflict with your neighbors, there being enough variety possible to obviate such opposition.

Valencia raisins are apparently firmer. There are quite a few retailers who would like to dispose of a surplus hundred boxes or so if occasion should offer.

Maple sugar items remind us that we were urged to write the daily press anent certain overstatements which recently appeared regarding maple products and their questionable purity. These sort of exaggerations always correct themselves. The only necessary comment is this: People, if they expect pure goods, must pay for them. This constant striving after cheap goods means deterioration in quality. Most of the reputable grocers in town pay whatever is asked for maple sugar and syrup and honey, leaving the price open, so as to give the producer every chance to do the fair thing.

STRAIGHT MOYUNE.

CANNED GOODS GOSSIP.

General dullness in trade has led to a slight shading of prices by some holders of 3-lb. canned tomatoes on the New York market, but the majority stand out firmly for $1.15 upward.

Gallon canned apples, New York State pack, were sold from second hands at $2.50 per dozen. Doubtless this was an exceptional trade, yet a fair illustration of what has to be done when goods are forced for sale.—N.Y. Bulletin.

Sales agents of a well-known "outside" brand of Alaska salmon report having bids of $1 f.o.t. San Francisco, and $1.10 delivered in the East, for prime red fish, 1893 season pack. "Combine" prices have not yet been announced. The "outsiders" are willing to sell at $1.05 and $1.12 1-2 respectively.

There has been commendable effort lately in the direction of stiffening prices for canned fruit, but weak spots may yet be discovered. For example, several thousand cases of standard California peaches were sold a few days ago at $1.55 per dozen on the spot. The popular quotations are $1.65 to $1.70 for Crawfords and $1.75 to $1.80 for lemon clings.—N.Y. Bulletin.

It is a trifle easier to buy red Alaska salmon at $1.15 on the spot in wholesale quantities. Recent arrivals by sail vessel afford a fair supply.

Since the middle of last month numerous lines of standard California canned apricots, peaches and pears have been worked off at very low prices. For example, apricots went at $1.30 to $1.35 per dozen, peaches at $1.55 for Crawfords and $1.65 for lemon clings, and pears at $1.65 to $1.70. Holders of Eastern canned fruit stood out against this competition for a time, but learning that the stock of Pacific Coast fruit on the spot and in transit was heavy enough to be burdensome, and that the prospects for improvement were not particularly brilliant, some owners of Delaware and Maryland stock quietly dropped their prices 10 to 20c. per dozen to facilitate business. In Baltimore, where the holdings are heaviest, there has been a reduction of 95c. for 2-lb. standards, $1.35 to $1.40 for 3-lb. standards, $1.85 for 3-lb. extras, 80c. for 2-lb. seconds, 90c. for 3-lb. pie-stock, unpeeled, $1.80 for 6-lb. do., and $3 for gallons. At the prices named the respective lines of goods appear cheap enough to arouse more than passing attention among careful buyers, particularly those who incline to the opinion that staple groceries are a safe purchase when they may be secured at prices a good margin under the average cost to the canner. Enough cheap California stock has thus been taken up to tone the market a little; in other words, enough to move prices about 5 to 10c. per dozen above the extreme lowest prices at which sacrifice sales were made. The statement is going the rounds that heavy shipments from New York to Western points are soon to be made by rail and water routes, the rates on which are low, and that the burden of largely excessive supplies will thereby be considerably brightened. Low prices have undoubtedly helped the movement of goods into the final channels of distribution to some extent also. The present situation is not as bright as might be expected, since speculative interest is extremely languid, but, taken as a whole, the market has improved in tone during the past fortnight, and all signs are very much at fault if a good business is not affected before the new season, providing prices are kept at about the present level. Certain it is that fruits are the cheapest thing on the canned goods list, and by no means unpopular among consumers of a wide variety of canned fruit products.—N.Y. Bulletin.

Michie & Co., grocers, are going to enlarge their premises in King street west, Toronto. They will be extended through to Colborne street, and the front of the building will be of pressed brick and with case-ment, four stories high.

The secretary of the Toronto Board of Trade received a communication yesterday from the general manager of the Grand Trunk Railway, intimating that on and after the 14th of May, trains would be run from Toronto to Buffalo and back in connection with the New York Central connections, arriving at Buffalo at 11.50 a. m., and leaving same place at 6.30 p. m.

WHEATEN FLOUR.

The roller milling method of manufacturing wheaten flour, which is displacing the older stone process, has certain disadvantages as compared with the latter. In the first place, the separated bran flour contains much gluten, but being of inferior quality it cannot be mixed with the "straight grade" flour. Again, as the germ is merely flattened during grinding only a very minute portion of it gets into the finished flour. In this way the purest product is deprived of a portion of those substances on which its flavor and baking qualities depend. Another point is that the period of maturing—between grinding and dressing—which it is customary to allow in the case of stone flour, contributes distinctly to the superiority of the former. The present invention is intended to overcome these faults, and at the same time avoid the troublesome and expensive process of manufacturing the bulk of the flour. It consists in separating at an early stage of the manufacture the germs and products rich in gluten (bran flour) either together or separately and "ageing" the same. For this purpose flour is added, and in order to hasten the extraction of the oil and flavoring matter from the germs the mixture may be heated, but not above 158 degrees F. The mixture is afterwards packed into sacks and allowed to cool and mature. The "aged" product is finally carefully dressed and purified and mixed with "straight grade" flour in order to improve the same. It is claimed that by this process that it is necessary to store only 5 to 10 per cent. of the output of a mill to improve the whole product practically to the same extent as it was improved under the old process by the storage of the whole product.

The American Agriculturist has compiled (a statement from official and other sources showing the supply of hogs in America during the past thirty-three years. It shows that from a total of 33,512,877 hogs throughout the country in 1860 the aggregate fell to 25,134,569 in 1870, advanced to 47,681,700 in 1880, to 51,602,780 in 1890, and to 52,308,092 in 1892, since which time there has been, according to the report, a considerable falling off, the total given for this year being only 46,094,097, which is less than the reported supply in 1880, thirteen years ago, or about 11 per cent. less than last year, and 10 per cent. less than 1890.

A big sale of hams and long clear bacon was closed on Wednesday. It consisted of some twenty cars all told. The consideration was 10 to 10¼c. for the long clear and 11¼ to 11½c. for the hams, out of pickle. The hams are known to be for export, and the bacon is supposed to be, or at least part of it. The purchase was made by Hamilton and Ingersoll firms, who are said to be attempting to corner the market.

CHAPTER IN LIMA BEANS.

There has been some decline lately in price of dried California lima beans. Spot goods as noted a day or two ago, were sold at as low as $2.10 per bushel here, and there seems to be a few more left for which that price would be acceptable. The offerings are by no means heavy, however, and the moderate decline in prices would appear to be due chiefly to the effect of the dull condition of general trade upon some small holders, and a little pressure from quarters in which a sort of spirit of antagonism to the bull clique has been displayed at intervals of late. Thus far it does not transpire that the clique or any close friends have manifested uneasiness regarding the present situation or the outlook for the immediate future. To the contrary, they express complete confidence in the general situation, on the strength of data regarding visible supply and information on stocks at various points. The fact is not to be overlooked that self interest prompts diplomacy in the matter of giving information as to the amount of any class of goods that a merchant has on hand. Some allowance for the statements coming from jobbers, and the results of enquiries made elsewhere, with a view to getting at the true situation, is, therefore, in place. The latest facts brought to the surface indicate supplies at Western distributive points are below rather than above the normal amount. Hardly as broad a statement is volunteered regarding the stock in New York City, but most accounts go to show that the supply at other Eastern points is moderate. As for the situation in California, or the primary source of supply, reports are uniformly to the effect that comparatively few beans remain there. The quantity afloat is estimated at 60,000 bags, fully one-half of which is understood to be under syndicate control, and 50 per cent. of the balance already sold. Surface appearances are that, with several months for outlet still open, the position is not without encouraging features, and that competition from competing goods or falling off in the consumption are about the only possible obstacles in the way of steady or better prices. Still, like most lines of merchandise in the grocery trade, beans are momentarily difficult to sell in large quantities.—N.Y. Bulletin.

The upward tendency that has characterized the rice market during the past three years is thought to have completed its cycle. The new crop is due to arrive on this market about June 1, and prices for it are expected to rule something like $\frac{1}{4}$ c. a pound lower than at present. In contradistinction to the tendency regarding tea, we are gradually taking less and less of Indian rice and turning more attention to that grown in Japan, Java and South America, particularly the first named. By the transformation each year of additional valleys into rice fields Japan is gradually forcing its way to the front as a rice producing country. In 1891 the amount exported to the different European and American countries amounted to nearly two million piculs or something like 270,000,000 pounds, valued at 6,213,883 yen. Strange to say, Japan imports as well as exports large quantities of rice, the former in 1891 being something like three hundred thousand piculs within the latter. But the values of the imported article was over 2 $\frac{1}{4}$ million yens is less than that exported, clearly showing that what they buy for home consumption is inferior in quality to that which they sell. The principal countries on which Japan draws for supplies are Corea, East Indies, and China. In 1891 Canada took over 3 $\frac{1}{2}$ million pounds of Japan rice. England was by far her best customer, while the United States and Germany came respectfully second and third.

The bounty system for the production of sugar obtaining in the United States, and which was inaugurated to balance up things for removing the duty on sugar, seem to have given quite a stimulus to the industry. At any rate the production, according to carefully prepared estimates, largely increased during the past fiscal year; and it was shared in by all the different kinds of sugar with one exception. Cane sugar increased from 364,820,411 pounds in 1892 to 450,000,000 pounds in 1893, beet sugar from 12,004,838 to 27,083,322 pounds, maple sugar from 144,882 to 3,200,000 pounds. The exception referred to was sorghum sugar, the production of which fell from 1,136,086 pounds in 1892 to 986,900 in 1893. The amounts paid in bounties during the present fiscal year are already in the neighborhood of 8 $\frac{1}{2}$ million dollars and the total amount will exceed nine millions. The big increase in the production of beet sugar has been principally in California, where the production was 8,175,438 pounds in 1892 and stands for this year at 21,801,322 pounds. For the coming season prospects are for a still larger production. A peculiarity to be noted is that, in spite of the bounty, there has been no increase in the number of producers of either beet or cane. In fact the applications for licenses for the production of cane sugar were four less than in 1892, and of the total 650,617 were applied for from Louisiana. There is a feeling of unrest among the producers at the moment owing to the uncertainty as to whether or no the Cleveland Administration will continue the payment of the bounty, and this has deterred capitalists from embarking in new enterprises. In fact a Washington despatch a few days ago said that a plan had already been laid before President Cleveland which would stop payment for sugar bounties and hold the amount in the Treasury until a decision could be obtained from the Supreme Court upon the validity of the bounty law.

The more prosperous the farmer the more prosperous the merchant; and it is evident that the desideratum in the first instance is secured by increasing the earning power of the farm. There was a time, and not long ago, when the farmer grew little else but grain. A few adverse seasons and the increase in the number of competitors in the consuming markets led him to diversify his methods. Mixed farming is now recognized as necessary to success, and among the different sources from which revenue is derived the products of the dairy occupy an important place. The possibilities in this direction are great, and this fortunately is gradually becoming more recognized. To ensure a steady demand for butter, particularly for the export trade, it is necessary to have uniformity, and to obtain the latter an extension of the creamery system is imperative. The merchants of the country have it within their power to materially help in the premises, both directly and indirectly. Indirectly by urging the farmers to go in for creameries, cheese factories, etc. Point out to them whenever opportune the results that have been obtained where creameries have been established. A good point to begin at would be the wives and daughters of our farmers. They are the ones upon whom usually fall the brunt and burden of dairy work. Get these interested and enlisted in the cause of creameries and the husbands and fathers will eventually be brought into line.

An idea of the value of a creamery to the district in which it is situated may be gathered from the results obtained last season from the one at Ayton. This creamery, Mr. Isaac Wenger informs us, paid out last season to its patrons over $31,500. This was divided among 325 patrons, netting them about $97 each. The herds in the neighborhood of Ayton are small, averaging less than five cows, from which the farmers drew their supply for family use besides what they sold to the creamery. The average per cow is placed by Mr. Wenger at $21. "This I believe," he adds, "to be as high an average as any cream-gathering creamery can show, but it is not as high as it could or should be. Some of the patrons made their herds average about $37 per cow. To this should be added value of skim milk retained by the farmer for feeding purposes." A noteworthy fact in connection with the matter under review is that the money is distributed among the farmers at a season when their sources of receipts are limited. The result to the storekeeper is obvious.

To know how to buy and how to sell are essentials to success. And if either is of more value than the other, it is the buying quality. The keenness of competition makes it such. Unless a man is able to buy right he cannot exist for a great while. His keener and more wide-awake competitors will soon crowd him to the wall. It is a case of the survival of the fittest all along the line, and to keep in the conflict you must be as well armed as your adversary. To be a poor buyer is to be poorly armed. The man who knows what to buy and how to buy has one supreme advantage; he can hold out better inducements to his customers. Three things are necessary to right buying—a knowledge of the goods, an acquaintance with the peculiarities of his customers and capital. The merchant who possesses the first essential knows a good thing when he sees it. He cannot be well deceived, and consequently he is in a position to recommend his goods. An acquaintance with the peculiarities of his customers is a valuable qualification, for not only does it assist in the direction of gaining the approval of his patrons, but it makes less possible the accumulation of undesirable and old stock. The importance of capital all realize. With capital at his command he can buy in larger quantities and cheaper, and from his discounts he usually gets enough to pay at least his rent. Thrice armed is he for the battles of business who possesses these qualifications. He may have relentless competitors to oppose him, but he will make business a success in the long run, sure.

THE SOAKED PEA CASES.

The "nine-day" subject matter for talk by the local trade has been the soaked pea cases. Everybody extends more or less sympathy toward the retailers whose want of sufficient knowledge or forethought caused them to antagonize the law, while there is a corresponding unanimity in condemning the canner or canners who put up the goods. Even the Court, in imposing the nominal fine of $2, went out of its way to express regret that, in order to get at the real offenders, it was necessary to score the innocent.

The actions were taken under an Ontario Act passed in 1886. Prior to that unscrupulous canners had placed such large quantities of the soaked article on this market as to utterly demoralize it. This goaded the Ontario Canners' Association to seek the assistance of the Provincial Legislature to protect both their own interests and the public's good. The result was the legislative enactment that went into force July 20, 1886. This measure does not prohibit the canning of soaked peas. Briefly speaking what it decrees is that when such commodity is placed on the market each can shall be labelled, in large letters, with the word "soaked," and shall also contain the name of the packer. The penalty clause reads:

Every person who sells or offers for sale any such goods in violation of any provision of this section shall, on a summary conviction before a justice of the peace, for a first offence incur a penalty of two dollars for each such package, and for a subsequent offence a penalty not exceeding twenty dollars and not less than four dollars for each such package in respect of which any such provision has been violated.

THE GROCER has more than once within the last few months announced that soaked peas were being placed on this market contrary to law. When the Ontario Canners' Association became cognizant of what was going on it as soon as possible took steps to enforce the law; and the cases investigated a few days ago at the Police Court are believed to be the direct result of these deliberations. The last of the matter has not been heard yet, and it is likely that before many days information will "be laid against the party of the first part." Who, has not been officially announced. The hand of the law does not usually point out its victim until he is well in its grasp. But it is hinted pretty strongly that the transgressor is a western packer. Whoever he may be he deserves little or no mercy. There are misdemeanors that are sometimes the result of ignorance or carelessness. In this instance neither plea can be advanced. It was plainly a deliberate attempt to defraud the consumer through the medium of conniving storekeepers or storekeepers ignorant of the law. In this instance the latter seems to have been the medium. This is emphasized by the price paid by the retailers for the goods, namely 75 cents a dozen, while those who examined their contents say they were the worst kind of soaked peas, being about two-thirds water, and dirty looking water at that.

No great opposition can be made to soaked peas being placed on the market. They are not detrimental to the public health. If they were it would be different. The province of the law is to see that if the people pay for bread that they do not get a stone. Canned peas and soaked peas, as every grocer knows, are almost as different from each other as chalk is from cheese. In the one instance the peas are taken green from the pod and placed in the cans. These retain their natural flavor. In the other instance the peas are usually purchased from the farmers at so much per bushel after they have been threshed. They are then steamed till soft, after which they are placed in cans and watered. The Ontario Canners' Association is well within the bounds of reason when it demands that soaked peas shall be plainly designated as such when placed on the market. Aside altogether from the public weal the members of the Association have their own immediate interests to protect. The canning industry of this country has by no means yet reached its maturity. That it is progressing well in that direction is generally recognized, but it cannot afford to have obstacles thrown in its way. Soaked peas palmed off on the public as canned peas is doubtless an obstacle, and one too that has no reason for existence. Soaked peas on the market not designated as such is an obstacle in a double sense. In the first place every can so bought by the consumer takes the place of the legitimate article, and in the second place should the purchaser be one who is for the first time trying canned peas there is a chance of his never attempting it again, not knowing that the spurious has been sold to him instead of the real.

Hard as it is that innocent storekeepers should be taxed $2 each for the sins of others, yet the lesson conveyed, if digested, is perhaps not dearly bought after all at that figure. The lesson is two-fold, and is: Keep posted on what is going on in trade circles and deal with none but reputable houses.

A WELL APPOINTED GROCERY.

Attention to business and the adoption of live and modern methods ensure success. The case of Kelly Bros., grocers, Queen and Mutual streets, Toronto, may be cited as an instance. They opened up in their present premises about three years ago. Other grocers had been there before them, but they apparently did not meet with at least more than an ordinary amount of success. But from the day Kelly Bros. took possession there was a change. The windows were always attractively dressed, and a live business air gathered around the premises. Soon the accommodation became inadequate, and it was decided to enlarge the premises. The alterations began some weeks ago and they are now nearly completed. The store has been enlarged one-third and refitted throughout. New counters with oak tops have been put in, while ranging along on either side and reaching to the ceiling are new shelves stained in cherry. These shelves are embellished by two large mirrors, one on either side, about midway down the store. They have also put in a large new marble-top butter counter, coffee mill and desk, improved scales, Eddy's paper rolls on stands, etc. A new ware-room has been built in rear of the store and an entrance made into Mutual street through which goods can be brought in or sent out, instead of having to be taken through the store as heretofore. The facilities for reaching the storerooms have also been increased. Kelly Bros. have now one of the best appointed grocery stores in the city, and are to be congratulated upon their enterprise and success.

MAPLE SUGAR VERY SHORT.

Consumers of maple sugar in Montreal complain bitterly that the amount of adulteration this spring in the article is very much greater than during any previous spring. The main reasons for this have been the backwardness of the season owing to unfavorable weather, and the strong temptation that exists to turn over ordinary refined cane sugar, which costs only 4 1-2 to 5c., mixed up with maple stock, which commands a rate of 7 to 8c. This fact, from the frequent number of complaints that are made, is too strong a temptation for some of the more unscrupulous makers to resist. The result of all this is that really choice high grade new maple sugar is a very scarce article this spring. The maple sugar crop in the province of Quebec has thus far proved an extremely short one, and, now that the season is so far advanced, there is no likelihood of the shortage being made up. A good many farmers who tapped their sugar groves during the few warm days of March had their labor for nothing, as freezing weather followed. From many points in the Eastern Townships, where the industry is practised in its perfection, it is said that the output will hardly be half of some former years. Advices from Swanton, one of the chief maple sugar centres in Vermont, cite the same conditions, so that our makers are not the only sufferers.

CHATS WITH BUSINESS MEN.

"If you want to get a good trout stream," said a commercial traveller who can catch a fish as adeptly as he can a customer, "just go up the Coldwater stream about six miles above the village and I'll bet you'll be good for a ten-pound catch in an afternoon. I know what it is like, for I have been there myself. O, they are beauties, as firm as a rock, and—don't I wish I was there now," he added, going through the motions of throwing a fly and hooking a fish.

Joseph H. Devaney, with Eby, Blain & Co., is a great admirer of Midland. Saturday last I fell into a conversation with him regarding the town. "Navigation is open there," he replied to a query of mine, "and prospects look pretty good. One Canadian vessel was loading there when I was there this week, four or five large tugs have left port and several large vessels are expected there forthwith. Midland has got the best and deepest harbor in Canada," he continued, as he began to enthuse marking out the contour of the harbor with his index finger upon the palm of his hand. "Midland is looking bright this spring, I can tell you. Of course the lumber interests are gone, but they have a fair farming country around them. What the people are now looking principally to, however, is their waterway, and they expect to reap some benefit from the World's Fair traffic. The Government, you know, has been spending large sums of money in improving the harbor, and this year another grant of $10,000 has been made. They have now got a beautiful esplanade; as fine as you'd want to see. There's no mistake about it. It's had a hard time of it for some years, and it deserves a change."

"O, well," I overheard a well-known retailer say the other day, "it is not, to my mind, so hard to buy now as it used to be. And that is because there is not so much cutting among the wholesalers. Taken on the whole I think they maintain prices, fairly well, don't you?" I didn't hear the answer.

I got into a brief conversation a few days ago with a well-known apple exporter. "We have been hit pretty hard this season, I can tell you," said he as he backed up against a box of oranges and caught his heel in a projection. "One man down east is out $25,000 and there is a firm in this city that stands to lose $10,000. Then there is So-and-So up west who has had even his household furniture seized and sold by the bailiff. Well, he is a good deal responsible for what has happened to himself. Last year he bought up a lot of orchards, more in fact than he could handle, and sent out men to pack the fruit who had never packed an apple in their lives. You know apples intended for England must above all things be properly packed. A want of proper attention in this particular is responsible for much of the loss this season. How will I come out? Well I can't say yet. I'm not out of the woods. So far I am about even, but I have enough on the way to England now that stands to lose me all I made last year. Last year, you'll remember, was a pretty good one for us. We had practically no falling market to contend against, it being in the ascendancy about all the time. O, well, I suppose that is the way of the world," he consoling added as he thrust his hands into his trousers pockets, turned on his heel and walked off.

BYSTANDER.

ASSOCIATION TALK.

The Hartlepool Grocers' Association is considering the question of starting a register book or black list.

The Retail Grocers' Association of Chicago is considering the advisability of holding a retail merchants' convention in that city, at some specified time during the World's Fair.

At a recent meeting of the Bristol Provision Trade Association this motion was adopted: "Cheese made in the French Section of Canada may not be tendered in fulfilment of a contract for 'Finest Canadian Cheese'; the seller is entitled to deliver cheese made in any part of Canada other than the French Section. But this Association having been assured by the Montreal Board of Trade, and by individual skippers, that cheese made in the French Section has greatly improved during the last few years, and that many factories now compare favorably with the best Canadian Cheese, recommends Canadian skippers, when offering these special factories, to describe them as 'Cheese made in the French Section of Canada—but equal in all respects to the Finest Canadian.'"

The Toronto Retail Grocers' Association will meet in its new hall (Oddfellows' building), Yonge and College streets, Monday evening next at 8 o'clock. The committee appointed to arrange an entertainment for the occasion have been unable to carry out instructions, and so the meeting will be of the usual business character; but that in itself should be a sufficient inducement for a large turn out of members.

The Iowa Wholesale Grocers' Association at its last meeting agreed upon a schedule of prices of all staples and entered into an agreement not to cut prices. A committee was appointed to confer with the wholesale grocers in Iowa, not in the association, and in Omaha, Sioux Falls, and in towns contiguous thereto, and in competition with the Iowa grocers, to come into the association and stand by the schedule of prices agreed upon.

The grocerymen of Burlington, Vt., are agitating the question of abolishing the credit system in their business. They claim that they lost altogether, upward of $7,000 last year through poor debts. They say that they can sell goods cheaper for cash and that it would be better for every one except the dead beat.

TORONTO'S SHOP FRONTS.

It is said that the City of Toronto has as great an extent of shop fronts as the cities of Buffalo, Detroit and Rochester combined. Toronto is said to have 27 miles of shop fronts, while Buffalo has only 13 miles. Circumstances are at work in Toronto which will probably transform the character of some of the principal thoroughfares, such as King and Yonge streets. On these streets there are a large number of small shops which it is believed will before many years revert to residence purposes. Two principal causes are at work tending to bring about this change. One is the introduction of rapid electric street railway transit, by means of which residents in the outlying districts of the city can be transported to the business centre within an interval of a few minutes. These facilities for dealing at the larger downtown establishments is likely to be taken advantage of to the detriment of the smaller business concerns on the less important thoroughfares. The second cause is the recent development of a few large establishments where goods of almost every class are sold under one roof. These concerns will certainly wipe out of existence a very large number of the smaller stores. It is estimated that one such establishment already in existence in Toronto is doing the trade which formerly was divided amongst 500 small stores. These changes most seriously affect the value of a large amount of property now used for business purposes.—Canadian Architect.

SUGAR PRODUCTION IN FRANCE.

In the matter of the French sugar production, according to an official report just published, during the season 1891 and 1892 there were 49 sugar mills at work in the Pas-de-Calais, or one less than in the previous year. The Annuaire states that in spite of a larger extent of land having been planted with beet, the weight of beetroot sent to the mills was only 527,712,040 kilos, or 146,835,840 kilos less than during the previous year. It attributes this deficiency partly to the unfavorable summer of 1891 and partly to the seed used; the roots were small and fibrous, but of considerable saccharine richness. The yield of sugar should prove fairly favorable. It appears it will reach an average of 9.77 kilos per 100 kilos of beetroot, instead of 9.43 in 1890-91. When the remarks of the Annuaire were written it says 50,542,969 kilos of refined sugar had been brought to book, of which 40,790,913 kilos represented the minimum legal yield, and 9,752,056 kilos the excess. Of these last 44,939 kilos are subject to the full duty, as having been obtained in excess of the maximum of 10.54 per cent.; the remainder, or 9,707,117 kilos, are only liable to the reduced duty. In fine the rate of excess shows an increase of 6.19 per cent. (23.91 per cent. instead of 17.72 per cent) as compared with the previous period.

JAMAICA'S PRODUCTS.

Dr. Trilmen declared before the British Association that "no other British colony possesses so complete a system of botanical and experimental gardens as Ceylon." Who has not sung of its spicy breezes? Yet much nearer our shores is a miniature, or, possibly, an embryo Ceylon. Jamaica has its botanical department in efficient working order, and this does not confine itself to botanical work alone, but is advancing the agricultural interests of the colony, and developing its resources in addition.

Judging from the bulletin issued in January by the Director of Public Gardens and Plantations, the department is carrying on a work of a very thorough nature in its supervision of six different experimental gardens. The report of the botanical work proper has little beyond a local interest, but the references to regular cultivation and the statistics connected therewith form an interesting and valuable record. The production of cocoa is advancing slowly.

Of cocoanuts 7,885,656 were exported, of which the value was £26,512 16s. 9d. The export was greater during 1891-92 than during any year for the past ten years in spite of the great mortality among trees at Montego Bay. 86,926 cwt. of coffee were shipped, bringing £336,839 18s. Here, too, the prospect is good. Of bananas 3,503,275 bunches valued at £262,745 12s. 6d. were exported. This is nearly £20,000,000 less than last year, and is accounted for by short crops owing to drought, and the large local fruit crop in America. Of other fruit mangoes brought £203 2s. 6d., oranges £23,263 15s., pineapples £1,286 15s. 2d., limes £361 1s. 6d., strawberries £3,607 2s. 3d.; lime juice alone was exported to the value of £4,865 4s. 2d. Among other exports are ebony, fustic, ginger (£40,682), lancewood spars, lignum-vitea, log-wood (£303,364), nutmegs (£23,264), plimento (£50,984), rum (£256,000), sugar (£255,500), tobacco and cigars (£9,430), and jams, anatto and arrowroot. The cultivation of cassava or manioc by small settlers is suggested, for preparing starch, meal, tapioca, cakes and cessareep. Cinnamon though grown freely is not barked; but cacao growers are strongly advised to plant kola in their plantations. The cultivation and preparation of sisal hemp is mentioned as one of the most important among new industries.

The principal imports consist of corn, which cannot be produced as cheaply as in the United States, rice and pulses. The attention of planters and small renters is directed to the cultivation of nutmegs and to the large profits to be made in suitable localities, and it is noted with pleasure that this cultivation is being entered upon with spirit and energy. Licorice is another plant recommended for small settlers as growing in deep soil such as that in which the orange flourishes.

In one of the botanical gardens exists an industrial school for instruction and practice in general agricultural operations. Some of the boys work in the garden for two or three hours in the morning, and another set in the afternoon. At other times they are employed in school, or at work round the school house under a schoolmaster. Among other things, the boys are taught how to cultivate and cure cacao.

WINDOW DRESSING.

Enterprising dealers can find time to invent some striking devices to augment spring trade. A novelty in action, and which will attract a great deal of attention, is to reproduce the Ferris wheel. This is two towers built of strips nailed to floor of window, on which rests an immense wheel. The wheel itself looks like two enormous bicycle wheels running on the same axis. Within this wheel is a number of cars on swinging axels, which may be imitated by means of goods, which is the main attraction. Tea boxes may be used, or baskets filled with choice eatables. To provide a method of keeping the wheel in motion, a pole may be inserted in the hub of the wheel which rests on the towers, running into the store, to which a handle is attached and the wheel kept in constant revolution by any person stationed back of the window. Where space will permit goods may be shown on the sides and placed on the floor.

A simple but very striking display is to build up a pyramid of canned goods just as high as your stock will permit. Place a ladder against this pile, on which place a scroll figure so arranged as if in the act of reaching a can. Prices of the varied brands should be shown here and there.

You will make everybody stop and look at your window if you will show this design: Obtain a number of strips and nail to floor and ceiling at intervals apart—say, three in front near pane, about two feet apart, and again at back. On these strips nail on apples. Between the uprights form angles of the strips and nail on the same fruit. This will produce a series of spaces outlined with borders of apples. Within these spaces you can build up such goods you desire to show.

To push the sale of any certain brand of sugar get a negro mask and place it upon a box, which may be secured by attaching a stick. Then heap up a mound of sugar close to the neck and place a price ticket in the mouth.—H. Harman in National Grocer.

SELF-SELLERS AND PROFITS.

We cannot but wonder more and more as we consider certain phases of the retail grocery business, as to why it is the retail grocery puts self-selling goods out as leaders, instead of that class of goods on which the margin would justify him in making a drive. If the retailer must cut prices to win trade, it is not a part of ordinary wisdom and mercantile common sense to make drives in the direction of developing a line of trade that cannot be developed without hard pushing, but which, when developed, brings large returns. There is no consumer but who must have flour, sugar, bread and oil, and yet these are the very goods that retail grocers cut the very quickest of all. They are goods that sell themselves and do not need pushing; it is not necessary to make a drive on them to make the consumer buy them; the consumer must buy them. On the other hand, there are lines of canned goods and other fancy groceries that consumers do not need to buy, and in order to develop trade on them it seems to us the retail grocer might have some reason for cutting prices, if he is ever justified in cutting. Moreover, he can afford to cut such goods because the margins permit, and yet evidences multiply continually that the retail trade cut to cut off their noses.—B. C. Commercial Journal.

POINTS ON EVAPORATED APPLES.

In certain quarters no effort has been spared of late to bring all the weight possible upon the market for evaporated apples, with a view of depressing prices. Offers of peculiar nature, chiefly with conditions prescribed that left the would-be sellers in a safe position, where, if offers were accepted, they could gracefully retreat without taking the risk of a loss, have been conspicuous. It is also the fact that some lines of apples nicely "topped" with well-cut rings, but containing inferior stock beneath, have been brought into play by the "bear" interest. As a matter of fact, all the tricks of trade, with which "bear" operators are familiar, have been used to the greatest advantage, and, it may be said, with a certain measure of success. When it comes to the relation of supply and demand, however, the "bear" interest are suspiciously evasive. They fail to bring forward any data or reliable circumstantial evidence that stands at all prominently along side of the "bull" statistics. The latter would make it appear that the available supply of evaporated apples of last season's crop is below the average. Estimates are that 15,000 to 18,000 boxes will cover the entire first-hand holdings in this State, New York city included, and they figure out also that the purchase of one box each by every retail grocer in New York city, Brooklyn and neighboring cities would clean up the entire stock. There is something bordering upon the venturesome in such statistical calculations, but the bulk of evidence goes to show that stocks are in very good shape; that supplies of green apples are low and chiefly "russets," and that the evaporated fruit is comparatively cheap at present prices.—N. Y. Bulletin.

OH, THE CUTTER.

Said a merchant the other day: "As soon as I get up a good thing, say in chocolate—but it would be the same if it were candy, butter, carpets, handkerchiefs, paints or pills,—some rival will imitate it in quality and put it on the market at a lower rate. To hold my own I've got to cut his price, but as I can't do that and make a profit, I must adulterate the article a little. He knows the dodge and he will do the same thing. So we go, cutting at each other, until both of our articles are so cheap and poor that nobody will buy them. Then I start the pure goods again, under another name, and the whole circus has to be gone over again."

Is there no way of getting rid of the pestiferous cutter? It's a pretty hard thing to do while the public clamors for cheap, cheap, and cheaper goods. But don't the merchant quoted above, and all who act as he does in trying to compete with the cutter's own tactics, make a great mistake?

There is undoubtedly a place in any community for a successful business in dealing in goods of high standard and undoubted quality only at prices affording reasonable profits. A reputation for such a business is not acquired as quickly as a reputation for low prices, but when once earned it is worth having, and the man who possesses it will be doing business at the old stand long after the cutter has cut himself off from all profitable trade. Try it.—Commercial Enquirer.

WHAT ARE YOU WORTH?

If you want to make a good profit from your trade, and become a properly independent dealer, make yourself profitable to the very people from whom you hope to profit, says Commercial Enquirer.

When you employ a mechanic you expect to pay him the price of unskilled labor, plus the difference between that and skilled labor of the kind you want in the market. That is, you are willing to pay for the skill which your chosen mechanic has acquired by serving his apprenticeship and training himself to excel in his occupation.

If a novice hangs out a sign and betrays you into employing him at a price sufficient to obtain the best work, you soon discover the fraud, and both will be losers. Your skill in your business entitles you to a fair compensation for its employment, and the investments of your customers will net them better results than were they to deal with persons unable to take every proper advantage of the market. The matter of permanent and steady-going trade in a community, a trade that is bright and brisk and reliable, is one of common or mutual interest. The customer is not only a source of profit to the dealer, but the alert and honest dealer is a source of profit to the customer. The art of pleasing in the permanent and higher sense, is an agreeable source of profit to more than one of the parties.

The tradesman who studies and practices the best methods, and has the far-reaching vision of the simple philosopher, will in all things seek the pleasure and advantage of his constituency—all of them, the least as well as the largest buyers.

THE BUTTER TRADE.

The English butter market must be in pretty bad shape when, in order to relieve it, re-shipments continue to be made to Canada of goods sent there for sale. It is said there are about 800 packages of creamery on the way back to this market, besides offers of more on consignment to parties here; and in one instance we know of a consignment having been refused. The placing of this returned butter has materially altered the complexion of the market here, during the past two or three weeks, prices being now as easy as they were firm then. The English market has been exceedingly disappointing to American and Canadian shippers during the past season, a Boston correspondent informing us that the losses on butter shipped from that port and New York have been very heavy, in some instances as much as 5 to 6c. per lb., whereas had this butter been simply held over on this side it would have netted profits of at least 3 to 4c. per lb. A lot of Western States butter was shipped last fall, costing 23c. f.o.b. Boston that realized an average of about 85s. in Liverpool. This looks bad for shippers of creamery butter to England, and may account for the returned lots that are being received here. New butter is coming in fairly well, considering the continuance of cold weather which is very unfavorable for the flow of milk; and all that arrives is taken up as soon as landed, both creamery and dairy.—Trade Bulletin.

CANNED MONKEY.

A Bangor family recently engaged a cook who was quite an artist with the kitchen utensils and the raw material at her disposal, although she was not on good terms with the cook books, being unable to read. She identified canned goods, for instance, by the pictures on the can labels, but once, at least, this did not work, and the result was amusing. A can of desiccated cocoanut was brought to the house by the groceryman and it bore the well-known trade mark cut of the monkey dallying with a cocoanut. When her gaze fell upon that can she was astounded.

"Oh, lor!" she ejaculated, "I have seen canned corn, canned peaches and most everything canned, but bless me if this ain't the first time I ever saw canned monkey."

PORT ELGIN.

W. J. Cameron for many years with his brother-in-law, Mr. Neil McGillivray, of Port Elgin, has started in business for himself in McGillivray's old stand. He will doubtless do a good business, as Mr. Cameron is well known and popular with everyone in the town and neighborhood. He has a nice bright, attractive looking and well arranged stock and will be pretty sure to make a success of it. There is a rumor of a probability of a partner being taken in in the near future, from one of the towns between Walkerton and Palmerston. Some people are always in luck and I always gave Willie credit for having extra good taste. Hope to congratulate him soon.

Port Elgin is a delightful little place in summer and full of nice people. It is situated on Lake Huron, and anyone having a week or two to spare during the summer months could put in a very enjoyable time there. Good hotel accommodation. X.

THE ART OF TEA-BLENDING.

Flavor is that quality in a substance which acts directly upon the palate, either to gratify or offend.

Unfortunately, the great body of American consumers of tea, the world's most famous leaf, have not been educated to an appreciation of the exquisite aroma and flavor resident in the tea leaf. There are single varieties or sorts of the cured leaf which possess a delicate and exquisite flavor, which is pleasing to the connoisseur or lover of fine tea. Other kinds are harsh, pungent, toasty, weedy, smoky, or possessed of other peculiar flavor. Unfortunately, there are many who are indifferent as regards flavor, and who are satisfied with any infusion so long as it is neutral in character, or in no way offends the palate. As tastes differ, there is, therefore, great scope for the blender, manipulator, compounder, or mixer of teas; but before discussing the art of blending, it is best to first study the tea leaf.

If we pick to pieces the beautiful evergreen leaf of the tea plant, we may possibly discover the secret of the important part it has played for unnumbered centuries in the political, social, economic and commercial life of more than one-half the people on the globe. Whence comes this famous leaf? From ancient Cathay, the modern China, where it is indigenous; from Japan, or ancient Chipango, whither it was carried from China; from India, where it is claimed the plant is also indigenous, and from that pearl of the sea—Ceylon.

Placed within a transparent china cup and covered with boiling water, we note, as the leaves uncurl, their varied size. Some are tiny, narrow, and beautifully formed; others are broader, longer, and coarser. The expert tells us the young and tender leaves, such as are plucked soon after their birth, are the most desirable, and, being comparatively few, are the most costly.

As we examine the structure of the leaf we are surprised at the delicate mechanism displayed. Our eyes being unsuited to the task of dissection and analysis, we call to our aid the scientist skilled in microscopy and chemistry, if we would discover the secret of the tea-leaf.

Almost the first thing we note, is what our learned friend calls "idioblasts." That odd word, unexplained, is apt to leave us as ignorant as when we started our investigations. It reminds one of the infrequent word—paratriptics—which Theodore Child used to head a chapter on tea, coffee and cocoa, in his admirable little volume entitled, "Delicate Feasting," and which curious word is used by medical writers to designate products like tea, which have the effect of checking the depreciation, decay, or wear and tear of tissue.

Let us return from this digression to "idioblasts," which we find to be odd-shaped, isolated cells, separate and distinct from the general cell structure of the leaf, which, in its entirety, is really a little house with minute little rooms, or cells, and which are too small to be seen with the naked eye. That well-informed investigator—Blythe—defines idioblasts as "long, tough, tenacious branched cells, which seem to act as pillars or beams, keeping the two layers of the leaf apart; they do not occur in any other leaf with which the tea-leaf is likely to be confused, so that their presence would indicate tea, their absence point to foreign leaves." In order to detect them, boil the leaves in a strong solution of caustic potash for three minutes, allow the solution to cool, remove the leaf, or a portion, to a glass slide, 3x1 inch, protected by a thin cover of glass of the same dimensions; press firmly, using slight friction, so that the leaf will appear as a mere stain between the glass slips.

Microscopists, or those interested in the character of tea leaves, or those seeking to discover adulteration, would so well to consult as a guide a paper by Thomas Taylor, Microscopist to the Department of Agriculture (Annual Report, 1889), and which is illustrated by colored plates showing the tea leaf as it is revealed under the microscope by polarized light.

The greenish color of the tea leaf is due to chlorophyl contained in tiny round cells grouped in irregular bands or circles.

Hidden away in the tea-leaf is a beautiful substance called theine, which, when extracted and crystallized, presents the appearance of soft and downy snow, but which, upon close investigation, turns out to be a mass of beautiful oblong crystals. This is one of the active principles giving tea its physiological value, and about which opinions are very conflicting.

Another active constituent, and always present in varying quantity, is an astringent called Tannin. It is impossible to make an infusion of tea leaves without its presence, but it is possible to steep the leaves as to get rid of the taste which to many is disagreeable. That variety of tea is most desirable which contains the smallest percentage of tannin. Thus far the preference in this respect must be given to the fermented or black tea of China.

The aroma or flavor of the leaf is due to essential or volatile oil, present in exceedingly minute quantity—so small, in fact, that we do not recall any recent analyses of the leaf which gives the quantity present.

Another substance found in the leaf is Dextrine, or Gum, but in very minute quantity.

The chemist tells us that the ash, some of which is soluble and some insoluble in water or acid, is an important element in determining the commercial value of tea. If the ash exceeds 8 per cent. of the total constituents of the leaf, the tea is not such as should be used. In tea dust the proportion of ash sometimes exceeds 20 per cent.

Next and last, and of great importance, is the Extract, that portion of the leaf soluble in water, and which should not be less than 30 per cent., and frequently exceeds 40 per cent.; the total average being 33 per cent. It is the extractive matter, including the tannin, which gives strength or body to the infusion, which varies greatly in color as to the sort of leaf infused and the mode of its preparation. Theine is tasteless and plays no part, commercially, in the estimate of commercial value. As a rule, none of the dealers, and few consumers, interest themselves in the physiological value of tea, most of them using the beverage being unable to explain its physiological action. They seek pleasure and refreshment in the aromatic and stimulating drink we call tea, and feel convinced of its beneficent influence upon the system, without being able to prove its action or effect.

The chemical nature of the leaf and its value for purposes of infusion, depend largely upon the character of the soil and the climate of the district in which the tea is grown, and again, to the manipulation and treatment of the leaf after it has left the plantation and passed through the process of manufacture.

Certain varieties of tea have an aroma or flavor that is peculiar to the soil on which the plants are cultivated. In no district on the mainland in China can they produce tea of the flavor of that grown on the island of Formosa. Each district produces tea with characteristics essentially different from all other districts, and hence the various designations of the teas of commerce are after the names of the district whence they come, whether grown in China, Japan, India, or Ceylon.—American Grocer.

DIAMOND CRYSTAL SALT

THE process by which this Salt is made is different from any other one of the kind in existence. That PERFECTION in the manufacture of such a variable article as Salt should be attained at once was not to be expected, and while the remarkable purity of Diamond Crystal Salt was generally conceded very soon after it was placed on the market, still the manufacturers were obliged to admit that at first it was not in every respect a perfect BUTTER Salt. Although much thought was spent and many experiments made, it was not until after FOUR YEARS of such effort that the trouble was discovered and the defects entirely remedied.

In spite of its defects, however, many dealers in butter, especially those who stored their goods for several months, insisted that this Salt should be used, since they had learned by repeated tests that it was the best Salt they could find for preserving butter and holding its flavor. To their first success—Purity—they have added a second by securing all the conditions essential in a Salt to be used for producing the Highest Grade of Butter.

WHY CALL THEM DEAD BEATS?

It has always seemed strange to us to hear one of that class of people who through their cunning manage to swindle the merchants, denominated as a dead beat. There is nothing either about his actions or personal character that goes to be dead in any sense of the word except perhaps that he is dead to all that is honest and upright. To all appearances he has nothing about him that has the least indication to convey the impression that he is dead. He manages to live, and that on the best the land can afford; of course, he has to do this in order to keep up the dignity of his adopted existence, were he to question the prices of the best class of goods the merchants would become suspicious less he was not what he represented himself to be.

The pages of the merchant's ledger, and the manner in which he succeeded in having his name placed there for a good round sum indicates that he is one of the most lively and industrious kind of dead personages that was ever conceived in the mind of man. He is so much alive that he can accomplish the process of skinning the merchant with such dexterity that the meaning of his methods will not be discovered until it is found that the smooth, polished scoundrel has gone to parts unknown. Then the merchant realizes to his sorrow that he has been victimized and his only consolation is an inward consolation and determination that this lively dead individual will not repeat the dose. One such lesson ought to be sufficient, but it has been known that the same person has repeated, and more than once, too.

We have almost been led to believe that some merchants like this individual, whether it is from his generous nature (and who could not be liberal at the expense of others) or his ability to swindle people by his smooth tongue, or other reason we do not know, but the fact nevertheless remains that the merchants show very little disposition to take the proper action for the extinction of this modern parasite. In many ways the merchants are responsible for his existence, as they gave him more attention and encouragement than to that class of people whose names never go on the ledger and who manage to live within their means. Who receives better treatment at the hands of the storekeeper than the whilom swindler? The merchant being in the power of the beat is compelled to flatter him in order to obtain at least a portion of the account standing on his books.

It is high time that merchants all over the continent should begin to realize the evils attendant upon the practices of "live scoundrels," as they ought to be called, and by their concentrated energy and earnest work wipe them out of existence. Nothing can be accomplished by complaining about him and then giving him the opportunity to do the same thing over again; he must be dealt with summarily and expeditiously. Though in principle he is dead, that does not prevent him from making the live merchants hustle to make up their losses through his schemes. There is no legislation that protects retail dealers. Let them take the matter in their own hands and make it impossible for the live swindlers (not dead beats) to further continue in their piratical practices.—Retail Grocers Journal.

THE COFFEE QUESTION.

There is actually, writes a Paris correspondent, a "coffee question" in France. The French, or some of them, have become suspicious concerning the properties of that beverage, in the preparation of which they are certainly unrivalled. Just as English people have reached perfection in the brewing of tea, the French are consummate artists in all their dealings with coffee. The English, who try to imitate them in this, and who are not familiar with the ways of the country, almost invariably blunder. They make the discovery that chicory is used in cafe au lait, and they conclude that the success of all French coffee, however drunk, lies in the judicious mixture of this root. The cafe noir, however, which is drunk after meals, is pure coffee, made very strong; at all events, it should be so. Then there is an art in the roasting, and much motive in keeping the berries from the fire until a short time before they are required. That the French should have become great coffee drinkers is the natural consequence of their own skill in preparing the beverage. They take it for their first breakfast, they take it after their midday meal, and again at night. Black coffee, strong as it should be, has a powerful influence upon the nervous system, which is not moderated by the addition of spirit drunk with it or immediately afterwards. M. Zola has been prevailed upon to say something about coffee. He tells us that for twenty years he had ceased to drink it, and that, although he takes a little now, it agrees badly with his nerves. He long ago gave up wine entirely and took to tea. He confesses that he is a "great drinker" of this beverage. M. Clemenceau is another; tea is the only fillip he believes in when the brain wants sharpening.

The use of so insidious and demoralizing a plant may explain to the French much that they consider perilous in British diplomacy. Before we come to the end of this discussion we must be ready to read in some Paris paper that Mr. Gladstone's recollections of promises made out of office has become obscured by the fumes of the teapot which he always keeps within reach. French journalists are always entertaining when they get hold of a subject like this, which exercises their brilliant faculty of inductive reasoning.

CALIFORNIA FRUIT CROP.

Some California canners send word this way to the effect that the fruit crops are not looking well. The first law of nature may account for that in some degree. It usually does. Those canners also attach considerable weight to the probable extraordinary condition of fruit in the green state in Chicago and vicinity during the World's Fair. In this also their imagination is suggestive of a high regard for self interest. Stated in other words, the Californians are extremely "bullish" verbally, in private letters and in the columns of various publications issued in the Golden State. It would seem fair to presume that they intend to convey the impression that 1893 season pack of fruit is worth as many cents per dozen at the factory as the fruit of 1892 season pack is selling at in New York and other distributive points at the present time. Possibly they are right, not only in their ideas of intrinsic value of spot goods, but as regards prospects for the future. It is no secret, however, that tales similar to those that have been in circulation during the past few weeks were going the rounds a year ago. It is the plain unvarnished fact that enough fruit was gathered to supply a heavy demand from the green fruit trade; that canners secured enough stock to enable them to make a very heavy pack; that driers obtained about all that they could handle to advantage, and that there is still a great deal of California fruit of the pack of 1892 still unsold. In the latter respect, dried peaches and "standard" canned peaches and pears are conspicuously prominent. Low prices have helped along the sale of the goods latterly, and may do more in the same connection later on, but it is doubtful if premature advices of alleged shortage in the growing crops will carry much weight against the experience with the last crop and the supply left over after an apparently heavy home consumption, and energetic work in the direction of increasing the outlet in European markets. Doubtless the market needs a stimulant in the way of larger consumption, and would probably benefit therefrom; but at the moment excessive supplies of the canned fruit neutralize the short crop stories, and most lines of goods can be purchased at prices very close to those at which "sacrifice" sales were made a short time ago.—N. Y. Bulletin.

The grocers of Wilkesburg deserve a special medal for shrewdness. They do not propose to stay at home and fight the wolf away from the door while their patrons are reveling in pleasure at the World's Fair. They have adopted a rule to do a strictly cash business for ten months beginning May 1st. This may keep some of the Wilkesburg people home from the Fair, but it will give the grocers a chance to go and that's what they usually do not have in a year of this kind.

AFTER STRAIGHT MOYUNE'S SCALP.

DEAR GROCER, — I noticed that "Straight Moyune" is again slightly off in his reference to "Bystander's" gleanings about the traveller who does a large trade in teas by helping the retailers and customers at times out of a difficulty in which they may be placed in being willing to pull off his coat and then and there give an ocular demonstration of practical ability as well as a theory in blending tea. The results proving satisfactory is a proof of his knowledge and prowess. Now, the "absurdity" of "Straight Moyune" inviting that "Smart Alic" to give him a call is too plain, because if "Straight Moyune" was known this Smart Alic would be on to him soon. A CITY TRAVELLER.

MR. DONALD EXPLAINS.

EDITOR CANADIAN GROCER,—My attention has been called to a statement reported to have been made by myself in a recent address before the Grocers' Association. The report stated that I had no higher ambition than to be a first-class retail grocer, and with such a position I would be perfectly satisfied. While in the main correct the statement is like other reported sayings, slightly inaccurate. The fault lies not with the reporter but myself, in that I had failed to provide a summary for the use of the papers as is usual. My speech in this connection rather gave the impression that there was none other calling which gave greater opportunities if taken advantage of or which was more to be desired than the retail grocery trade by the thinking, intelligent young man. I claimed that every chance of public life came as freely to this trade as to any other, and that I was as satisfied to be in it and do the best I would with my opportunities as could be the individual who was eternally dissatisfied with his lot, and kept up a continual cry after someone else's flesh-pot. Yours, etc.,

RICHARD A. DONALD.

A REPLY TO MR. MACORQUODALE.

DEAR GROCER,—I think your correspondent, Macorquodale, must be smarting under some disappointment. Perhaps he got left in some tea draw, and the other fellow got the order, while he had to take a back seat. Rather provoking for one of his calibre. The tea business is not so easily manipulated and worked so well as land fertilizers. It requires men to be truthful and reliable in their statements, and when a certain kind of tea is asked for by us retailers we expect to see such a tea shown to us that we may inspect it, and judge of its quality and value according to our judgment. And if we purchase a tea or coffee at a price from a drummer, we expect to get the tea or coffee as offered to us, and no other. But how often does it happen with some wholesale houses that we get disappointed. Sometimes the leaf or berry is not up to the sample, and sometimes it is not the same as sample shown at all. We don't think it business or common honesty to have our time taken up with unreliable drummers or what is called "kerb-stone brokers," who would live with us if we dared to set anything in the shape of a meal on or about the testing table while in operation. It is a growing question with us whether it would not be much more satisfactory and much cheaper for us retailers to exclude canvassers altogether from the testing-table when testing and selecting teas and coffees. We certainly would save something in cheese and crackers, and we would also be free from tobacco fumes and questionable stories, telling us all about our neighbors' shortcomings, and how nicely So and So got fooled on such and such a purchase. "Bought the poorest tea in the bunch and paid just three cents more than So and So paid for the same line." Then the Patrons and Single Tax gatherers come in for a large share of small talk from these peregrinators, all tending no doubt to help us simple buyers to make a good purchase, and then we are told publicly that we are poor judges of tea and cannot tell within 10¢ a pound of what we want. It seems to me, Dear GROCER, that the gall of some tea quacks is becoming almost unbearable, and we shall soon be compelled to ask for special legislation empowering us to have these "specialists" sworn upon the good book that they will tell the truth, and nothing but the truth, and that when samples are shown to us they are the same as stock held, and if we purchase the goods they will be delivered as per agreement, and that no excuses shall crop up for non-delivery by the firms from whom the goods were bought, through their representatives. No excuses to be given after this fashion: "That the line has just been sold out," or, "We couldn't think of accepting that price; our Mr. So and So ought to have known better, or he surely made a mistake and took the wrong sample." Then, after these much abused drummers have taken up our time for two hours or more in testing tea or coffee, and in accepting our offer for a line, we are sometimes politely, and sometimes impolitely told by the wholesaler that he (their special representative) ought to have known better, and they cannot deliver the goods at the price sold! These and many other annoyances we retailers are subjected to at times, by some unscrupulous salesman or firm. But in justice to the fraternity let me say that such men I believe are in the minority, but it is a pity that the wholesale trade generally should allow the standard of truth and integrity to be abused and the trade maligned and lowered by a few poor representatives who stoop to meanness below the stand and dignity of reliable salesmen. It behooves business men generally not only to see that they have the cups and spoons spotlessly clean in testing teas, but also their mouths free from tobacco, and their tongues cleansed from lying and pollution, and their hearts free from bitter uncharitableness, then and not till then will it be a pleasure to do business openly and truly. LONDON INDIGO BLUE SALES.

The second periodical East India indigo sale of the year has been brought to an end, and has been in many respects an unusual one. It will be remembered that the Bengal indigo crop last year was a poor one, consequently prices advanced rapidly, and are now about 1s. per pound dearer than they were in April, 1892. One effect of the short crop has been to induce Madras exporters to hurry the Kurpah descriptions forward to the English market, and in their haste they have shipped the indigo in a damp state. Hence the new Kurpah indigo is at present not really salable. Moreover, the Madras manufacturers have again largely adulterated Kurpahs with aniline or some other deleterious matter. It was chiefly this class of indigo that made the quantity catalogued for these sales so large, for of the total, 8,350 chests, no fewer than 4,670 chests were Kurpahs. Buyers acted very cautiously, carefully avoiding wet or adulterated indigo. The following figures of the stock of indigo in the warehouses do not represent this year the approximate amount of coloring matter which these statistics usually do. Consumers must bear in mind that there is more undesirable and low indigo now in stock than probably ever before: Stocks, chests, 1893, 15,397; 1892, 11,182; 1891, 14,956; 1890, 18,017; 1889, 15,079. Deliveries to date, 1893, 5,054; 1892, 4,163; 1891, 3,975; 1890, 5,734; 1889, 6,164.

A Board of Trade was formed in Thorold April 27th with the following as officers: W. J. McCartney, president; Omor Johnston, vice-president; T. E. Simson, secretary.

C. McIlhargey, fancy groceries, etc., Stratford, has moved into his new premises. His store is well appointed, and those who have seen it say its appearance is fine.

The members of the Montreal Board of Trade and the Corn Exchange Association moved into their new quarters in the new Board of Trade building on St. Sacramento street Monday.

The Canadian Packing Company of London, expect to begin hog killing inside of a month. Frost has such a hold on the building that the length of the delay it will cause is uncertain.

By a bill which Mr. Wood, of Brant, has introduced in the Ontario Legislature, assignees are required to reserve from insolvent estates sufficient to pay any claim there may be for taxes. Another bill which Mr. Wood has in hand gives liquor license boards the same powers to enforce their by-laws as are exercised by municipalities.

A. O. Fennan, who ran a grocery store in King street east, opposite Trinity street, is opening up in the store at Queen street and Dovercourt road, formerly occupied by William Morton.

G. G. Johnston, of Palmerston, has gone into business in the old Pickart block, Exeter. Business so far has been encouraging, sales having been good. His friends say prospects are good for an extensive and profitable business.

The Eddy paper mills at Ottawa have found the railway accommodation insufficient for the firm's enormous business, and a spur of the C.P.R. is to be run into the sulphite works and mills.

The Financial News, London, Eng., says the gigantic corner in coffee engineered by Kaltentach, the Paris operator, has collapsed, implicating 30 firms in Havre, and a number of houses in Antwerp, Rotterdam and Hamburg.

A dollar loaned for 100 years and compounded at 24 per cent. will amount in that time to $2,551,799,404. A lot of satisfaction in that! A fellow might as well throw the dollar into the lake for all the good he would get out of it.

While the consumption in the United States of such articles as sugar, beer, and tobacco has increased with enormous rapidity of late years, a contemporary says that there has been comparatively little gain in the demand for wheat, tea and coffee.

A motion was introduced in the British House of Commons last week for ocean penny postage. The Government expressed its approval of the principle, but urged that financial considerations made the change impossible at present, and the motion was withdrawn.

The Comber Oil and Gas Company has elected Thomas Anderson secretary of the company, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late Wm. Mann. The company will pipe the gas to Comber providing Mr. Rodgers, of Toronto, will give up claims against the well.

The Inland Revenue Department has issued a report on the analysis of milk in Halifax, Acadia Mines, Amherst, Springhill, Parisboro', Windsor, Quebec, Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, London, and St. Thomas. From samples collected in August, September and October last. Although there were a great many samples that were not genuine, yet when we hear of so much adulteration, it is surprising to find so many that came up to the standard.

The Mammoth Canadian cheese at the World's Fair during the opening ceremonies, fell through the floor of the Agriculture building in which it had been placed, and sank a considerable depth into the ground eleven feet below the floor. Prof. Robertson, Dominion Dairy Commissioner, received a telegram on Monday stating that it would be raised by machinery at once, and replaced in position sound and whole.

George Vick, grocer, of Orillia, has introduced a unique feature in his business. The space between his two stores, which has hitherto been used as a storehouse, has been turned into a department for the display of canned goods and fancy groceries. It is semi-circle in form, and is fitted with large sliding glass windows. At night it is brilliantly lighted, and the effect is said to be very pretty.

Considerable excitement prevails in Bothwell over the gushing oil well struck by a London syndicate. Experienced oil men say it is the best they have seen pumped for years, considering it has not been shot with glycerine. The drillers got about 15 feet of good oil cuttings, and say there is lots of oil there, and now, as they understand, the surface well can be put down cheaply. It is understood the company intends putting down more wells and a new pumping rig with a capacity of pumping 100 wells.

The bill introduced in the Local Legislature by Mr. Ryerson aims to prevent frauds in milk, and provides that any person who sells milk that is skimmed or partly sour shall be liable to a fine of not less than $1 or more than $50. A retired grocer in a New York suburban town was helping a friend, a retail grocer, to take stock the other day. When the tea department was reached the dealer announced so many pounds of Oolong. "Oolong!" said his friend; "that's Congou." "Why, I bought it for Oolong," replied the other, "and have always sold it as such." It would be interesting to know how many retail grocers there are who cannot tell the difference between two widely varying varieties of so important a staple as tea. Perhaps ignorance about tea accounts for the dwindling sales of the article in some grocery stores.—Ex.

The C. P. R. officials have announced that final arrangements had been completed between them and the Australian Steamship Company for the establishment of a line between Vancouver and Sydney. The Miowera and Warrimoo are the two steamers engaged, and the first leaves Sydney May 11, the second June 8, returning leave here June 8 and July 6. The steamers are twin ships, 5,000 tons gross, 16 knots speed, and have accommodation for 125 saloon passengers. The company is now prepared to quote on Through freight. The distance between Vancouver and Sydney is about 331 miles more than to San Francisco, but as the steamers are faster than those it is thought the trip will be made in about the same time.

G. R. R. Cockburn, M.P., who was in Ottawa the other day on departmental business, saw the Postmaster-General in regard to complaints as to the unsatisfactory mail service between Toronto and New York. He was informed that the statement that the department had been asked and had refused to pay a small extra charge for the carriage of mails from Toronto to New York by the Chicago fast mail train which leaves Buffalo every evening, was entirely without foundation. No communication had been received at the Post Office Department from the United States authorities in regard to the sending of mails by this particular train. The department, however, will do its utmost to give the merchants of Toronto as quick a service to New York as can possibly be obtained.

Mr. C. E. Sontum, of Christiana, Norway, was introduced on 'Change at the Toronto Board of Trade Monday. Mr. Sontum is the Norwegian commissioner to the World's Fair. He is also deputed to endeavor to extend trade relations between his country and Canada. Mr. Sontum is highly pleased with Canada and Canadians. He says that business men of Norway prefer to trade with Canadians rather than the Americans on account of the high tariff prevailing in the United States. Some time ago the Norwegians made an order for some Canadian farm produce. So encouraging were the results of the experiment that several large orders for Canadian meal, split peas, fluid beef, whiskey, and other lines have been placed. Mr. Sontum expects that in the future Canada's export business with Norway will be largely increased.

CRITIQUES ISSUE, APRIL 28.

A certain extra respectable house on Front street, instead of sending goods as ordered, occasionally varies the procedure by substituting odd things, for the buyer's benefit of course.

It is good sport reading the various apologetic circulars of the soap people, but for "however" and "nevertheless" language the Surprise people beat all of them.

Mr. Macorquodale, besides being a leading light as a social regenerator, is also an authority on tea. His letter on competitive tea drawing is timely and worthy of taking to heart; but not only by the buyer. There is an salesman or two among the drummers who could profitably have "one price."

The loss of grip is an old trouble, and many a man has become distracted through loss of business and has never sized up his lacking powers or waning enterprise until too late.

Oh the country roads! Our friend Alan Macdougall besides being a good curler is also a good engineer. His idea that one good road is worth a dozen poor ones will probably dawn on the authorities about a quarter of a century hence. That mythical Ontario surplus must be maintained. It would never do to invest it in good roads.

We notice with pleasure that our old and experienced friend the Editor does occasionally read our column. We certainly admit that we always read the Montreal market reports.

Speaking of wheaten flour reminds me that very few grocers sell a genuine Graham flour. The general thing is to take what the miller sends, and this may be anything from shorts upwards. The very best article can be had by ordering whole wheat ground into flour. This will make a splendid article of food and satisfactory to your customers.

Lima beans are not carefully enough selected and hence slowness of sale and lowness of price. The general idea among packers seems to be that everything goes from beans to grubs and dirt. The sooner a better system of hand-picking obtains the better for a delicious article of food.

TORONTO MARKETS.

TORONTO, May 4, 1893.
GROCERIES.

Trade has not been satisfactory during the week, the volume being much smaller than anticipated. A further advance of $\frac{1}{8}$ c. in sugars has been about the only thing to cause anything approaching excitement, but even in this particular line the demand is limited and is confined to small lots. Canned goods are still in fair request at steady prices, and the improvement in coffee outside noted last week continues. Valencia raisins and currants, are in fairly good demand, but outside these two particular lines there is not much doing in dried fruits. Rice remains in the same uninteresting condition as for some time past, but for spices there is some enquiry. Syrups and molasses are moving fairly well. Teas rule quiet but firm, and cables announce Indian and Ceylon teas higher. A further advance is announced in cocoa. While trade at the moment is so quiet the prospects for a good summer trade have lost none of their brightness. In fact during the last couple of days there appears to be prospects of a tendency towards that direction. Payments are not satisfactory.

COFFEES.

The outside markets have been a little irregular, but latest advices report both the Rio and Santos markets firm, and during the last few days there has been a gradual improvement. There is still a scarcity of fine grades. There is no material change on the local market, demand being moderate and prices much as before. We quote: Rio 20 to 22c., East Indian 27 to 30c., South American 21 to 23c., Mocha 26 to 30c., Santos 21 to 22c.

COCOAS AND CHOCOLATES.

The market is firmer and an advance of 1c. has been made in some lines. Advices from Trinidad under date of April 19 state that there has been a slight increase in deliveries, which are however still disappointing, the prolonged drought having retarded the ripening of the pods. A few heavy rains which fell lately did a good deal of good, and should moderate rains follow liberal supplies are expected during the next two months. It is stated that the "pick just commencing is bound to fall short of expectations, and we must look to October crop to make up the large deficiency in the year's production."

DRIED FRUIT.

There is not much demand except for Valencia raisins and currants. Valencia raisins are in good demand for the season, chiefly of the cheaper qualities. The idea is about $\frac{1}{2}$ c. for second off-stalk and $\frac{5}{8}$ c. for fine off-stalk; fancy selected are worth $\frac{7}{8}$ c. and layers $\frac{6}{8}$ to $\frac{7}{8}$ c. Currants are in good demand at $\frac{5}{8}$ to $\frac{5}{8}$ c. for good sound fruit. There are a few cases of prunes moving, and the idea is $\frac{7}{8}$ c. in cases. Dates are quiet and unchanged, $\frac{5}{8}$ c. being the ruling figure. The market seems to be about cleaned out of figs.

NUTS.

There is nothing special to note. Both demand and stocks are light, while prices are unchanged. Brazil nuts, 11 to $11\frac{1}{2}$ c. a pound. Sicily shelled almonds, 32 to 35c. a pound; unshelled, 16 to 17c.; peanuts, 13 to 14c. for roasted and 11 to $12\frac{1}{2}$ c. for green.

RICE AND SPICES.

No change is reported in rice. Until the new crop arrives in June not much movement or change in prices is anticipated; $\frac{3}{8}$ c. is still the ruling figure for ordinary quality. Spices are in good demand at steady prices. Whole ginger is quoted at 20 to 25c., pure white pepper at 20 to 28c., and pure black at 14 to 16c.

SUGAR.

The market continues to gather strength, but there is no corresponding response in the demand. People are seemingly buying just as little as they possible can, some evidently being of the opinion that the market will be unable to maintain its present position. There is nothing apparently however to warrant such a view being taken. Some of the refineries have withdrawn quotations and the outside markets are higher for present delivery than for July delivery, while from the present price of raws the refiners would be entitled to higher prices than those now obtaining. The idea for granulated is $\frac{5}{8}$ c. with the range running $\frac{1}{8}$ c. higher, and in spite of the quietness prices are firm at the figures quoted. A very dark yellow sugar can be obtained on this market as low as $\frac{4}{8}$ c., but the ruling price for ordinary dark is $\frac{4}{8}$ c., bright $\frac{4}{8}$ to $\frac{4}{8}$ c. and cream $\frac{4}{8}$ c.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Syrups are in rather better supply, but demand continues light at steady prices; $\frac{2}{4}$ to $\frac{3}{4}$ c. is the idea, the outside figure being for common syrup. Demand for molasses is only small at prices ranging from 32c. for Porto Rico to 38 to 48c. for New Orleans. The season has been a fair one for molasses.

TEAS.

The local tea market continues quiet. Low grades of every kind are in light supply and dear. Blacks have advanced still further. Medium grades of all teas are now offering best value, and incomprehensible better value than the low grades; so much so is this the case that it is held that either the latter have got to come down or the better grades advance. Old season Japan teas have been neglected, and holders are beginning to feel somewhat restless about getting rid of the balance on hand. Cables received on this market on Tuesday announced an advance of 1d. in Ceylon and Indian Pekoes, broken Pekoes, and orange Pekoes.

BUTTER AND CHEESE

Receipts of butter are fairly liberal, but there is no accumulation of stock, the demand being good. The tendency of the market however is downward. There is not much creamery offering and stocks here are light. All the creameries except one or two have stopped making. Creamery pound prints are quoted higher at 25c., but the price is too high to suit most people and there is not much doing in them in consequence. Dairy pound prints are attracting a good deal of attention and they sell at from 18 to 21c., but the latter figure obtains in exceptional cases only. Large rolls are a little scarce at 17 to 19c. Bakers' butter is scarce and wanted at 16 to 17c. A good deal of inferior large rolls are being picked up for pastry purposes. There is no tub butter on the market.

Offerings of cheese are not so large and stocks seem to be pretty well absorbed. Prices are unchanged at 11 to $11\frac{1}{8}$ c. There has been a little new make offering but the weather has so far not been favorable for cheese-making.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—Offerings are more liberal and demand is good. Some good hand-picked lots have been taken at $1.40 to $1.50, and jobbers are getting $1.50 to $1.60.

DRIED APPLES—Dull, and the little that is being done is confined to small lots. Jobbers are paying $\frac{3}{4}$ to 5c. and selling at 5 to $\frac{5}{8}$ c.

EVAPORATED APPLES—Not much doing and prices are easy; dealers are as a rule paying $\frac{8}{8}$ to 9c. and quoting 9 to $\frac{9}{8}$ c.

EGGS—Market has improved during the week. Demand is good and prices steady at $11\frac{1}{2}$ to 12c.

HONEY—There is no improvement, and it can be obtained at almost any price. Some small sales of extracted are reported at 8c., and we quote from 7 to 8c. There have been sales of dark at 5c.

POULTRY—Continues scarce and wanted. We quote chickens as before at 80 to 90c., turkeys at 13 to 14c. a pound, and geese at 8 to 10c. a pound.

POTATOES—Demand is good and receipts liberal, with prices lower at 75 to 80c. on track; 90c. is the idea for small lots out of store.

ONIONS—Not much doing and prices are unchanged. We quote: Red, $1.10 per bushel, $2 per barrel; yellow, $1.20 per bushel, $2.25 per barrel.

HOPS—Unchanged and quiet at 18 to 20c. for 1892's and 14 to 15c. for yearlings.

HOGS AND PROVISIONS.

There was a little excitement in the market for dressed hogs Tuesday and prices advanced to \$8 to \$8.10, but these prices can scarcely be maintained in view of the drop in the price of live animals. The twenty or more cars of hams and bacon which were taken last week have been supplemented by further sales of car lots. The price in this instance was rather better $10\frac{1}{4}$ to $10\frac{1}{2}$ c. being obtained for the long clear and $11\frac{1}{2}$ c. for hams out of pickle. The products were mostly for export. The market is firm, and an advance of $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ c. per pound is expected to take place in the course of the next few days.

BACON—Long clear, $10\frac{1}{2}$ c. Smoked backs are $12\frac{1}{2}$ to 13c., bellies $13\frac{1}{2}$ to 14c., rolls $10\frac{1}{2}$ to $10\frac{3}{4}$ c.

HAMS—In good demand and firm at 13c.

LARD—Pure Canadian is 13 to $13\frac{1}{4}$ c. in tubs, 13 to $13\frac{1}{2}$ c. in pails and $12\frac{1}{2}$ to 13c. in tierces. Compound 10 to $10\frac{1}{8}$ c.

BARREL PORK—Canadian heavy mess $20.50, Canadian short cut $21 to $21.50.

DRESSED MEATS—Beef fores are $\frac{4}{8}$ to $\frac{5}{8}$ c., hindquarters 6 to $\frac{8}{8}$ c., veal 8 to $\frac{9}{8}$ c., lamb $\frac{8}{8}$ to $\frac{9}{8}$ c.

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.

No new features have developed during the week. The good business noted a week ago appears to have been fairly well maintained, and prices are firm. The enquiry is chiefly for tomatoes and corn. Tomatoes sell as before at 85c. to $1. The recent expose in the Police Court regarding the soaked article seems for the moment to have affect the demand for canned peas, although not to any great extent. The trade expect however that business in this particular line will get down to a more legitimate basis now since the public have become enlightened through the recent legal proceedings. Prices rule as before at 85 to $1 for ordinary and $1.45 for sifted. Corn continues in the same active demand as noted a week ago, and stocks of this particular line are probably lighter than in either tomatoes or corn; ordinary are quoted at 85 to $1 and extra at $1.25. Beans are in fair demand and unchanged at 90c. to $1. Salmon, for the season, is in active demand; prices firm and unchanged, $1.55 to $1.65 for talls and $1.70 to $1.80 for flats being the idea for the first-class and red article, while a fairly good light pink can be obtained as low as $1.30. Lobster is also in good demand for the season; $2 to $2.10 for talls and $2.50 for flats are the ruling prices for good brands. Sardines are still attracting but small attention. Canned meats are beginning to move a little more briskly, and indications point to firm prices for the season. There is not much doing in peaches, and prices remain much as before at $2.10 to $2.25 for 2's and at $3.25 to $3.75 for 3's. Plumbs are in fair demand and unchanged at $1.45 to $1.55. Apples are in rather better demand than a week ago at 85 to $1 for 3's and $2 to $2.25 for gallons.

MARKETS—Continued

GREEN FRUIT.

The weather has interfered considerably with trade, but a fair business is being done nevertheless. The demand is principally for bananas, but oranges and lemons are moving nicely. There is a good deal of enquiry for pine apples, but desirable stock is scarce. The market is well supplied with bananas, but there is no accumulation. Valencia oranges are dearer. In apples there is a good demand for spies and russets, but other kinds are not wanted; first class fruit sell at $2.50 to $2.75 per bbl., while for something fancy $3 is occasionally obtained. Ordinary stock sells at $1 to $2 per bbl. The situation has somewhat improved in England and the United States and further shipments are being made to these markets. Stocks on this market are now getting pretty well cleaned out. We quote as follows: Oranges—Valencias $6.50 to $7.00 per case; ditto, Jumbos, $8.50 to $9 per case; Floridas $3.25 to $4 per box; Messinas and Palermos $3.25 to $4.00 per box; California seedlings, $3 to $3.25 per box; ditto Navals, $3.75 to $4.25; lemons, $3 to $4; bananas, $1 to $2.25; pineapples, extras 20 to 25c., No. 1 15 to 20c., No. 2 13 to 15c., No. 3 9 to 11c.; apples $1 to $2 for ordinary, and $2.50 to $3 for fancy.

MAPLE PRODUCTS.

Demand is good for syrup and sugar, and supplies are more satisfactory. Syrup is unchanged at 75 to 80c. in tins and 85 to 90c. for imperial gallon in kegs. Maple sugar has advanced another ½c., being now quoted at 9 to 10c. The outside figure obtains for small cakes, halves and quarters.

FISH AND OYSTERS

There is no improvement. All fresh fish continue scarce, and business is practically at a standstill. Prices are purely nominal. The following are the quotations:—Manitoba whitefish, 7½c.; fresh salmon, 20c.; haddock, 6c.; skinned and boned codfish, 6½c.; Labrador herring, $3 per half bbl.; shore herring, $2.75 per bbl.; Digby herring, 11 to 12½c.; boneless fish, 4c.; boneless cod, 7 to 8c.; pike, 7c.; ciscoes, $1.35 a hundred; finnan haddie, 7½c.; perch, $2 to $3 per hundred, as to size; suckers,

$3 per cwt.; blue back herring, $2 to $3 per hundred; oysters, $1.20 to $1.25 for stds., and $1.75 for selects.

HIDES, SKINS, WOOL, TALLOW.

HIDES—Good hides are scarce and all such are taken up, but of grubby and inferior stock there is an accumulation. This latter class is undesirable and the tanners are fighting shy of it. For good selections 5¼c. is the idea, but car lots could be obtained at ¼c. less, with a large proportion of No. 2 selling at 75c. to $1 per cwt. lower.

SKINS—Our last week's report stated that calfskins were weaker, and we have to confirm this with a further reduction of 10c. each on all grades—deacons, dairy and veal. Jobbers are paying 7 to 8c. and selling at 8 to 9c. Sheepskins are still arriving in limited quantity only and prices are purely nominal at $1.35 to $1.45.

TALLOW—Little or nothing doing; dealers are paying 5½c. for rendered and selling at 6 to 6¼c. Rough is unchanged at 2½c.

WOOL—There is nothing new to report. Some small lots of unwashed new season's clip are coming in, for which 10 to 11c. is being paid. The mills are still busy. Fleece wool is nominal at 17 to 19c., clothing 25 to 26c., Canada South Down, 27 to 28c.; white Indian, suitable for blankets, 17 to 19c.; grey East Indian, 11 to 13c.; B.A.'s white clothing 32 to 34c.; cross breeds, 26 to 28c.; Canada extra, 25 to 27c. Canada super is scarce and good selection would readily fetch 23c.

only for small parcels. Seeding is backward owing to the unfavorable weather; in fact some have not sown a handful yet. Red clover is about 45c. per bushel lower in sympathy with the United States market. The season is over there, and people in consequence are anxious to sell out remaining stocks. Alsike is scarce and higher, while we quote timothy lower. Prime red clover is quoted at $8.25 to $8.40, extra choice $8.40 to $8.55, and $8.55 to $8.70 for Mammoth or Large Lake. Alsike runs all the way from $8.00 for good to $9.00 for choice. Timothy sells at $2.40 to $2.45 for choice, $2.50 to $2.55 for extra, and $2.65 to $2.80 for unhulled flail threshed.

PETROLEUM.

There is just a seasonable trade doing in illuminating oils, while demand for machine oil continues brisk. Prices are unchanged. We quote: Canada refined oil, 13 to 13½c.; carbon safety, 17½ to 18c.; Canada water white 19c.; American water white, 21 to 22c. photogene, 25c.

MARKET NOTES.

Cocoas are dearer on account of the drought.

Indian and Ceylon teas are dearer in England.

Eby, Blain & Co. has just received invoice of fourth shipment of Orient tea.

Local exporters are again shipping apples to England and the United States.

Sloan & Crowther report the arrival of a fine line of Darjeeling tea in chests.

Two small invoices fine Darjeeling teas are reported to hand by Lucas, Steele & Bristol, Hamilton.

The Delhi Canning Co. is putting a new line of horse radish on the market. It is said to be particularly fine.

It is said that a Halifax (N.S.) firm are putting a pickle on the market labelled "Rowat & Co.," Glasgow.

Eben. Roberts' table jellies and Royal table cream are to be had from Lucas, Steele & Bristol, of Hamilton.

Warren Bros & Boomer purchased a round lot of tomatoes a few days ago at a figure slightly under the market price.

Taylor, Scott & Co., manufacturers and dealers in brooms and woodenware, Toronto, have dissolved. G. C. Taylor continues under old style.

Clemes Bros. report that they have only got a few boxes left of the famous Uncas brand of oranges, and there will be no more obtainable this season.

Perkins, Ince & Co. have received a cablegram from Yokohama saying: "Steamer Oceanic takes 600 packages of tea costing $42 to $46; quality good."

Clemes Bros. are having large sales of Lynch's maple leaf brand of maple syrup. This brand is put up in small tins, four dozen in the case, and there is not much on hand.

James A. Skinner & Co., Toronto, take stock in May, and they want to clean out several lines of spring goods, which they offer at lower prices. They have bargains in crocery, glassware, and lamp goods. They have assorted packages of the New Era and Columbian glassware, which sell retail at 25 and 10c.

Davidson & Hay are nearly sold out of E. Roberts' celebrated jellies and table creams, and will have to bring on another shipment at once. The demand has been much larger than anticipated.

The Japan tea market opened a few days earlier than last year. Advices received by Musson & Co. state that it opened higher than last year, but owing to the rate of exchange it can be laid down 1c. lower.

The American Newspaper Directory, published in New York, says:—"THE CANADIAN GROCER, weekly, has the largest circulation rating of any paper in Canada published in the interests of the grocery trade."

Hudon, Hebert & Co., wholesale grocers of Montreal, have dissolved and a new partnership has been registered composed of Joseph Hudon, Chas. P. Hebert, Leandre Brault, Irene Jarret, Albert Herbert and Zephirin Herbert.

Watts & Co., Brantford, agents for Maple Leaf canned salmon, quote $4.70 f. o. b. coast. This is 20c. higher than Horse Shoe. They state that they will not meet the lower prices quoted by other packers as they have sold the bulk of their pack to England.

Mr. C. E. Sontum, who is here as the commercial representative of the Norwegian Government, has made arrangements to send a shipment of samples of Norwegian products, including condensed milk, sardines, anchovies, dried fish, etc., to A. Waddell, of this city. Canadians who may be interested in these goods will be able to see what can be done in the way of imports from there.

The Belleville Canning Co. is looking forward to a good season. "The market," it writes, "is not overburdened and a large consumption is going on, so that old stock will be cleaned out before the new comes in. We trust that the packers will not get scared and sell at prices which are ruinous to the trade and themselves. It is our intention to double our pack this year, paying special attention to our branches of French peas and flat tins of sugar corn."

MONTREAL MARKETS.

MONTREAL, May 4, 1893.
GROCERIES.

The cold backward spring and the lateness of the opening of navigation are as we have pointed out before, largely responsible for the backward position of business in the general grocery market. In fact, were it not for the interest created by the feverish feeling in sugar the wholesale trade would be very dull indeed. The article, however, as everyone knows, has made things lively, although not pleasant for those who did not believe in the advance and held off for more favorable prices. The market continues strong at the advance that occurred on Thursday last, and in its present temper may go higher at any moment. Values on other lines also, although they are dull, show considerable steadiness. Tea, spices and molasses are all firm in tone, and other lines do not show any special change.

SUGAR.

The sugar market is an eighth higher on granulated than noted in our last report, the refiners here having decided upon an advance at the close of last week. The tone even at this price is firm, and the trade are looking for a further rise at any moment. We now quote granulated 5 1-8c., and yellows 4 1-4 to 4 5-8c. The market for raw is quite stiff again on both sides of the Atlantic. In fact, all round the sugar market is a strong and decidedly interesting one, and although buyers would like to order more freely sellers and refiners will not operate ahead to any extent at all.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The strong tone of the raw sugar market has had the effect anticipated on molasses at the Islands, cables last week citing another advance there to 20c. f.o.b., a rise of another cent. It is now established also beyond a doubt that the report of a short supply were correct. Accordingly, although we have still to note some sales at rather inside figures, the feeling on spot is stiff, and we advance our quotations 1c. to 34 to 35c. for Barbadoes. Syrups rule quiet, and prices are nominally unchanged at 1 1-8 to 2 1-4c. per lb. for Canadian, and 18 to 20c. per gallon for American.

TEAS.

The tea market is quiet, with little to be said about it. About 1,000 packages of Japans on consignment were sold at 14 to 17 1-2c. But there is nothing doing in blacks, buyers holding off for first arrivals. We quote Japans: Low grades, 13 to 14c.; good to common, 15 to 18 1-2c.; fine, 19 to 21 1-2c., and finest, 23 to 31c.

COFFEES AND SPICES.

The coffee market here has at last shown some sympathy with the easier feeling in New York, and some business has transpired at a slightly lower range, but the deals have been small. We quote Jamaica, 19 to 20c.; Maracaibo, 20 1-2 to 22c.; Rio, 19 to 21c.; Java, 24 to 27c., and Mocha, 25 to 28c.

Spices continue firm, and we quote as before: Black pepper, 8 to 9c.; Pimento, 6 1-2c., nutmegs, 50 to 52 1-2c. and $1 for strict wholesale business.

RICE.

The rice market does not show any change, the demand being only fair at $3.85 to $4 for ordinary, $4 to $4.50 for Japans, and $4.50 to $5.50 for Patnas and Carolina.

DRIED FRUIT.

There has been only a small business in Valencia raisins at 4 to 4 1-2c. for off-stalk, while layers have changed hands at 5 7-8 to 6c., but there is very little enquiry at the moment. Currants are dull at 5 to 5 3-4c., as to package. These figures of course apply only to round lots of stock, and not to ordinary jobbing sales.

GREEN FRUIT.

The green fruit market is quiet and unchanged, as all buyers are impatiently awaiting the arrival of the fruit steamers from Quebec. We quote oranges: Floridas, $4 to $4.50; California, $2.25

BURNHAM'S CLAM BOUILLON.

FLOUR AND FEED.

TORONTO.

Flour continues to rule dull and easy. Stocks in the hands of speculators and those who bought first from the farmer are heavy, but the nearer you get to the consumer, the higher they seem to get. Millfeed is unsettled, and sellers of bran at $12.50 on track could not on Tuesday get bids.

FLOUR.—City millers' and dealers' prices are: Manitoba patents, $4.35 to $4.40; strong bakers' $3.80 to $4.10; white wheat patents, $3.50 to $4.00; straight roller, $3.15 to $3.30; low grades, per bag, $1.00 to $1.25; Ontario family $3.35 to $3.75.

Car prices are: Toronto freights—Manitoba patents, $4.25 to $4.40; Manitoba strong bakers' $3.85 to $4.10; Ontario patents, $3.25 to $3.50; straight roller, $3.00 to $3.20; extra, $2.70 to $2.85; low grades, per bag, $1.00 to $1.25.

MEAL.—Oatmeal is $4.00. to $4.20. Cornmeal is $3.25 to $3.50.

FEED.—Bran (ton lots) $15.50, do (on track) $12.50 to $20, shorts (ton lots) $16, ditto (on track) $15; mixed feed $20 to $22, feeding corn 57 to 58c., oats 33 to 34c.

HAY.—Baled timothy, demand is good and supply fair at $9.25 to $9.50.

STRAW.—Plentiful and demand limited, at $5.50 to $6.

MONTREAL.

The flour market does not show any change of importance the demand being still of a purely local character. Winter wheat $4.00 to $4.25; spring patents $4.20 to $4.30; straight rollers $3.50 to $3.65; extra $3.10 to $3.25; superfine $2.60 to $2.90; city strong bakers' $4; strong bakers' $3.75 to $4.00.

MONTREAL Markets Continued.

to $3; Messina, $2.50 to $2.75; Valencia, $5 to $5.50; blood oranges, $2.25 to $3; and common to good, $1.50 to $2.

FISH

The fish market is now in its dull season, and there is nothing particular to note. In fresh stock, B.C. salmon are moving quietly at $18 to 20c., and had-dock at 4 to 4 1-2c.

BEANS

There is no change in beans, which rule steady at $1.60 to $1.65 for hand-picked western, and $1.25 to $1.50 for ordinary.

HONEY

Buyers seem to be well supplied and there is no change in price. Comb stock ranges from 9 to 13c., according to quality.

HOPS.

Hops continue dull and featureless. We quote good to choice 16 to 18c., medium 14 to 15c., and old stock 6 to 9c.

MAPLE SYRUP.

Syrup in the wood rules somewhat easier, at 50 to 60c., and sugar at 6 to 8c. The market for both the articles is practically over.

ONIONS

There is no change in onions, stocks here ruling fair. We quote yellows $3 to $3.50, and reds $3 to $3.25.

POTATOES.

The potato market is about steady at the lower prices which we noted last week. We quote Early Rose 80 to 90c., and whites 70 to 75c.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market rules very quiet, the demand being purely local in character, and prices about the same. Canadian short cut, per bbl., $20.75 to $21; mess pork, western, new, per bbl., $20.50 to $21; hams, city cured, per lb., 12 1-2 to 13 1-4c.; lard, Canadian, in pails, 12 1-2 to 13c.; bacon, per lb., 11 1-2 to 12 1-2c.; lard, com. refined, per lb., 10 1-2 to 11c.

EGGS.

The egg market gradually eases off under freer receipts, and the basis now is 11 to 11-12c. for round lots, with stocks accumulating.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

The cheese market is still featureless in so far as export business is concerned. Butter remains about the same. Receipts of new dairy are still far from large, but with the influx of any material quantity prices for a general wholesale transaction would have to fall off. There is nothing new to report either in the cost of old creamery or dairy today. New townships' dairy, 21 1-2 to 22c.; old creamery, 20 1-2 to 21c.; old dairy, 17 to 18c.

MONTREAL TRADE NOTES.

The Tamilkande tea is, according to a good conservative authority, now on sale in over 3,000 stores.

The trade here are expecting another advance in sugar at any moment.

The first cost of Barbadoes molasses f.o.b. at the Islands has been advanced 1c. to 20c., in sympathy with the advance in raw sugar.

The deputation of the wholesale grocers who waited on the Hon. Messrs. Bowell and Foster in regard to the tariff were Messrs. George Childs, George Lightbound, J. C. Rose, C. C. Hebert, Charles Chaput, W. M. Kinloch, and C.

E. Colson. The actual changes which the trade desires are rather of a trifling character, and not in any sense calculated to disturb the general principles of the National Policy. At the same time there is a very general feeling in the trade against specific duties in favor of ad valorem duties, which they consider in reality is the proper method of imposing protective duties.

Wm. Kinloch, of the firm of Kinloch, Lindsay & Co., entered upon the 51st year of his commercial career Monday. He received the congratulations of the grocery trade in general and was presented by his employees with a handsomely decorated address.

BRITISH BOARD OF TRADE RETURNS

The Board of Trade returns for the past month, says the London Times, are of a better character than were those of February, and are, indeed, more encouraging than any published for many months past. The total values, it is true, are below those of March, 1892, but it must be remembered that March included Good Friday this year, but not last. The low level of prices of commodities is still apparent, and to this fact is chiefly due the decrease of the total values of both imports and exports. The value of the imports is £34,089,413, a decrease of £2,703,781, or 7.3 per cent., and the exports of British and Irish produce are valued at £19,432,904, a decrease of £232,478, or 1.2 per cent. The most prominent decrease is as regards raw materials for textile manufacturers, and reaches the sum of £2,138,851. This is caused chiefly by the imports of raw cotton being 737,612 cwt. below the total of March, 1892, and those of sheep's wool being less by 25,749,863 lbs. The receipts of woolen rags were abnormally heavy, the weight being 16,083,200 lbs., compared with 6,569,920 lbs. and 8,028,160 lbs. in March, 1892 and 1891 respectively. The decrease in the imports of live oxen is very marked. Of the number landed, 16,738, compared with 44,032, came from the United States, low prices here having caused this falling off. On the other hand more chilled beef was landed thence. As regards wheaten flour, 1,254,564 cwt., or nearly the whole, came from the United States, but in February last year the quantity was 2,280,598 cwt. In yarns and textile fabrics, cotton yarn and cotton fabrics exports alone account for a decrease of no less than £727,910, while owing to the increased shipments of jute materials, linen, silk and woollens this heavy decrease is reduced to £543,631. Of cottons, the lessened shipments to the East have chiefly caused the reduction. Again this month a small increase in the shipments of iron is recorded. The demand for tinplates for the United States is the chief cause of this increase, that country having taken 31,334 tons, compared with 23,789. The increase in the value of the exports of machinery is nearly equally divided between "steam" and "not steam." Of mining and textile machinery, South Africa takes most of the former, and countries in Europe most of the latter. The larger shipments of alkali and bleachine materials sent to the United States have mainly caused the increases in these articles.

A LITTLE EXPERIMENT.

The fact that starch changes to sugar in process of digestion always will seem wonderful, said Addison Savoy, who is at the Lindell. Yet this process can be seen in other ways than one. I tried an experiment not long ago that illustrated to me how quickly starch would change to sugar, and hard crystal grape sugar at that. My first experiment was with a handful of wheat, which I succeeded in changing, and later I again experimented with kernels of corn, with exactly the same result. I took the grains and mashed them flat. Then I spread them out on a tin platter and poured water over them that contained a few drops of vinegar and a little sugar. I set the pan in the sun, and in a little while the water had evaporated, leaving the wheat simply covered with sugar crystals, very hard and very sweet. The few drops of sugar put in the water could not have made one-tenth of the crystals that I obtained from the wheat."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

THE FIRST GREEN PEAS.

The first new green peas of the season commenced to arrive about the first of March from Florida, Savannah and Charleston, but the market is only lightly plied, and usually with poor peas, as they are too perishable to stand the long journey, and arrive in poor order, and lack freshness, but by the latter part of April stock appears from North Carolina, and after that the market is usually fully supplied and prices reasonably low. The first peas from North Carolina this season came in last Monday, and they started with a rush, over 1,000 packages the first day, causing opening prices to be rather low. Last season the first shipments were received from Florida March 1st, from Charleston and Savannah April 10th, from North Carolina April 28th, from Norfolk May 16, from Maryland May 20th, from Jersey June 3rd, and from Long Island June 14th., the various seasons following so closely after North Carolina opened that there is little chance for the market to become bare. The North Carolina season is opening almost a week earlier than last year, but it is reported that the Norfolk and Maryland crops are slightly backward, which may cause the North Carolina yield to realize higher prices for the growers than usual, as the acreage is light, the only points where a heavy quantity was planted being Goldsboro', Newberne and Edenton. One drawback to the North Carolina peas is the fact that they have no standard package. From all other points where peas are shipped to this market there is a uniform package. Florida, Charleston and Savannah formerly shipped in bushel crates, but the last year or two they have arrived in baskets holding a trifle less than a half barrel; Norfolk ships in half-barrel crates, Eastern Shore (Vt. and Md.) and Maryland in barrels and half-barrel baskets; Jersey in half-barrel baskets, and Long Island in bags, but from North Carolina there is no regular packages; they mostly arrive in crates, but each shipper seems to have a size of his own; some hold a full half-barrel and others one-third of a bushel, and there are a dozen sizes between the two, while a few shippers are using baskets. The half-barrel basket was very popular when it first came out with both shippers and buyers, and nearly all kinds of vegetables were shipped in them, but of late some of the baskets are below the standard in size, and, while fully as high as the regular basket, they slant more toward the bottom, which is the small end, and hold less than half a barrel. Shippers would think it hard were they compelled to put a certain quantity of stock in each package, yet they do not hesitate to use the "snide" basket or other package, which makes it in disfavor with buyers. Such practices season after season will probably eventually result in a city ordinance being passed regulating the size of the package vegetables and produce are sold in, as the Retail Grocers' Association and others interested have for two or three years been trying to have such an ordinance passed.—N. Y. Bulletin.

FACTS ABOUT GINGER.

Ginger is the root of a kind of reed grown both in the East and West Indies and China, also largely in Malabar, and, to a certain extent, in nearly all tropical countries, says a contemporary, it is also to be found, though of poor quality, in most of our Gulf States. The stem or reed is an annual, and grows directly from the root every spring to the height of about three feet, with long blades or lanceolate leaves, resembling very much in style and color our American maize or corn. This reed or stalk terminates in an oblong scaly pine, and from each of the scales grows a little blue and white flower. This plant is now cultivated in very large quantities in the West Indies, especially in the Island of Jamaica, from which place the finest and most esteemed is imported. Jamaica ginger is not only cultivated to very great perfection, but the selecting, scraping, drying and all the necessary details in its preparation are observed with the utmost care and nicety. Ginger is imported into this country either in the form of the dried roots or as a preserve in syrup, and comes from Cochin China, Africa, and the East and West Indies. The preserved ginger from the West Indies is much esteemed and commands a very high price. The ginger root grows in knotty, branched pieces, in low, fenny, or marshy soils, and has a pleasant, aromatic odor and biting taste.

There are two kinds of ginger, viz., the black and the white. Black ginger consists of the inferior roots, which have been steeped in boiling water previous to being dried in the sun. The color of the darkest kinds, however, is not black, but more of a dirty brown or stone color. White ginger consists of the roundest and finest roots scraped clean, and then dried carefully without being scalded. It is firmer, less fibrous, and more pungent than the black, and from the fact that the finest and soundest roots are always selected, white ginger is, independent of the manner of its preparation, superior to black, and always realizes a much higher price in the market; but the difference of color depends wholly upon the manner of curing or preparing. For both of these kinds the tubes or roots are allowed to ripen—that is, they are not dug up until after the annual stalks are withered.

The principal varieties of ginger known in commerce are, white ginger—Jamaica, Cochin China, African, East Indian or Bengal and Tellichery; black or dark ginger—Jamaica and Malabar. Gingers imported into Europe are subjected to various modes of treatment, which tend greatly to improve and preserve them, for the finer its quality, the more susceptible is ginger to the ravages of the fly or ginger worm. These various modes of treatment are washing, brightening and bleaching, and the gingers are consequently known in the trade as "originals," viz., the ginger as imported; "washed," that which has been cleansed in water slightly acidified; "bright," the ginger which has undergone the preparatory course of bleaching; and "bleached," that which has received a coating or dressing of lime, etc. These latter modes of treatment of ginger until very recently were carried on exclusively by experts in Europe, and it is only within the past few years that the art has been introduced into this country. When a preserved ginger is required the roots are taken up in the sap, the stalks not being more than a few inches long; the young roots are scalded, then washed in cold water, and afterwards carefully peeled. This process lasts several days, during which time the water is often changed. When the cleansing is complete the tubers are put into jars and covered with a weak syrup of sugar. After a day or two this weak syrup is removed and replaced by a stronger one, and this shifting is two or three times repeated, increasing the strength of the syrup each time. The preserve thus formed is one of the finest that is made. The removed syrups are not lost but fermented into a pleasant and agreeable beverage, known as "cool drink," used very much in tropical countries. Preserved ginger, as manufactured here and in Europe, is dark and fibrous, but when prepared in the East or West Indies, or China, the West Indies especially, from the young roots, it is almost transparent. It is imported in jars and should be of a bright yellow color. Ginger is imported from Jamaica in barrels of about 100 lbs. each, with actual tare allowance; from Cochin China and Malabar in cases of about 200 lbs. each, also with actual tare allowance. African and East Indian ginger comes in bags of about 100 lbs. each, with tare of 2 lbs. each bag.

PERSONAL MENTION.

N. W. Armstrong of Stouffville was in the city Tuesday.

J. W. Lobb, formerly with Eby, Blain & Co., is now with W. G. Lambe & Co.

D. A. Brown, of Brown Bros. & Co., Elm-vale, has been touring the warehouses this week.

E. Hudson, at one time with F. W. Hudson, is now to be found in Eby, Blain & Co's sample room.

Hon. G. A. Drummond, president of the Canada Sugar Refining Company, Montreal, was on the street Tuesday.

James Lambe, who has been appointed to look after the Canadian manufacturers' exhibit at the World's Fair, left last week for Chicago.

Through a typographical error the name of Robert Munro, who his fellow travellers were said to be sympathizing with in his domestic troubles, was made to read David Moore.

A. H. Gunn, manager of the Dunwich Co-operative Association, Dutton, was in Toronto this week buying stock to replace that destroyed by the fire which recently visited that town. The association has rented a store across the street from its former premises.

H. G. Gear of Cadbury Bros., the large cocoa and chocolate manufacturers of Birmingham, Eng., accompanied by Mr. J. H. Magor, Montreal, their Canadian representative, has just completed a trip to all the leading commercial centres in Canada. Mr. Gear left Saturday for New York en route to England.

M. Gleeson of Greenwood reports trade good. His excellent stock of general goods, usually kept in first-class country stores, is more than complete. Possibly this accounts for it, together with his long residence in Greenwood, where he is a general favorite, and always carries first-class goods at bottom prices for the purchaser.

J. Fred. Ramsay on behalf of the Pure Gold Man'g Co.'s employees, on Saturday last presented Geo. F. Anderson, the company's cashier, with a very handsome bronze clock, on the occasion of his approaching marriage, which takes place on Thursday, May 4th. Mr. Anderson, in a few words expressed his pleasure, in his usual happy manner.

The representatives of four London, England, tea houses struck Toronto together this week. They were: H. W. G. Hopkins, of Appleton, Machin & Smiles; —. Tudor, of J. and J. Batten & Co.; —. Devereaux, of Harrison & Crossfield, and W. B. Redfern, of McMeekin & Co. "Toronto must be getting a great tea centre, judging from the attention it is receiving lately," a broker was heard to remark.

A BIT OF WOODENWARE HISTORY.

Taylor, Scott & Co., manufacturers of woodenware and brooms, Toronto, have dissolved. The dissolution was by lapse of time, and was in compliance with the agreement entered into when the partnership was formed five years ago. Mr. Scott retires, and the business will be carried on by Mr. George C. Taylor under the old style.

Toronto can point with pride to the rapid and substantial growth of many of her manufacturing industries, but probably to none more so than to that controlled by Taylor, Scott & Co. It was originally known by the name of Walter Woods & Co., when Mr. George C. Taylor was the managing partner. Five years ago the firm was re-organized and received its present name of Taylor, Scott & Co. Since then there has been almost a phenomenal growth in the business. The output of the firm is found in practically every part of the Dominion—from Halifax to British Columbia. The trade of Canada conquered, Taylor, Scott & Co. reached across the Atlantic; and now their brooms and washboards are being used by the busy house-wives and servants in the four Kingdoms of England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales. And what is more the business has been a profitable one, Taylor, Scott & Co. not having sacrificed their capital in undue haste to secure business. Their broom business is reputed to be the largest in the country.

In order to keep pace with the increasing demand the firm has been from time to time compelled to enlarge its accommodation and bring in new and the latest improved machinery. The washboard and broom factories are situated at 1 to 7 and 2 to 6 Pearl street and 110 Bay street, while their offices and warerooms are conveniently adjacent at 120 Bay street. Over 100 hands are employed in the factories. The present firm retains all the patents possessed by the old firm, and will continue to manufacture the Northern Queen and Improved Globe washboards, the staple boards of the country.

GROCERS AND THEIR TORMENTORS.

The small boy is often a thorn in the side of the retail grocer in the cities. Crowds of youngsters sometimes gather in front of the grocery stores and pilfer fruits and vegetables, pull down boxes, run off with barrels, and in many other ways annoy the proprietors and their assistants. The result is that the grocers get worked up to the boiling point, and when they capture one of the young scamps it is apt to go hard with him. Several cases have recently been reported in the New York and Brooklyn papers of arrests of grocers on a charge of assaulting small boys, the latest being that of Ernest Resitzke, of 246 Hoyt street, Brooklyn, arrested one day last week for striking the young son of a local poli-teman. An additional charge, of assaulting the boy's father, was later preferred against Mr. Resitzke, who is out on bail, but will have to appear in court this week. Doubtless many persons who have read of this case in the newspapers will condemn the grocer for what they consider to be brutality, but could they put themselves in his place and go through a few weeks with the New York or Brooklyn small boy of the tenement house districts, they would not hastily condemn him. It is a pity that reputable tradesmen do not more often receive police protection against the annoyances of the juvenile aggressors. They pay for it in taxes, and, in the case of the grocery trade, the free sampling of the dealers' fruits that most policemen indulge in should procure the storekeeper relief from the depredations of the small boy. —Merchants' Review.

CANNED FRUITS IN COOKERY.

Most housekeepers, says the New York Tribune, do not make as much use of preserved fruits in made dishes as they might. Unfortunately they show very little ingenuity in preparing canned fruit into that variety of puddings and other deserts such as the French and German housekeepers excel in. The simplest German families make the delightful peach and apple kuchen, which may be found at a few of our very best city bakeries. This is simply a raised biscuit dough, to which about a half cup of sugar is added. Roll this dough out till it is not over half an inch thick. Cover it with rich canned peaches or well flavored apples. Dredge it with sugar (granulated is better than powdered) and bake it in a quick oven with a good heat at the bottom. Cover it while it is baking if it cooks too much on top. It should be done in fifteen minutes. Serve it as it is, or with a pitcher of sweet cream.

There are many steamed or boiled puddings which may be made of canned fruit just as well as they may be made of fresh fruit. There are many delightful blanc manges which may be made by adding a base of preserved strawberries, raspberries or apricots in their syrup, stiffened to a jelly. Where there is an abundance of fresh cream, as there should be on every farm, the variety of wholesome deserts, which may be made with whipped cream flavored with fruit juices is very large. It includes the excellent Bavarian creams, charlotte russes, dishes of rice mixed with whipped cream and served with a sauce of whipped cream and preserved fruit, as well as many frozen deserts.

DRY GOODS.

(From the Dry Goods Review.)

The past week has seen a continuance of a slow trade. The last two weeks in April were disappointing to the wholesalers, and trade does not compare favorably with April of last year. Most of the houses report a falling off in April trade, due no doubt to the tardiness of the opening up of spring trade in country districts. The weather has been exceedingly unfavorable, and roads are in a bad state. May will be a good month, if the weather brightens, of which there is no prospect at time of writing.

Black ground delaines are very scarce in this market. Wholesalers are unable to have their orders filled by the English firms.

French woolen fabrics are up. Henriettas, whipcords and Bengalines have been in such strong demand from the French manufacturers that they have increased prices from 8 to 17 1-2 per cent. These goods promise to be in good demand for next season, and dealers here are guarding their stocks of these fabrics. Soft wools have advanced 10 per cent. Reports from the London wool market show an increase in sales of about 10 per cent., owing to the increased demand from the French manufacturers.

NOTES

Alexander & Anderson have made a special purchase of flannelettes comprising 3,000 pieces of one quality. This will be offered as a drive for the special benefit of their customers. They also show an excellent range of English flannelettes and Ceylon flannels. These are seasonable goods. Printed flannels in spots, stripes and fancies are also to hand, and their stock is very complete.

Caldecott, Burton & Spence have a full stock of quilts in honey-comb, Marseilles and satins in all sizes and in various qualities.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling are receiving their summer and fall print samples. Black grounds with colored flowers, indigo blues, red grounds, and garnet grounds will be popular. Delaine effects in cream grounds will also run.

John Macdonald & Co. report a strong demand for braces and top-shirts. Their special values in these lines seem to be meeting with the approval of the buying public. A shipment of covered and uncovered eiderdown sofa cushions and tea-cosies are to hand, and are worthy of inspection.

W. R. Brock & Co. are cleaning out a variety of odd lines of prints, and customers wanting goods to sell from 5 to 10 cent could do well to examine these lines, as the value of these drives is much higher than is regularly offered for these prices. Travellers cannot inform dealers of these bargains, and only visitors will secure them.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling are showing a large and extensive range of ladies' and children's lisle, taffeta and pure silk gloves and mitts. Silk lace mitts are shown in lines of special value. A line of these at $2 is exceedingly meritorious. The enquiry for all classes of gloves is fairly brisk at present, and will continue until the end of June. This house endeavor to keep their stock well assorted all through the season.

Odds and ends of dress goods at clearing prices are being offered by John Macdonald & Co. These are the balance of this season's stocks and all the drives are excellent bargains. Printed challies and lawns are in good demand, and they are prepared for all orders on these goods. Other midsummer fabrics, such as crepons, lustrés, muslins, etc., are in good demand.

Art muslins have been re-stocked by Alexander & Anderson, and especially in cheap lines they show excellent values and some very natty patterns.

W. R. Brock & Co. are showing some very handsome novelties in domestic tweeds for summer suitings. A complete range of shades in Halifax tweeds is also shown, including the new and fashionable blues. Another shipment of hard-make black and blue worsted serges has just been passed into stock. These goods are very active at present, and half the shipment was sold before entry.

Horn hairpins are very much in demand just now. Gordon, Mackay & Co. advise that they are in receipt of a large assortment of these goods in shell color. Good styles and right prices are their qualities.

Heliotrope and purple spot veillings have been stocked by Alexander & Anderson. These goods are strong in demand at present and bid fair to continue.

Three cases of cashmere hosiery have just been passed into stock by W. R. Brock & Co., making their range complete in every detail. They have had an extra strong demand for their lines of cashmere hosiery for the present season, and believe it to be due to the extraordinary value offered. There is considerable enquiry for their special lines of Hermsdorf's stainless black cotton, and they will keep all sizes in stock throughout the season.

Caldecott, Burton & Spence are showing a good range of lace curtains in various qualities. A leading line at 75 cents is extra value. Other leaders are shown at $1.10, $1.25, $1.50, and $2.25. These lines include the latest designs and patterns, and are exceedingly fine stock. In Swiss curtains they are showing a range from $2.75 to $9 in the newest patterns. These are all this season's importations and are meritorious goods. In Chenille curtains they are showing a leader at $1.25 which is of true stock and of beautiful design and finish. Other chenilles are shown in different styles and qualities in various prices up to $12 per pair.

A further shipment of ladies' American ribbed cotton vests, "Rattler," is to hand with W. R. Brock & Co. This line they have been selling in large quantities to all the live merchants from Halifax to Vancouver, and have lately placed a further repeat with the factory in order to supply the demand for the next two months. They anticipate before the season is over to have distributed 10,000 dozen of this line.

Wool delaines in cream, navy, and black grounds are being shown by Gordon, Mackay & Co. in an extensive range of scarce designs.

Most of us are prone to view our surrounding in the worst light. It is one of the weaknesses of humanity. Who we inherited it from is not known. It might have come down through the ages from the first parent, but whoever was the father of the peculiarity it is with us—and to stay. Grocers have as much of the "happy-go-lucky" about them as any class of business men and a good deal more than some, but they too are tinged with this peculiarity. Business is not as good as it might be. A bare existence only is what they eke out; and such a thing as affluence is not to be dreamed of. It is in this and similar strains that they belittle their business. But now and then a little incident crops up to show that the lot of the average grocer is on the whole not such an unhappy one after all. Readers of THE GROCER will have particularly noticed this during the last few weeks by the number of news items that have appeared regarding improvements in the store of this and that merchant and the removal of one here and another there to more commodious premises. The reason is obvious; expanding trade needs more accommodation. In spite of the keen competition and the often reckless cutting that characterizes it, the grocery trade is as remunerative as most lines of trade and the number of grocers who are to-day in easy circumstances proves it. If merchants neglect their business, if they know little or nothing about it, if they do not buy right, if they do not exercise proper scrutiny of their accounts, if they lack capital they cannot be expected to succeed. Fortify a good live grocer with these requisities and he will, under ordinary circumstances succeed every time.

* * *

The evils existing in the grocery trade are mostly from within. Some of them will probably never be eradicated, but it is within the power of the trade to control, if not remove, most of them. Every merchant can refrain from the indiscriminate giving of credit; and by associated effort much can be done in the direction of minimizing the evil of unfair competition and clipping the wings of dead-beats and bad-paying customers.

* * *

Retail profits on sugar is a fruitful theme for discussion by English grocery associations at the moment. The increased interest in the subject received its impetus from the strong condition of the market. And it is to be noted that in most instances the associations have decreed that there shall be a fractional advance in the price to the consumer. Associated effort in this direction is not looked upon with favor in this country. It has been attempted, with what result is well known. But at the same time the influence of a strong and united association could do much in bringing the trade to recognize the absurdity of selling sugar—or any other commodity for that matter—at or below cost. Wherever there is a congregation of merchants there ought to be an association of some kind, no matter how small its membership may be. The Official Statistical Abstract, an English journal, recently published a table showing the relative importance in weight and money of the various commodities dealt in by grocers, and in which it is shown that the consumption of sugar is seven times as heavy as that of other groceries, spices excepted, and not far short of double the consumption of groceries and imported provisions taken together. These figures however include the sugar that is used for preserving, confectionery, etc. The figures referred to show the consumption per head in 1891 of the leading imported commodities sold by grocers to be: Provisions and rice 37.59 pounds, groceries without sugar 11.51 pounds, groceries and provisions without sugar 49.10 pounds, sugar and molasses 81.50 pounds; turn over in money with each customer—provisions and rice 17s. 3¼d., groceries without sugar 9s. 3¼d., groceries and provisions without sugar 26s. 7½d., sugar and molasses 10.10. A contemporary in referring to the figures adduced in the table says: "In the case of tea it will be seen that ¼d. per pound more profit on sugar would enable the price of the former to be lowered 4d. per pound. If the average price be 1s. 2½d. duty paid, it follows that an immense weight must cost very materially over 1s. 2½d. without profit to the retailer." Further on it says that the key to the situation "is to be found in the price of sugar, and the grocers have to ask themselves under existing circumstances whether it pays best to sell one pound of sugar at ½d. per pound profit—or possibly at a loss—or one pound of common tea at 1½d. or 2½d. per pound profit. No doubt in most places a relative advance in the price of sugar, as compared with other commodities, might require mutual arrangement among neighbors. Surely, however, if bakers and butchers, who have nothing like the business standing of grocers, can regulate, as they do the price of bread or of meat, the grocers ought to be able to come to some satisfactory arrangement among themselves. * * * The more sugar sold at a loss by opponents who are mainly interested in tea, the more must be added to the selling price of tea. * * * The sale of sugar at a ¼d. per pound loss must soon end in bankruptcy nowadays, if tea and similar commodities are sold cheaply by those who are getting a profit on sugar. The argument that people can, as it were, see the price in sugar, while they cannot do so in tea, is fallacious. The public scents out cheapness in a marvellous way, even in commodities difficult of accurate valuation by experts themselves."

* * *

The wants of the wholesale grocers that waited upon the Federal Ministers last week in Toronto were few. The most important was in regard to sugar, and the burden of their request was that all sugars up to 16 Dutch standard should be allowed to come in free instead of only up to 14 as at present, and that the duty on refined be half cent a pound in place of the four-fifths of a cent now obtaining. The tariff as it now stands in regard to sugar was the result of the pressure of public opinion consequent upon the free entry of refined sugar into the United States. Now, however, it is probable that the Cleveland Administration will again restore sugar to the dutiable list during the work of tariff reform and discontinue the paying of bounties to the producers. What our Government may be induced to do if such takes place is a query with some. One thing however may be taken for granted, the Canadian people will scarcely brook any increase in the duty should the Government see fit to comply with the request for a reduction. But it is folly to count your chickens before they are hatched. It has yet to be revealed that the Government has any intention of making a change. Regarding rice, it was thought that the protection afforded was greater than necessary. The soap manufacturers who waited upon the ministers asked that they be permitted to bring in tallow and essential oils free instead of paying one cent a pound and 20 per cent. respectively as at present. Possessed of these privileges they intimated that they did not give a snap of the fingers for United States competition. The Canadian Canned Goods Packers' Association, which happened to be holding a meeting here, also waited upon the Ministers. Their wants, too, were of the few and unimportant character. They were satisfied to have things remain much as at present, for while they had no great fear of American competition, yet at the same time they urged that whatever rearrangement was made in the tariff it should not give the packers across the line privileges that the United States Government denied the Canadian packers.

INDIAN AND CEYLON vs. CHINA TEAS.

THE GROCER had occasion a couple of months ago to refer to the extraordinary growth of the consumption of Indian and Ceylon teas in Great Britain. We again revert to it, and are actuated in doing so by a statistical statement just issued, showing the relative consumption of Indian, Ceylon and China teas in Great Britain during the twenty-seven years beginning with 1866, and ending with 1892. In the former year the consumption of Indian and China teas was 4,584,000 and 97,681,000 lbs. respectively. No Ceylon teas were then consumed in Great Britain, nor were there in fact any till seven years after, and then the quantity was only twenty-three pounds. By 1885, however, the consumption was over three million pounds. The British, as a tea-drinking nation are gradually becoming more pronounced. In 1866 the quantity of India and China teas consumed was 3.42 pounds per head, while from then onward the increase has been gradual, until last year it reached 5.43 pounds per head, the highest yet. Up to 1879 China shared in the increased consumption, in which year the consumption of this tea in Britain reached its maximum, 126,340,000 pounds. The following year there was a drop of nearly twelve million pounds, and from that out there was a continual decline, until in 1892 it fell to 34,483,408 pounds against 109,528,169 pounds of Indian and 63,102,127 pounds of Ceylon. This means that of the three teas consumed in Great Britain last year 84 per cent. was Indian and Ceylon, and only 16 per cent. China tea.

In the United States Indian and Ceylon teas are not yet in the favor they are in Great Britain. But in Canada they are gradually pushing their way to the front, and the consumption last year being, as already shown in THE GROCER, nearly double what it was two years previously.

There are several reasons advanced for the rapidity with which the Indian and Ceylon teas are springing into favor. The first in quality. It is claimed that outside some high-class teas produced in Northern China—and which those of no other country can yet equal—the teas of India and Ceylon growth are of superior quality. Another recommendation claimed for them is their economical properties, much less being required to brew the cup that cheers but not inebriates. The comparative methods of cultivation and preparation have also contributed to place India and Ceylon in the foreground and China in the background. In a word, the two first named have adopted newer methods, while the Chinese planter still clings to the old and ancient methods that have been discarded by their more progressive competitors.

CHATS WITH BUSINESS MFN.

"I see that some of the retailers are reported to have said that the consumption of package teas is falling off on account of so many of them being of inferior quality," said Mr. J. F. Eby, of Eby, Blain & Co., to me the other day, as he quietly folded his arms and leaned against the shelves in his sample room. "Now, we claim that the package teas put up in certain brands, backed by good houses, have not changed in quality in any case, and, furthermore, that the consumption is increasing instead of decreasing, and that too in parts of the country where we have never sold black teas before. These teas are taking hold. We have sold quite a lot of them, and any retailer who is under the impression that the packet tea trade is diminishing is mistaken; for the higher grades and under certain brands, sold by good reputable houses, are finding their trade increasing. The public need not be alarmed about the packet teas that are put up under well-known brands. The public can depend upon getting the same class of tea. Uniformity will be kept right up to the market. Some of those houses here spent thousands of dollars in advertising. Take Ram Lal and the Orient package teas for instance. Now, don't you think the packers of these teas would be fools to go and reduce their quality? Why, of course they would. These houses have their reputation at stake, and this alone is an absolute guarantee that the tea will not be reduced in quality," concluded Mr. Eby, as he turned on his heel and resumed the work of testing teas.

* * *

"Well I was surprised," remarked Mr. F. Dane to me Saturday as he swung half a dozen or more of sample tea boxes from his right to his left arm.

"Surprised at what?" I queried.

"Why, surprised at what I saw regarding the kind of teas they keep in stock up west," he explained. "I was up in a western town the other day valuing some teas that had been damaged by fire. I fully expected to find three-fourths of them Japan, but, would you believe it, the greater part was Indian and Ceylon teas. Of course I knew that the consumption of these teas is rapidly on the increase in the country, but I was not prepared to see such a large stock as that which greeted my eyes this week."

* * *

I met Mr. J. Ross, of Sloan & Crowther, Saturday morning. He had just returned from his regular trip north, and while immediate business is quiet indeed, he spoke hopefully of the future. "There has," he said, "been a good deal of timber taken out this season. Then there is lots of water, and there will be no difficulty in getting the logs out. Last year, you will remember, there were a large number of logs left in the woods, owing to the scarcity of water. Then, too, prices are good. Oh, yes, the merchants north look for a good year," concluded Mr. Ross, as he resumed the replenishing of his sugar samples.

* * *

I ran against a group of city travellers on Saturday morning. "O," said one of them, as I cast an enquiring look at them, "we are merely out making the closing arrangements for our excursion to Niagara Falls and Buffalo, to be held July 17. But, say, don't you think it would be a good thing if the houses would call their travellers in on that day and give them a good time for once? I think it would." "And so say we all," came in a chorus from his fellow knights of the grip sack.

BYSTANDER.

BAD PAYING CIVIL SERVANTS.

Monday night's meeting of the Retail Grocers' Association was the most interesting held for some time. The attendance showed some improvement, and there were some interesting and timely talks. The meeting was held in Oddfellows' hall, Yonge and College streets, the new headquarters of the association, but not in the hall allotted to them, it being in course of reconstruction. This room will be finished by the next meeting, when a little entertainment will be provided in addition to the regular business.

President Clark presided, and among those present were Messrs. Robert Mills, M. McMillan, A. R. Williamson, R. Donald, H. W. McCulloch, A. G. Booth, J. S. Bond, Sinclair, F. S. Roberts, Bailie, A. White, Wardell, Secretary Corrie.

William Taylor, of 332 Spadina avenue, and J. Simpson, of Wilton avenue, were elected members.

Mr. Robert Mills reported that the committee appointed to arrange for an entertainment for the opening meeting had been unable to do so owing to certain alterations that were being made in the building. He supplemented his remarks with the information that in consequence of the limits of the hall being curtailed the rent would be $1.50 per meeting instead of $2.50, as first proposed.

Mr. Mills also reported that the executive had arranged for holding an excursion to Niagara Falls August 2, via steamer and electric railway. He explained that boats would leave Toronto at 7, 9, and 11 o'clock. The steamboat company would charge the association 50 and 90 cents for tickets, which it could sell at 65 cents and $1.25. Mr. Mills suggested that some arrangements be made to provide entertainment for the excursionists on the return trip.

On motion of Mr. Bond, the report was adopted.

Mr. R. Harvey, secretary of the Hamilton Retail Grocers' Association, wrote stating that his association had appointed a committee to act in conjunction with the Trades and Labor Council for the purpose of urging upon the Government the advisability of passing an act to compel the payment of wages weekly, and asking that the Toronto Association appoint a deputation to act in conjunction with the two committees referred to.

Secretary Corrie explained that he had answered this communication informing the Hamilton Association that the question would not come up at the present session of the House.

The London Retail Grocers' Association wrote asking the co-operation of the Toronto Association in bringing influence to bear on the Government to repeal or amend the act so that the salary of civil service employees may be attached or garnisheed; also regarding the Pharmacy bill now before the House.

Mr. Mills said that in reference to the communication re Pharmacy bill, the President, Vice-president, Secretary, Mr. Roberts and himself had waited upon Mr. Tait, M.L.A. They found that the bill had been considerably modified since first introduced, and learned, furthermore, that the bill would come before the committee on Tuesday. On the morning of that day the President and himself appeared before the committee. The pharmacists were there in large numbers, and T. Eaton & Co. were represented by J. J. McLaren, Q.C. President Clark and himself remained in attendance for a couple of hours, but were then compelled to go away without getting an opportunity to address the committee, but not before they saw enough to convince them that the bill had not much chance of becoming law.

President Clark—Explains that the committee adjourned without doing anything, and that the bill was likely to be withdrawn.

Mr. Mills—Yes, and I don't think we have much to fear from the bill now. With reference to such medicines as castor oil, the druggists said it was a mistake to think that the sale of them was to be prohibited by all but qualified druggists. It was so proposed in the bill as first drafted, but not in the one now before the House. It was only such articles as Paris green that it aimed to prohibit.

Mr. White questioned whether the executive committee had the right to transact business at the time.

The subject then dropped.

Mr. Williamson, in broaching the subject of bad paying civil servants, and the extraordinary protection thrown around them by the law, said that although the subject was one that had already been discussed by the Association, he believed that some action should be taken along the lines suggested by the London Association.

Mr. Bond—I don't see why those officials have any more right to be protected by the law from paying their just debts than have any other class of employees. I hope the association will take some action that will result in those gentlemen being compelled to pay their debts as well as the rest of us.

Mr. Roberts—Mr. Tait told us that there were so many men in the employment of the Government that had been unsuccessful in business that there was a fear that an amendment in the law would open the way for their creditors to come upon them.

Several members disclaimed any intention of seeking such radical amendments as to allow this being done.

President Clark—Mr. Tait also said that if the heads of the departments were interviewed they would compel the delinquents to pay their debts or discharge them.

Mr. Williamson—Well, if they would do that that is all we want. He moved the appointment of a committee to draw up a suitable resolution regarding the matter for presentation to the Dominion and Provincial Governments.

It was so decreed, and these were appointed the committee: President Clark, Secretary Corrie, R. Donald, Robert Mills.

Upon the suggestion of Mr. Donald, it was decided to combine business with pleasure at the next meeting. After the transaction of routine business there will be a program of songs, readings, and a debate on the subject: "Resolved, That the commercial travellers are a benefit to the trade." Mr. Donald will lead the affirmative, and Mr. Mills the negative, after which there will be an impromptu discussion. Cigars will be provided, and a printed program will be sent out to the members. President Clark, Robert Mills and R. Donald were deputed to make the necessary arrangements.

Mr. Williamson introduced the subject of the association employing a solicitor to advise the members re accounts, and to write letters to delinquent debtors, but it was decided to defer discussion of the subject.

A TRAVELING MAN'S DEVICE.

"My wife and I," said a traveling man, "were once in a hotel where we couldn't get any boiling water. After we had discussed the situation my wife asked me if I had an envelope in my satchel. I got one out when she told me to fill it with water and hold it over the gas jet. I hesitated, but finally did it and expected to see the envelope blaze up every moment. But it didn't blaze. The envelope took on a little soot, but that was all. The water boiled in time and the envelope was as good as ever when the experiment was at an end. I don't know the chemistry of the process, but try it yourself and see if it will not work."

BAD-PAYING CIVIL SERVANTS.

DEAR GROCER,—Allow me to express gratification and thanks for the valuable and interesting matter contained in each number of THE GROCER. Every grocer who desires to keep in touch with his trade should read it. It contains useful and intelligent articles embracing every branch of the business. The object in writing to you is to make some suggestions in a matter discussed by the London Grocers' Association at a recent meeting, on which they invite correspondence—viz., the collection of debts from Government employes. So far as I can ascertain, the special reason why governments do not make garnishees against their employes legal, is that, in order to protect themselves, they would require to be represented by counsel in every case brought before the courts. We can readily understand the amount of trouble and expense which that would mean. From observation and experience I note that large corporations—the Grand Trunk Railway, for instance—are always represented by counsel at courts where a garnishee is issued against an employe. Their remedy is that when a second garnishee is issued against an employe to dismiss him at once.

Now, I am not a lawyer or versed in the law, but a simple country grocer. My suggestion is this: Try to get the government to legalize an after-judgment garnishee. That is after judgment has been obtained in a competent court, when there can be no doubt as to the justice or legality of the claim and the government could not well be held wrongfully liable, allow a garnishee to be issued, and if any unusual phase of the case should arise the judges could be authorized to see that nothing was done to the prejudice of the government.

The original garnishee law has been so spoiled by tinkering legislators that it is of very little use. The clause now allowing $25 wages exempt should be amended to $10, or altogether done away with. If so amended there may very occasionally be a case of hardship, but not one in a hundred to the wrong and hardship endured by the business man who is wronged by the dishonesty of his debtors and whose business existence depends on the prompt payment of his debts.

I am well acquainted with a part of the country where there are a large number of government men, and it is a burning evil to business men that there are men with small families, receiving fair pay, who will not pay for their every day maintenance, and that the very men whom they defraud assist to pay their salaries.

It is to be hoped that the London Grocers' Association will persist in having this great evil rectified, and very many will wish them success and be thankful.

Yours, etc.,

COUNTRY GROCER.

R. MACORQUODALE'S REJOINDER

DEAR GROCER,—The letter over my signature in your issue of April 28th, anent the purchase of tea, was only intended as friendly advice and was not, I think, calculated to give any one offence. When I say that we are liable to be prejudiced in favor of the tea for which the highest price is asked, I refer only to people with whom I have done business, and think that I also have the same prejudice. I have yet to meet a wholesale dealer or broker who is not affected somewhat by it. If the retail dealers are not similarly affected it must be because they are better acquainted with that branch of the business. Your correspondent, W. F. P., 255 Queen street west, complains of some travellers as offensive persons with a predilection for taking a free lunch at his expense. As I never had the pleasure of knowing him or his place of business, I cannot say to what extent he suffers from his unwelcome visitors, but I think he is right in excluding them, especially if the free lunch would make a large inroad on his capital.

Not knowing your correspondent, I have no unfriendly feeling towards him, as I do not think he could find occasion for writing what he calls a reply to my letter. It is probable he has only stultified himself by allowing some other person to use his name, for the purpose of saying what he (the other person) thought clever, and, under the circumstances, safe.

With your permission, Mr. Editor, I propose to give you, in a few letters, some notes on tea culture in India and Ceylon, including varieties, picking, curing, acreage, sales, bulking, etc., as my time will permit.

Yours, etc.,

D. S. MACORQUODALE,

THE HOP COMBINE BROKEN.

Some time ago, as reported in the Trade Bulletin, the growers and dealers in Prince Edward county came to an agreement not to sell hops of 1892 growth under a certain figure, say 22c. or 23c. per lb., the dealers maintaining that by such combined action they could force prices up to the point growers were asking. Consequently, growers refused to entertain any bids under the stipulated figure; but after this holding process continued for quite a time, it was found that the dealers had a considerable quantity of yearlings on hand, and had taken advantage of the agreement to hold new hops at a certain high rate, in order to work off their yearlings, which it seems they have done pretty effectually. The growers, finding this out when it was too late, at once offered their best 1892 growth at several cents below the combine prices, and sold a good portion of their holdings at 20c. for choice qualities; a few fancy lots, equal in every respect to the finest New York State hops, bringing 22c. but to-day the best kinds can be had at 18c. and good at 16c. to 17. Brewers here appear to be well loaded up for the time being, and are not buying except extra inducements are offered by holders to induce them to anticipate their requirements to any extent, and consequently a good quantity of 1892 growth is still in farmers' hands. The Prince Edward county growers are enraged over the breach of faith manifested on the part of dealers, if correspondence from Picton and vicinity are to be relied on. This is another of the many instances in which certain members of syndicates or combines take undue advantage of agreements at the expense of the majority. It is claimed that there was no combine in regard to yearlings, but the growers claim there was. It is scarcely probable that farmers would come to an understanding with dealers to hold for a certain figure, and at the same time allow the latter to supply the market with their underpriced yearlings, to the injury of the market for the new crop. Be that as it may, there is no combine in Prince Edward county hops now.—Trade Bulletin.

VALUE OF RICE AS FOOD.

Rice is the principal food of about 800,000,000 persons, or 54 per cent., of the 1,500,000,000 people who inhabit the earth. There is no other vegetable product so widely consumed. A people's diet is largely a matter of education, and Americans need educating as to the food value of this grain. It is especially adapted to the wants of a meat eating people like our own and is highly nutritious. According to a late report from the U. S. Department of Agriculture a pound of rice contains 86.09 per cent. of nutritive matter, against 82.54 per cent. for wheat, 82.79 per cent. for rye, 74.02 per cent. for oats, 82.97 per cent. for corn, 23.24 per cent. for potatoes, 46.03 per cent. for fat beef and 26.83 per cent. for lean beef.

Rice heads the list. But its nutritive qualities differ widely from most of the other foods in the comparison. It is essentially a heat producing, fattening food. Lean beef contains about 21 per cent. of albuminoids, which produce bone, muscle and blood, and less than one-half of 1 per cent. of the heat producing carbohydrates. Of the former rice contains only 6.73 per cent., but 78.48 per cent. of the latter. It is thus seen that these two food products admirably supplement each other. Rice is also easily digested, requiring, when boiled, one hour for the process, against three required by roast beef.

Though extensive rice lands are lying waste in the Southern States, the United States produce on an average only about half of their limited consumption.

DOWN IN A SALT MINE.

When the signal sounds, the first thing you do is to hug your hat down on your head for keeps, and by the time you have got that act accomplished it seems as though you were going down at the rate of 1,000 miles a minute. You have seen one streak of greased lightning chase another—well, it's no comparison. It seems as though the cable has been cut, and you are just dropping down to the bottom. You can't see, and the only thing to be heard is that terrible roar of the air as you rush through space. After the first 200 or 300 feet there is a feeling it would be hard to explain, sort of a goneness as it were, and you don't care much whether school keeps or not, and the changes are so different and varied that one begins to wonder what will come next.

When near the bottom the car on which you are riding begins to slow up, and then comes the most peculiar experience of all. You imagine that you are shooting upward, and you will soon be among the stars. You can imagine the sensation of going down at the rate of about 100 miles a minute to going up at about seven times that rate. Finally the car arrives at the bottom of the shaft, and you breathe a sigh of relief as you step out.

Well, the first thing you do is to look for salt; it's there, all around you, above, beneath, on all sides, but it don't look much like salt near the bottom of the shaft, as lights are burned constantly and the smoke has blackened the wall. You look away to the east through a long, dark tunnel, and you discern in the far distance some flickering lights, and you are informed that they are lights used by the workmen who are engaged in mining the salt. Your guide steps up to a man near where you land, and says: "Three lights, please," and three tallow candles are handed out. It may seem a little strange that tallow candles are used in this age of kerosene, gas and electricity, but such is the case, and they are the only lights used in the mine, and they are hung up from the ceiling where the mining of salt is going on, and they are the handiest lights that can be used. They don't purchase these lights by the dozen or hundred, but by the carload.

The candles were lighted, and with them in hand we followed the guide and proceeded to make a tour of the mine; we might add, a partial tour, for it would take a person something like a week to walk over all the mined territory. We followed the guide along through dark and winding pathways, until we reached a point where the workmen were busily engaged mining the salt. They were not at work with picks picking it out, as might be supposed, but were breaking up the large lumps and shoveling it into the cars, the salt having been blasted out ahead of them. While some were engaged in shoveling the salt, others were drilling holes into the solid mass, making ready for a blast, machines run by compressed air being used for this purpose.

As above stated, the main tunnel runs directly east, and is nearly a half mile in length. Near the shaft two other tunnels branch off from the main tunnel, one on either side, and run parallel with it. These, we believe, are termed airshafts. From these shafts' rooms branch off both north and south, and in these rooms is where the salt is mined. These rooms are nothing more or less than short tunnels, and in time will probably be lengthened out as far as the main tunnel or even further, as they can go miles in any direction and still be in the salt. The rooms are, perhaps, 20 or 30 feet wide, and 7 to 8 feet in height. A section of salt some 30 feet in thickness is left between each room as a support to the solid mass above. A roof, and a substantial roof it makes, as the salt in its natural state is almost as hard as rock. There are no other supports than the columns of salt that are left.

Of these rooms mentioned there are fifty or sixty at the present time, and the workmen are distributed about, working in several rooms at a time. There is no necessity of a foreman in each room, as the number of carloads of salt delivered at the shaft tells the tale as to whether the men are shirking their duty or not. A railway runs through the main tunnel and branches extend in all directions. The cars are hauled from the several rooms by large, powerful mules, and there are some thirty of these in the mine.

One may imagine that a salt mine is a bad place to work, but aside from the fact that it is a little dismal, there are no bad features about it. Unlike a coal mine, it is clean, and there is almost an even temperature the year round, ranging from 58 to 60 deg. winter and summer. The ventilation is perfect, and the system for supplying fresh air is not excelled by any mine in the world. In some of the passageways the air rushed through with such velocity as to extinguish the lights.

The experience going up the shaft is somewhat different from that while going down. The signal is given from below after you have been safely stationed in the car, and away she goes, your hat sinks down firmly on your head, and your clothing seems to sit right down tight where it belongs. A person who is a little weak in the knees would also have a tendency to sit right down tight on the bottom of the car. The roar of the wind as you hustle up toward daylight is about all that can be heard. When near the top the speed is lessened, and it is then that one imagines that he is going down again at the rate of about 1,000 miles a minute, but finally the daylight begins to peep down at you and you are landed safely on top, only a few seconds having elapsed since you walked upon the car below.—Genesee Democrat.

HE DID A TALE UNFOLD.

An enterprising canned goods packer sold a Toronto retailer a quantity of his products and they turned out to be inferior in quality. The retailer asked the packer to take the goods back. The packer agreed to do so on condition that the retailer in question would go to one or more wholesale houses, ask for this particular brand of goods, and if the jobber had not any to urge him to buy them telling him they were the finest on the market. The retailer went to the jobber, but he told him instead of the little scheme the packer was putting up on him.

NEW VARIETY OF ORANGE.

Great is art, when it comes in to supplement and assist the processes of nature! A scientific horticulturist of Duarte has succeeded, by a system of hybridization and cross-fertilization, in producing a new variety of orange. It is a cross between the Washington Navel, the Malta Blood, the paper-rind St. Michael and the Mediterranean Sweet. The method by which he accomplished this feat is his own secret, of course, but the result is the property of the orange growers of Southern California when trees of the new variety are disseminated and furnish facilities for further propagation by budding, says the Orange Belt. We were shown the other day an orange of the new variety. The sample examined was of medium size, indicating a considerable modification of the large Washington Navel, which is a desirable change. The skin was of a close, fine texture and soft as a kid glove; navel mark clearly but not prominently shown. The fruit was firm and heavier than the average. On opening the rind proved rather thick, but the pulp was of fine and delicate texture and juice abundant. It proved to be sweeter than the average Washington Navel, but possessed of its characteristic winey flavor. There was none of the interior markings of the Malta Blood. The fruit was entirely seedless. If it be possible to procure a finer fruit than the Washington Navel, we should say that here is a variety which excels it in several particulars. First, it is of smaller size; second, it is heavier and probably carries a higher percentage of juice; third, it is sweeter without sacrificing the sub-acid flavor. We would suggest that the fruit might be still further improved by additional crossings with the paper-rind St. Michael, or the Malta Blood, to reduce the thickness of skin, though care would have to be taken not to reduce the size of the fruit too much.

That the owner of the new variety prizes it highly is attested by the fact that he has refused to sell buds from his tree at the rather tempting price of one dollar a bud. The new orange has been before the public two or three years, and in time we suppose the variety will become generally disseminated.

CASH AND CREDIT.

A grocer in Knoxville, Pa., on the south side, adopted the cash system a few months ago, but finding it would not work, has given it up. His customers are mostly iron and glass workers, who receive their pay every two weeks, at which time they square their bills.

This explains the difficulty of selling for spot cash in a large manufacturing city like Pittsburgh. Workmen receive their wages at stated times. When they get their money they generally pay it out, and have no more until the next pay. In the meantime they are compelled to run bills with the grocer and butcher.

The cash system will eventually be adopted as a matter of economy to both dealers and consumers, but the change will have to be made gradually, as the people become educated up to the importance of paying cash for what they buy.—Pennsylvania Grocer.

We trust the prediction of our esteemed contemporary will come true, that: "The cash system will eventually be adopted." We believe it to be the best plan, but are in doubt as to its displacing the credit system, which can be made a success quite as readily as a business on the cash plan. The success of either system depends upon the man and not the method.

It is exceedingly difficult to change a credit to a cash business, and thousands who try it do just as the Knoxville grocer, go back to the old way. They lack the qualifications requisite to transact a paying credit business. They have not acquired the art of saying "no" in a decided way, without giving offence. They do not supervise credits—inquire into the worthiness of applicants; nor do they render accounts or collect systematically. They dislike to drum a delinquent—they foster balances and carry customers along for fear of giving offence.

In some localities in Pennsylvania there has been an attempt to get the retail grocer to sign an agreement to adopt the cash system. This will never be reached in that way. Our entire commercial system is based on credit, which tends to develop business, besides being a great convenience.

We have recorded the failure of those doing a cash business, quite as often in proportion to their numbers, as we have the bankruptcy of those pursuing a credit plan.

Every grocer should adopt that plan which he can best master. If he cannot make money by selling goods on credit, it is doubtful if he will for cash. Some men will make money by either method. Location has much to do with the policy chosen, and yet we have recorded the success of the cash plan in places where there was little or no promise of its being put in operation. This emphasizes our proposition, that it is the man rather than the method which determines success.—American Grocer.

SMYRNA CANARY SEED.

We had occasion some time since to call attention to the booming market for canary seed and the strong statistical position of the article, but the past two or three weeks has brought about a change which has seriously altered the prospects, and raised some doubt as to the future course of the staple. When the value of an article is forced beyond its normal limit the sale and consumption receives an immediate check. Buyers are willing to follow an advance to a reasonable limit, but when the cost of an article of merchandise is carried to a point that many in the trade regard as extreme, there begins a hunt for substitutes that usually proves successful, and in the end the boomed article drops back into the position it should properly occupy. In our previous article we pointed out the rapid advance in the price of canary seed, influenced by the short crop of last year, and speculative interest which led to the concentration of the world's supply, particularly of the Smyrna product. Though the greater portion was brought under close control, some few parcels were secured by outside holders, who proposed to benefit by the action of the leaders by following up, and taking advantage when the opportunity presented itself for a good turn. As the leading operators engineered the move to gather and control the supply, the price was certainly forced upward at a rapid rate, but when they came to look around for the customary buyers to materialize and relieve their hands of the high cost goods, they searched in vain, for instead of a busy and animated condition of affairs, they were compelled to face a stagnant market, for those in the trade who were previously interested in the goods suddenly became indifferent, and all efforts to draw them out were productive of no good results, the business dropping off to proportions of a retail character. This condition of affairs prevailed up to a few weeks ago, when some few in the trade, tiring of the inaction, began to sound the country for orders. Intimations were at first put forth that certain holders had stock for sale, and that bids a trifle below the quotations of the market might be favorably entertained. This soon became noised about, and it required but a short time to acquaint other holders that efforts were being made to realize, and with the example set, the downward course of prices became rapid, until, as represented by to-day's quotations, the decline has reached fully 33 1-3 per cent., bringing the current value down to 3c. Foreign markets have also receded somewhat, but not to the extent witnessed here. A recent London letter stated, "although our stock of Turkish seed continues extremely small, some holders have taken fright and offered at reduced prices, hence a considerable business has been done. The quotation standing 60s. to 65s. per 464 pounds." It may be remarked that the present position of the article is looked upon by many as a product of bearish influence, and that a change for the better is likely to develop at any moment. The stock the world over is indeed light, London having no considerable quantity, and the primary market almost bare of supplies. The consumption, it is true, is at present very small, packers, from what we are able to gather, having substituted many of the cheaper varieties of bird food in preparing their mixtures. There is yet several months to the new crop, and the principal holders hope that within that time the trade requirements will increase, and more remunerative prices be obtained, while on the other hand there are those in the trade who are free to say that unless the next crop proves an unusually small one, present holders may find it a difficult matter to force an advance to a point materially above the present. As viewed to-day, the situation appears to favor buyers, but a sudden increase in the consumption would probably drive the smaller holders from the market, and give the speculators another hand to regain control of the situation.—N. Y. Bulletin.

FROSTING OF SHOW WINDOWS.

Although rather late in the season, the following extract from the Engineer of London, in regard to the prevention of frosting on show windows may be read with profit by those who have not yet discovered an effective remedy for the nuisance of obscured panes in frosty weather. The journal referred to remarks as follows: In order to prevent the frosting of windows they may be painted with a solution of glycerine in 63 per cent. spirits of wine. Glycerine, like chloride of lime, has the property of absorbing water, and this action overcomes the difficulty. For small show windows sulphuric acid may be employed, as is done in Russia, in the following way: Double windows having two plates of glass with a space of 1-4 inch to 1-2 inch between them. The cracks between the two window frames and around the edge are kept tightly sealed, while several small vessels of proper form, half filled with concentrated sulphuric acid, are left in the space between the plates of glass; any small amount of moisture that may penetrate to this space is absorbed by the strong acid and the air thus kept perfectly dry, rendering the undesirable condensation and freezing of moisture on the cold outside glass entirely impossible. From the outside the double thickness of glass is scarcely perceptible, while the vessels containing the acid may be concealed by skilful decoration. The expense incident to the doubling of the windows limits the application of this method to small windows, however, and, further, a contemporary remarks, the painting of the larger windows with the glycerine and spirits of wine solution answers the desired purpose.

DIAMOND CRYSTAL SALT

THE process by which this Salt is made is different from any other one of the kind in existence. That PERFECTION in the manufacture of such a variable article as Salt should be attained at once was not to be expected, and while the remarkable purity of Diamond Crystal Salt was generally conceded very soon after it was placed on the market, still the manufacturers were obliged to admit that at first it was not in every respect a perfect BUTTER Salt. Although much thought was spent and many experiments made, it was not until after FOUR YEARS of such effort that the trouble was discovered and the defects entirely remedied.

In spite of its defects, however, many dealers in butter, especially those who stored their goods for several months, insisted that this Salt should be used, since they had learned by repeated tests that it was the best Salt they could find for preserving butter and holding its flavor. To their first success—Purity—they have added a second by securing all the conditions essential in a Salt to be used for producing the Highest Grade of Butter.

THE CANNED PEA POSITION.

Advices by cable from Bordeaux state that the drought continues in France, and that the outlook for the pea crop there is disheartening; so much so in fact that some packers have instructed their agents to take no more orders for the canned article. French canners have facilities for packing a great many peas in a short time, should the proper supply of the desirable class of stock be at hand. One firm, for example, has a capacity of 600 cases per day. Hence it can readily be imagined that the prospective shortage would be unlikely to materialize in full should there be a week of full receipts of stock at the factories. According to last accounts, however, the vine has suffered so severely from drought that there is hardly a chance of the necessary supply being secured from the first crop. Should the weather turn for the better a second crop might be planted and the shortage relieved to some extent; but second crops as a rule are not only very late, but undesirable for packing purposes. A significant fact in connection with the reports regarding the crop outlook is that a portion of contracts placed in this market early in season by some agents have been purchased by others very recently, and that spot goods have also been picked up quietly by a few prominent handlers of the goods. This means nothing, if not that well-informed merchants whose interest in peas is considerable are preparing, in a practical way, to guard against the inconvenience of short supplies the coming season. Some varieties of the smaller sizes of American canned are becoming a little scarce also. Certain packs that were unusually fine in quality last year are particularly in request, and the more desirable sizes are so closely sold out from first hands that jobbers find it necessary to "borrow" from each other. By this it is not intended to convey the impression that a pea "famine" is imminent, but facts warrant the statement that the new season will open with no great surplus of old goods, French or American, on hand. Doubtless the opportunity will be offered for American canners to give particular attention to high grade goods the coming season, and be rewarded for so doing.—N. Y. Bulletin.

ATTENTION TO DETAILS.

The details of business are irksome, and the natural desire of the head of an establishment is to escape attending to them. He naturally and rightfully feels that his time is too valuable to devote to these minor matters, but it seems almost impossible to find men to attend to them without the direct oversight of the superintendent or manager.

Subordinates who can and will attend to details thoroughly and reliably will always be highly esteemed, but those who are contented to do so year after year have not the stuff in them of which successful men are made. They lack the breadth of mind essential to the filling of executive positions, or else they lack ambition, and one is as fatal as the other. On the other hand, a man who cannot or will not attend thoroughly and promptly to business when in a subordinate capacity is deficient in one of the most important qualities needed in more advanced positions.

A great deal has been written about the necessity of a close attention to details on the part of the head of the establishment, whether it be mercantile or manufacturing, but there is ground for the belief that not only has this belief been aggravated, but that in a certain sense a close attention to details on the part of the chief is detrimental to business success, in some degree at least.

The successful man is he who knows how to get the details of his business looked after without giving them his personal attention, for it is undoubtedly true that his time and brains can be more advantageously employed in looking after the important general features. It is the worst kind of folly for a five-thousand-a-year man to busy himself continually about work an eight-hundred man can do just as well, and a careful study of the successful man will disclose the fact that he is a man of rare judgment in the selection of subordinates, and makes it his constant aim to get rid of all the details and routine work possible.

The attention of a successful executive to detail must, however, go this far: He must have a thorough knowledge of it in every department of his business, and, while ignoring it as a general thing, must make it a practice occasionally to devote the strictest attention to it, going over it with the subordinate in such a way as to let him understand that the manager is a thorough master of it. In this way he will secure proper attention to it by the subordinate, and if things do not run smoothly and economically he will be able to set them right.

More than two-thirds of the half-way failures in business are due to the fact that the chief fritters away valuable time in watching over trivial things when his attention ought to be devoted to weightier matters. A man has but a certain amount of energy and available working time, and it needs not very deep reasoning to see that if he devotes a large portion of it to minor affairs he will not be able to give the attention which he ought to the work that he is best fitted for.

To be thoroughly successful in a large way a man should be free to watch the situation, to keep a general oversight of all departments, and to make plans for the increase and proper conduct of the business. Ideas are the germs of success, and good ones properly worked out will be found to constitute the difference between the successful and the unsuccessful man.

Time devoted to the study of the market, to learning the tastes of customers, and to noting the tendency of this or that brand of goods is not time thrown away, and neither is time devoted to a proper cultivation of the trade. The successful man must keep abreast of the times, and to do this he must look into the future as far as in him lies, for the future will soon be the present, and not to be prepared for it is to court commercial death.—Commercial Enquirer.

DON'T WORRY.

"A man's business life is too short," says the Grocers' Criterion, "to waste any portion of his time in fretting over any trifling matter of business. If a man has a mind to be annoyed by every little mishap that occurs in his establishment he can keep himself in constant hot water by worrying is neither sense nor reason in flying into a fit of passion because some careless clerk breaks a stone fixture, leaves a fancet running, smashes a jug, or commits some other trifling blunder. Constant fretting on the part of employers makes clerks and bookkeepers nervous, and in this condition of mind and body they are far more apt to make mistakes than they otherwise would be. Business worry wears a man out very rapidly, and when the habit of fussing is once acquired, it is extremely difficult to rid oneself of it. There are men who work themselves into perfect fits of passion over little insignificant matters not worthy of serious thought and consideration. There are other men who fret because they fear something unpleasant is going to happen to their business career. They may have obligations to meet, a note due at the bank, while their customers cannot be depended upon to help them out of a tight corner, but there is no earthly use in borrowing trouble until trouble comes, and then every enterprising merchant should manfully meet it. There is a great difference in merchants. Some wear themselves out before middle life, become irritable, morose, snappish and disagreeable in the conduct of a very small business, while other men, with vast interests and great responsibilities who are calm and well poised, patient and nervy, live to a good old age without borrowing trouble or shattering their nerves over trifles."

REJECTED TEAS FOR CANADA.

It seems that for some time Canada has been made the dumping ground for all teas rejected by the United States and English tea inspectors. During the past ten days the tea inspectors have rejected some 4,200 packages of pingsneys. It was the vilest kind of stuff, and the arbitrators at New York refused to allow it to enter there. It is understood that it is the purpose to also throw these teas on the Canadian market. The Minister of Finance's attention was drawn to the matter a couple of weeks ago, and it is imperative in the interests of the trade that some stringent measure should be taken to prevent a continuance of the pernicious custom.

A WELL ARRANGED STORE.

One of the finest grocery stores between Toronto and Kingston is said to be that of James Craig & Co. of Trenton. THE GROCER is at the moment in receipt of a large photograph showing the arrangement of the interior, and judging from this picture the store is well worthy of the reputation it has attained. The shelving is spacious and unique and the store is shown to be fitted up with the conveniences of a modern first-class grocery and crockery store. Notwithstanding the large stock of goods displayed there is no disorder, for there seems to be a place for everything and every is in its place. The number of seats that there are in view demonstrates that Craig & Co. are anxious for the comfort of their customers as well as their patronage. Merchants can gather some pointers on the arrangement of a store even from a glance at the photograph. The store is 90 by 22 feet.

ENDORISING THE AUTHORITIES.

A meeting of the Canadian Canned Goods Packers' Association was held at the Walker House, Toronto, last Thursday, with W. Boulton, Picton, president, in the chair. The majority of the factories were represented. A number of matters were discussed and a resolution was adopted practically endorsing the action of the authorities in prosecuting those packers and dealers who have been selling "soaked" goods. It was reported that the packers were a new firm and put these goods on the market in ignorance of the law. Considerable discussion took place on the advisability of reducing the canning season's pack, but no definite agreement was arrived at. Many of those present expressed their intention of doing so whether the Association as a whole agreed to it or not.

MONEY INVESTED IN ADVERTISING.

No matter how hard you try to drive it into the craniums of some business men, you can't make them believe that millions of dollars are invested annually in advertising. Here are a few facts and figures, that can be easily verified. For instance, there is Harper's Magazine, which derives a yearly income of $350,000 from its advertising patrons in its twelve issues. Hear's Soap pays $9,000 a year for a single page in the Century. Enoch Morgan's Sons spend annually $300,000 to keep "Sapolio" before the public. As for John Wanamaker, it has long been known that he pays a man $10,000 a year only to write his advertisements. In 1888, no less than $110,000,000 went into newspaper advertising. Perhaps advertising does pay, after all.—Exchange.

THINK THRICE.

Think thrice before you embark in any commercial enterprise, says a contemporary. The decision to engage in a certain trade is but the preparation for the battle, and no hotly contested battle was ever won without the victorious army having perfected all its plans in advance. The merchant's primary object in trade ventures is, of course, the making of money. If he selects a certain branch of trade, he must have well defined reasons for his selection, and unless he knows in advance all the possibilities of failure, as well as the probabilities of success, the prospects will be unfavorable for him. An intelligent and comprehensive idea of the requirements of any line of trade should be obtained before the investment of capital is made.

Think thrice before you decide upon a location. Think first how many people you will have a chance to sell to; think second how many competitors you will have in selling to those people; and think third what kind of goods those people are used to buying. A physician does not locate in a new country where there are but a dozen or so families, nor does he hang up his shingle in a town where it is so healthy that they have to kill a man to start a graveyard, and the wise merchant does not open a store at a point where there is not enough trade to support him.

Think thrice before you purchase your stock. In nearly every store in this country are goods that are practically unsaleable, which were purchased in hopes that a trade could be created for him. It is well to make a test of such goods once in a while, but it is time to purchase in large quantities after the demand has been actually demonstrated.

Think thrice before you fix your prices. You know about how much your annual sales will amount to; you can tell within a few dollars of what your annual expenses will be; you know the personal cost of your living; you have, or ought to have, a very fair idea of your percentage of losses, and you therefore can easily ascertain what percentage of profit you have to make in order to protect yourself. If you can't get prices that will support you, it will be better for you to move to some other town, or close out your stock of merchandise. A slight loss now is immeasurably better than a partial or entire failure after a while.

Think thrice before you grant credit to new customers. Think three times thrice before you grant credit at all. The more readily you adhere to a cash system, the easier you will find it to utter the potent "no" when a doubtful customer wants thirty days' time on ten dollars' worth of merchandise.

Think thrice before you employ a new clerk. Upon the courtesy of your employees a great deal depends. It is better to pay an able, conscientious, energetic and polite clerk fifteen dollars a week, than to pay two incompetent clerks seven dollars and a half a week each.

Think thrice before you decide upon your advertising methods, but don't hesitate a moment when it comes to laying away certain sums for advertising. If you are now so located that advertising is not necessary, you are especially fortunate, but the time will come when you will have to spend money in printers' ink. It is not a question of the efficacy of advertising, but of mediums. Before you invest your money determine what class of people you want to reach, how you want to reach them, and what mediums have the most influence with them.

Think thrice, three times over, before you "dun" a customer by mail, or before you seek to collect by the process of law. There may be some satisfaction in forcing a "dead beat" customer to pay by resorting to legal procedure, but there is very little money in it, and an infinite amount of annoyance.

Ninety-nine per cent. of those who will go to law before they will pay their just bills are law-proof, and a judgment against them is practically valueless.

Think thrice before you discuss your private affairs with your customers. They want to hear about the goods you have to sell, and do not come to your store seeking information about your competitors, or to learn the latest home cure for measles.

Think thrice before you give your promise to "do all in your power" for a friend. If you do all in your power for friends you will have to neglect your own business, and they will never be able to repay you, nor will some of them be willing to repay you.

Think thrice before you ask a favor. If you do everything in reason for yourself, you will have very little occasion to ask others to do anything for you. Think three times thrice before you take money out of a legitimate business to invest it in an uncertain speculation in hope of immense profits, and think thirty times thrice before you indorse the paper of an acquaintance.

WHAT ASSOCIATIONS NEED.

Under the above heading the Engineer has a long article in which a great deal of practical wisdom is displayed. It is shown, and it is the stand we take, that an association must have some definite object in view, which should be adhered to strictly under all circumstances. Associations of business men are formed for the single purpose of advancing the welfare and interests of the members and not to gratify the ambitions of individuals. They are business organizations, co-operating for the common need, and should be carried on precisely as any successful mercantile house conducts its affairs.

Leaders are few; like poets, they are born, not made. Men who have executive ability; sufficient personal popularity to carry the members with them and insure the execution of plans are very few, and when found every means should be taken to retain them. The presiding officer of an association is not to be envied; he cannot expect to please everyone, and should never be elected solely because he is popular. He must have capacity and executive ability, and sometimes the most disagreeable individual has the largest head.

The membership must be loyal to the general welfare. Some measures which have been instituted may bear hardly upon individuals; the benefits of any particular course or policy are not always felt at once, but if the members of the organization are satisfied with the zeal of the presiding officer, they should strengthen his hands in every way and maintain discipline. Unless this is done the best officer it is possible to find will be rendered useless, and the association itself will waste its time and money.

John Campbell having retired from farming is keeping store at Eldon station. "The work seems to agree well with him," says the Lindsay Warder.

The Fredericton board of trade has adopted a resolution to the effect that business men make twenty-five per cent. discount on American silver after this month.

With a barrel of sugar, another of chlorate of potash and a little sulphuric acid, a certain Boston genius proposes to drive a 5,000 ton ship across the Atlantic in three days.

Broom corn promises to be dearer. Two large warehouses—one in St. Louis and one in Cincinnati for storing broom corn—with their entire contents, have been burned.

V. H. English has opened out in the grocery trade at Barrie. He was formerly a clerk for Grocer Vair in the same town. He has a good stand, has a high class of groceries in stock, and his friends say he will do well.

E. J. Vincent of South River, has sold out his store to the South River Lumber Co. Mr. Ard, who was formerly a partner with Mr. Vincent will be manager. The former sold out his interest in the store about three months ago.

Hon. Messrs. Foster and Bowell paid a visit to Eby, Blain & Co.'s wholesale grocery warehouse while in Toronto. They have been visiting several manufacturing establishments in the city, and wanted to see a representative commercial house. Eby, Blain & Co.'s is held to be one of the best appointed wholesale grocery establishments in America. It was first laid out by Hon. Frank Smith, than whom there was no more thoroughly practical man in the trade. When Eby, Blain & Co. bought his business they visited the best establishments in the States for pointers. The ministers expressed pleasure at what they saw.

Mr. Meacham, in moving the second reading of his bill in the Ontario Legislature to amend the Pharmacy Act, said that the clause making retail dealers register the sales of paris green was a dead letter, and he wanted the clause struck out.

California claims third place in the order of the yield of petroleum for the year 1892, with a production of 500,000 barrels of crude oil. Santa Barbara County produced 250,000 barrels; Los Angeles County, 185,000 barrels.

These officers were elected at the annual meeting of the Ingersoll dairymen: President, Wm. Fewster; secretary, W. R. Smith; auditors, T. Winders, J. F. Williams; executive committee, R. Facey, B. Hopkins, L. A. Price, C. W. Riley, John Podmore, J. W. Cook.

Mr. Jaffary of Bolton, has moved his store across the street. None of the stock was removed and the combined weights of the goods and building made it very heavy, the task was completed without even a pane of glass being broken.

In the House a few days ago Sir Oliver Mowat, in answer to a question, said that whilst the matter had been under consideration, still it was not the intention of the Government to introduce a bill during the present session for the purpose of taxing mortgages as requested by the deputation of the Patrons of Industry.

Joseph Fee, grocer, Sumach and King streets, has put a new glass front in his store, and has otherwise improved and beautified his establishment. In consequence of the increase in business Mr. Fee has found it necessary to add another young lady to his staff of clerks, and her good looks are said to attract the young men just as the store and its stock do fastidious housekeepers.

Seven charges were brought against G. J. Schrapnell at the Toronto Police Court Monday, in connection with the canned soaked peas prosecution, but they were laid over for a week until the canners, who carry on business at Springville, can be summoned. Mr. Schrapnell simply sold the goods as an agent.

By a law passed in July last by the Greek Chamber, it is a punishable offence to mark any package containing currants for shipment to any foreign market with any name other than that of the district where they were produced. The British consumer can, therefore, now depend upon getting "Vostizza," "Gulf," or "Patras" currants, should he buy a package which has been so marked in Greece. Formerly all kinds of rubbishy currants, grown on the western coast of the Morea, were branded as "Vostizza," "Gulf," etc., in order to deceive foreign consumers.

THE CANADIAN GROCER has published the canned goods law several times. It is a remarkable fact that not one of the retailers who have been fined for selling "Soaked" goods are subscribers. Several subscribers were approached but refused to handle them when they found what their contents were, though offered at less than the regular market price.

The following officers have been elected by the Guelph Board of Trade. President, Col. Higinbotham; vice-president, James Watt; secretary-treasurer, A. Scott. Council—J. Hallett, H. Murton, T. J. Day, Col. Macdonald, J. E. McElderry, James Innes, M.P., James Goldie, J. M. Bond, A. W. Alexander, G. B. Ryan, James Millar, Charles Raymond.

At a recent banquet of the Manchester, (Eng.), Commercial Travellers' Association, the chairman said that in 1851 there were estimated to be 9,734 commercial travellers in the United Kingdom. In 1881 there were 42,000, and at the same rate of increase would now be 56,000. In the States there were in 1888 between 250,000 and 300,000 commercial travellers.

How few grocers there are who take the trouble to obtain the first name of their customers, and how many there are who fail to charge the items on their day-books, contenting themselves with the fact of having entered them on the cash-book of the customer. Many grocers keep no cash or invoice books and, in fact, if it was to come to the point, could not prove anything about their affairs.

This is a good story from the South. A Savannah drummer says a drummer who had a great dealings with the Macon lawyers went out recently to Rosehill Cemetery and amused himself reading the inscriptions on the tombstones. He finally came across one that read: "Here lies a lawyer and an honest man." Turning to his friend, he said: "Bill, what made them bury those two fellows in the same grave?"—St. Joseph Journal of Commerce.

DRY GOODS.

(From the Dry Goods Review.)

This week has seen a brightening in the dry goods trade. The dullness of the last two weeks in April and of the first week in May has been displaced by a normally active trade. More buyers have been in the market from the larger towns, while the city dealers have placed many orders for immediate delivery. The rural trade has not awakened to any great extent, but a continuation of the present weather for even a short time will work a favorable change.

Then there has been a steady movement in staples, such as cotton goods, and wash fabrics. Men's furnishings, such as summer underwear, collars, shirts, and neckwear, have been perhaps the most active branch of the trade. Small wares are extremely quiet. Laces continue to be shown in large range of patterns and qualities with a fair demand, and with the bright weather, parasols, which have been slow, have begun to move freely. The movement in dress goods has been very fair, though hardly up to expectations. Prints have been also in fitful demand. In dress goods the plain goods find the greatest favor. Some very fair orders have been executed in household linens, such as napkins, tablings, etc.

So far May has been much better than April with regard to payments. But even yet money is not forthcoming as promptly as it should be, especially from the country merchants. Wholesalers are hoping that another week will see an improvement in this matter.

Fall and winter goods are receiving very scant attention from the retailers.

Mr. P. H. Burton has just returned from his European trip. He looks well and hearty. Mr. Dingwell, buyer for the silk department of John Macdonald & Co., has also returned. So has Mr. J. Fraser Macdonald.

NOTES.

A strange sight in the hosiery, underwear, and glove department of W. R. Brock & Co. is a solid pile of ladies' ribbed cotton vests, eight feet square and twelve feet high. It is composed entirely of the goods themselves, no boxes being used, and is the result of an extraordinary purchase of a job line of goods, which probably comprises more dozens than any order ever placed in Canada. This firm seem to know when to make a venture in an extraordinary way, and their success with the line shows careful judgment. They are sending out sample dozens to all merchants who request them to do so.

Alexander & Anderson have opened up repeats of Nottingham lace curtains, Nottingham nets, and coin spot muslins. These goods are the latest productions, and especially suitable for the general trade. In art muslins they are showing an excellent range of especially attractive lines. Cretons and furniture satens are also shown in great variety.

A shipment of flannelette shirts is to hand with W. R. Brock & Co., being a repeat of their leading line, F. 20, which can be retailed at 40 cents. This line seems to be extra value, as they report having received orders for as high as 50 dozens from one customer.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. are clearing out off lots of from one to four pairs of a pattern in lace curtains at 33 1-3 per cent off regular prices. This no doubt will be sufficient inducement to merchants to send in their orders immediately and thus have first choice.

A case of gauntlet gloves in lisle and taffeta is just being opened up by W. R. Brock & Co. These are active goods at present. Another case of the popular lines of Irish Pointe, Guipure, Chantilly and other fancy laces, also veillings and complexion nets are to hand.

The range of black and colored half hose shown by Gordon, Mackay & Co. is one of the best in the trade in point of quality and value. This firm is also showing unsurpassed value in Balbriggan and natural wool underwear.

John Macdonald & Co. are showing a full range of ladies' circulars and men's rubber coats. These goods are of the best quality and at proper prices. Ladies' Windsors are in good demand at present and they are showing good ranges. Blue grounds with white spot, cream grounds with a colored spot, plain creams and whites are the leading novelties.

W. R. Brock & Co. are showing a very large range of embroideries in cambric, namsook, and Swiss effects in edgings, insertions, setts, flouncings, allover, etc. These goods were purchased early in the season before the heavy advances in the Swiss market some months ago.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling are opening up a magnificent range of cretons, art furniture styles, very effective goods. A line of bleachers' jobs in linens is to hand, and they are able to offer it at cut prices. A range of sizes in American quilts is shown, and are attractive goods. Box cloths for dress goods are in good demand, and they show a nice range.

Previous to stock-taking John Macdonald & Co. are offering clearance drives in summer underwear, braces, and top-shirts. These are all this season's goods.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. are showing something new in American white crocheted quilts in the way of an extra heavy weight in floral designs, 1-14 only.

In staples John Macdonald & Co. are cleaning out odd lines. Broken lots of prints are being offered at clearing prices, Ceylon flannels are also being run off; as are also a few gingham. Awning cloths are shown in great variety and in numerous qualities.

TORONTO MARKETS.

TORONTO, May 11, 1893.
GROCERIES.

Trade exhibits a little more life this week. The country roads, although improving, are still bad in some sections, and travellers are still more or less inconvenienced in getting over their routes. Sugars continue to be the feature of the market. There was another advance of 1-8c. a pound on all kinds Monday, and the market is strong at the advance. A better demand has also sprung up, and there may now be said to be a fairly good movement. This is the only line, however, in which increased activity is perceptible. At the same time, however, business generally is fairly good, and the outlook still favors a good healthy spring and summer trade. Canned goods continue steady and unchanged, and much the same applies to coffee. A quiet trade is being done in dried fruits, with the feeling in currants rather easy. The position of the tea market continues strong for low and medium grades. Green fruits are still moving briskly, with pine apples in much better supply and lower. The butter market is weak on account of liberal supplies, while cheese remains quiet and uninteresting. Payments are not yet up to the mark.

COFFEES.

There is no change on the local market. Demand continues light, and stocks of good Rio small. Jobbers have been freer buyers this week. The New York market is a little steadier and the foreign is firm. We quote: Rio, 20 to 22c.; East Indian, 27 to 30c.; South American, 21 to 23c.; Mocha, 26 to 30c.; Santos, 21 to 22c.

DRIED FRUIT.

Demand is on the whole fair, and the only new development is an easier feeling in currants. Advices report that the currant crop in Greece and the Sultana crop in Turkey have been both damaged by frost, in some districts 20 per cent. In France and Spain drought and hot weather is said to be making mischief. On the local market the movement in Valencia raisins is fair at unchanged prices. Some fruit can be obtained as low as 4c. per lb. The idea seems to be 4 1-2c. for seconds off-stalk and 5 1-2c. for fine off-stalk, fancy selected 7 1-2c., and layers 6 1-2 to 7 1-2c. Currants are a little easier, although the fruit offered here at lowest prices is of inferior quality; 5 3-8 to 5 1-2 is the idea for good sound fruit. For prunes the ruling figure is 7 1-2c., and the demand is fair for the season. Dates are quiet and unchanged, with 5 1-2 as the idea.

NUTS.

Much as before. We quote: Brazil nuts, 11 to 11 1-2c. a pound; Sicily shelled almonds, 32 to 35c. a pound; unshelled, 16 to 17c.; peanuts, 13 to 14c. for roasted and 11 to 12 1-2c. for green; cocoa nuts, $5 to $5.50 per sack.

Rice remains quiet and featureless, with 3 7-8c. the ruling figure for ordinary quality. Spices continue in fair demand at unchanged prices. Whole ginger is quoted at 20 to 25c.; pure white pepper at 20 to 28c.; and pure black at 14 to 16c.

SUGAR.

The market continues to gather strength. The refiners advanced prices another 1-8c. on Monday last, making a gain of 1-4c. in a fortnight. For granulated the idea is now 5 1-2c., and the lowest quoted for yellows is 4 7-16c. The refiners won't make concessions, will not sell for future delivery, and, in fact, will not sell anything but what they have in stock, and that at full prices, which are something like 1-4c. below New York. Beets-to-day are 18s. 9d. in London, when about six weeks ago they were quoted at 13s. 6d. It is acknowledged on all hands that the advance in refined has not been in proportion to that of the raw article. Demand is improving, and the movement is now fairly good. One of the features of the week has been the awakening of the Maritime Province refineries, who now that prices have reached their ideas, are beginning to offer sparingly the stocks they have had in store here for the past two months. It is held that there are very few holding sugar here that was contracted for at low prices. This naturally tends to strengthen the feeling on this market.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Syrups are in good supply, with demand small; 2 1-4 to 3 1-2c. is the idea. Much about the same as before applies to molasses. There is not much doing, and prices range from 32c. for Porto Rico to 38 to 48c. for New Orleans.

TEAS.

The position is much about the same, except it be that low grade Japans and black teas are getting stronger. Nothing in the way of black teas can be bought in England and laid down here under 14 1-2c. a pound, while in low grade Indian and Ceylon teas the minimum is around 18 1-2c. Even in the way of futures the lowest at the terminal market, according to latest mail advices is 13c. August. Clearances in England for home consumption have been very large since the budget speech was delivered, and the question as to whether there would be a change in the duty settled. The local market is in good shape. Jobbers have been buying more freely during the week, and there has been more enquiry from the retailers. Merchants are evidently beginning to appreciate the excellent value offering in medium grades of India, Ceylon and China congous. Low grades of all kinds, except young hysons, are neglected on account of the poor value compared with the higher grades. Japans quiet and neglected. We quote: Japans—Low grade and common, 13 to 13 1-2c.; Medium, 17 1-2 to 19c.; fine to finest, 28 to 35c. Blacks—Low grade congous, 14 1-2 to 16 1-2c.; medium, 18 to 23c.; fine, 30 to 45c.; fancy, 60 to 70c.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

Receipts of butter during the week have been liberal, with the tendency of prices downward. Buyers will not take any more beyond what will supply their wants from day to day. Business is, therefore confined to small but numerous parcels. A satisfactory feature to jobbers is the scarcity of pastry butter, which necessitates bakers falling back upon large rolls, for which 16c. is the idea for this purpose. Receipts are largely confined to large rolls, for which 16 to 17 1-2c. is the range of prices. Receipts of dairy tub are confined to an odd one here and there. Farmers' pound prints are plentiful at 18 to 19c. There is no creamery of any kind offering. Some pound prints are coming in, for which 24 to 25c. is obtained, but dairy butter is given the preference on account of the difference in price. There was a little old creamery tub on the market during the week, and it was cleaned out at 17c. The quality of the butter coming in is as a rule good.

In cheese there is simply a retail trade being done. Old stock seems to be pretty well sold out, and only a few boxes of new are arriving yet. Prices remain much about the same, 11c. being the idea for old and 10c. for new.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

Beans.—Dull. Jobbers are selling good navy hand-picked beans at $1.45 to $1.55 and paying $1.40 to $1.50.

Dried Apples.—Without any material change, jobbers paying 4 1-2 to 4 3-4c. and selling at 5c.

Evaporated Apples.—Dull and unchanged. Dealers are as a rule paying 8 1-2 to 9c., and quoting 9 to 9 1-2c.

Eggs.—In good demand and steady at 11 1-2 to 12c., the outside figure being for five and ten case lots.

Honey.—Still no improvement. Extract is quoted as before at 8c. for clover and 5c. for dark.

Poultry.—Still scarce and wanted. We quote chickens as before at 80 to 90c., turkeys at 13 to 14c. a pound, and geese at 8 to 10c. a pound.

Potatoes.—The feeling is firmer at the moment. Deliveries are light on account of farmers turning their attention to seeding, and some dealers here have been caught short. In consequence of this prices are higher. Cars here have changed hands at 80c. on the track during the week, but to-day it is likely 5c. more than this could be obtained. For lots out of store dealers are getting all the way from 90 to $1.

Onions.—Not much doing, and prices are unchanged. We quote: Red, $1.10 a bag, $2 per barrel; yellow, $1.20 per bag, $2.25 per barrel.

Hops.—Not many moving. Jobbers are getting 18 to 20c. for '92's and 14 to 15c. for yearlings.

HOGS AND PROVISIONS.

The market is firmer on dressed hogs, $8.25 to $8.50 being the idea. Arrivals however are not altogether satisfactory as to condition. Smoked meats are in good demand and firm. Barrel pork is scarce. Lard is quoted a little higher. There have been some shipments of hams during the week, but it was said to be to fill contracts previously made.

Bacon.—Long clear, 10 1-2 to 11c.; smoked backs are 13c.; bellies, 13 1-2 to 14c.; rolls, 10 1-2 to 10 3-4c.

Hams.—In good demand and firm at 13 to 13 1-2c. for smoked.

Lard.—Pure Canadian is 13 1-4c. in tubs, 13 1-2c. in pails, and 13 to 13 1-2c. in tierces. Compound 10 to 10 1-2c.

Barrel Pork.—Canadian heavy mess

TRADE MARK

DELHI CANNING CO.

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.

The market remains in about much the same condition as a week ago, as far as the volume of business and prices are concerned. A little more interest has been drawn to it in consequence of some shipments of tomatoes that have been made to the Old Country. If these shipments turn out satisfactory, as from present prospects they will, further consignments will be forwarded. The probable result on a market that is firm is obvious. At any rate the next couple of months will probably determine whether there will be any surplus pack of vegetables. As far as salmon is concerned it is conceded that the stock will be about exhausted by the time the new pack arrives. Demand for tomatoes keeps up. We quote 80c to $1, but the inside figure is for an article of rather inferior quality. Demand is still principally for a medium tomato that will retail three for 25c. There is nothing new regarding peas. Demand continues good at 85c. to $1.40, the outside figure being for the sifted article. Stocks of corn are getting lower and there is little chance of there being a surplus, and some people expect prices to go 10c. higher before the season is out. The packers are said to have practically no stocks on hand. Prices are unchanged at 85c. to $1 for ordinary brands and at $1.40 for honey sweet. Beans, if anything, are in rather better demand, and unchanged at 90c. to $1. Stocks of salmon are getting low and demand is good and prices firm for the better brands. We quote $1.55 to $1.65 for talls and $1.70 to $1.80 for flats, good quality, while light pink can be obtained as low as $1.30. Lobsters are in good demand for the season at $2 to $2.10 for talls and $2.50 for flats. Canned meats are beginning to be more enquired for. Peaches are in fair demand at $2.10 to $2.25 for 2's and $3.25 to $3.75 for 3's. Plumbs are going out fairly well at $1.45 to $1.55. Stocks of apples are light but demand here is slack. Prices are unchanged at 85c. to $1 for 3's and $2 to $2.25 for gallons.

MARKETS—Continued.

mess $20.50, Canadian short cut $21 to $21.50.

Dressed Meats.—Beef fores are 4 1-2 to 5 1-2c., hindquarters 6 to 8 1-2c., veal, 8 to 9 1-2c., lamb 8 1-2 to 9 1-2c.

GREEN FRUIT.

Business continues brisk, principally in bananas and pine apples. Arrivals of pine apples are free, and prices in consequence are considerably lower, although the demand is increasing. Bananas are also a little easier. Oranges are quieter, other fruits taking their place, but there is no change in prices. California apricots are in fair demand at 20c. per box. Apples are a little firmer in consequence of smaller receipts and light stocks of good fruit. A few cars are being shipped to the United States, but the season is over as far as European account is concerned. Prices are higher at $1.75 to $2 for ordinary stock and $2.25 to $3 for choice to fancy. We quote: Oranges—Valencias, $6.50 to $7 per case; ditto, Jumbos, $8.50 to $9 per case; Floridas, $3.25 to $4 per box; Messinas, $3.25 to $4 per box; California seedlings, $3 to $3.25 per box; ditto, Navals, $3.75 to $4.25; lemons, $3 to $4; bananas, $1 to $2; pineapples, extras, 15 to 17c., No. 1, 13 to 15c., No. 2, 10c., No. 3, 8c., California apricots, 20c. per lb, 25-lb. boxes.

MAPLE SYRUP.

The market is overstocked with maple syrup, while the demand is not so brisk. Prices in consequence are easier at 65 to 80c. a tin and 85 to 90c. per imperial gallon. Proportionately there is more doing in sugar than in syrup, and prices are unchanged at 9 to 10c.

SEEDS.

Demand has been gradually falling off during the week for alsike, timothy and red clover, all of which is lower in price. Hungarian, millet and ensilage corn are, on the other hand, receiving more attention. Prime red clover is quoted at $7.80 to $7.90; extra choice, $7.95 to $8, and $8.10 to $8.25 for Mammoth or Large Lake. Alsike runs all the way from $8 to $9.15 for choice. Timothy sells at $2.35 to $2.40 for choice, $2.40 to $2.45 for extra, and $2.60 to $2.75 for unhulled flail threshed.

FISH AND OYSTERS.

Receipts are more satisfactory, and business is beginning to look up. Demand is principally for trout, whitefish and herring. In fact, if customers can get these they usually take no other. We quote as before: Fresh salmon, 20c.; haddock, 6c.; skinned and boned codfish, 6 1-2c.; Labrador herring, $3 per half barrel; shore herring, $2.75 per bbl.; Digby herring, 11 to 12 1-2c.; boneless fish, 4c.; boneless cod 7 to 8c.; pike, 7c.; ciscoes, $1.35 a hundred; finnan haddock, 7 1-2c.; perce, $2 to $3 per hundred, as to size; suckers, $3 per cwt.; blue back herring, $2 to $3 per hundred; oysters, $1.25 for stds., and $1.75 for selects.

HIDES, SKINS, WOOL, TALLOW.

Hides.—There is a weakness in the United States market, but the demand keeps the local market from exhibiting any sympathy. Good selections are quoted at 5 1-4c.

Skins.—There is no change. Jobbers are paying 7 to 8c. for calfskins and selling at 8 to 9c. Sheepskins are nominal at $1.35 to $1.45.

Tallow.—Not much doing. Dealers are paying 5 1-2c. for rendered and selling at 6 to 6 1-4c. Rough is unchanged at 2 1-2c.

Wool.—Fleece is not offering, and there is not much doing in pulled wools. The mills are reported to be still well employed. Fleece wool is nominal at 17 to 19c.; clotting, 25 to 26c.; Canada Southdown,

PETROLEUM.

The Petrolea Advertiser, in its weekly Review, says: "While the engagements of refined in barrels and bulk were not so large during the week past, it is no indication of a falling off in the demand. The requirements of the illuminating oil trade of the Dominion appear to be increasing, especially as this year, in consequence of the emigration veto of Uncle Sam, a much larger influx of consumers is expected to take up their abodes in Canada; and it is therefore more than probable that this year's business will show a very fair increase over the years preceding in the matter of consumption of illuminants and lubricants. Prices remain about the same, 10 cents per Imperial gallon, f.o.b. here. The crude market also remains in statu quo, and drilling operations are not so brisk, partly of course, on account of the very bad weather we have had for the moving of rigs and tools, and there are dozens of derricks that have been laid low by the terrific wind storms which by all reports have been universal in their force and destruction all over this continent. Prices for the raw material f.o.b. refinery are $1.15 per barrel, with the Imperial Oil Co. being the only parties that are re-receiving any large amount of crude oil." Refined, 10c. in barrels, and 7 1-2c. in bulk.

There is no change in the Toronto market. We quote: Canada refined oil, 13 to 13 1-2c.; carbon safety, 17 1-2 to 18c.; Canada water white, 19c.; American water white, 21 to 22c.; photogene, 25c.

MARKET NOTES.

Apples are dearer on the Toronto market.

Surprise soap is quoted lower at $5 per 100 cakes.

McWilliams & Everist have a consignment of 5,000 boxes of lemons on the way.

Smith & Keighley, Toronto, have an inquiry out for one or more cars of evaporated apples.

J. W. Lang & Co. have a line of Ontario tomatoes which they are placing at figures below the market price.

T. Kinnear & Co. have a lot of "Clover Leaf" lobster, an imported article, which they are selling at reasonable prices.

Clemes Bros. have just received a consignment of their famous Mikado and Hercules brands of November cut lemons.

Perkins, Ince & Co. received on Monday some very fine currants in cases, but which were all gone before the day was out.

Thomas Nesbitt & Co. of London, England, in their circular of April 24, report warm summer weather and business fairly good.

Sloan & Crowther have received a shipment of fancy Japan rice, which they quote at 5 3/4 to 6c. It is meeting with a ready sale.

It is said that Ebenezer Roberts, the English confectioner, determined at the beginning of his career that his confectionery should be of the purest possible quality and most delicate manufacture, and the result has proved the wisdom of his resolve.

As a result of showing at the Jamaica exhibition the Delhi Canning Co. is now shipping its fourth order of assorted goods to that market.

Smith & Keighley report the arrival of another shipment of their famous brand of Turkey prunes in cases, which they are selling at 7 3/4 to 9c. according to quality.

The first new (1893) catch Irish mackerel arrived in New York last week. In all, about 50 bbls. were received. The fish counted 170 to 180 per bbl. Some have been resold at $18.

Eby, Blain & Co. have a couple hundred boxes of fancy selected Valencia raisins which they are offering to the trade. It is claimed they are the finest ever imported here.

Delhi Canning Co. have booked orders for 1,000 cases gallon apples for fall delivery in Glasgow. Their agents there write that Delhi goods are bringing 6d. more than any other pack. Our of 3,000 cases there were only two blown tins reported, so that their production has secured a strong foothold on that market.

J. Hunter White of St. John, N.B., having severed his connection with the firm of White & Titus, has opened a brokerage and commission business at 61 Dock street, in the same city. His father, H. B. White, well-known throughout New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, will superintend the business. solicits consignments of all kinds of produce, fruits and manufactured goods.

ST. JOHN, N. B., MARKETS.

ST. JOHN, N.B., May 11, 1893.

A slight improvement is noticed in trade the past week, though the cold stormy weather has interfered somewhat with business. Sugars hold firm. Molasses seems inclined upward. Flour does not show the firmness some anticipated. Oatmeal is higher. The butter supply is hardly equal to demand. Eggs also are easily disposed of.

Rice.—There is not anything new to report; small sales at regular prices have been made at 3 5-8 to 3 3-4c.

Sugar.—Has not been very active, although another advance of 1-4c. is reported. The quotations given are: Granulated, 5 1-4 to 5 3-8c.; extra, 4 1-2 to 4 5-8c.; yellow, 4 1-8 to 4 3-8c.

Dried Fruits.—Prunes are lower and in spots more so: 4 1-2 to 5c.; Valencia off-stalk, 5 to 5 1-2c.; Valencia layers, 6 1-4 to 6 1-2c. Currants are easier at 5 to 6c.

Dried apples, 6 to 6 1-2c.; evaporated apples, 9 to 11c.

Butter.—Market bare of choice stock, which would sell readily at 20 to 22c.

Eggs.—are in demand at 10 to 11c.

Cheese.—A fair enquiry; prices are 11 to 11 1-2c.

Potatoes.—Very few offering, and prices are some higher at $1.75 to $2.40.

Onions.—New Bermuda crates, $2 to $2.25.

Beef plates, $14.50 to $15.50. Pork, P.E.I. mess, $22.50 to $23; American clear mess, $25 to $26. Lard, 11 to 13c.

Fish.—All dry fish are quoted: Codfish, large, $4.25 to $4.40 per cwt.; medium cod, $3.40 to $3.50 per cwt.; pollock, $2.15 per cwt.; pickled herring, Shelbourne, $3.90 to $4.00 per bbl.; $2.25 to $2.30 per half bbl.; smoked herring, 8 to 10c.

PERSONAL MENTION.

B. G. Davis, secretary of the Windsor Grocers' Association, is going on an extended trip to the old country.

William Horner, London, has been on a brief visit to Toronto. If he is as prosperous as he looks he must be making money.

The friends of F. Dean, grocer, Parkdale, will be pleased to know that he has recovered from his recent illness and is now rushing the spring trade.

A. Neilson, Manltowanning, and D. Bickell, Gore Bay, ran down together to make their spring purchases, and as usual did not forget THE GROCER.

Harry Sharp will open out in the grocery business at Oshawa Saturday. Mr. Sharp was formerly manager for J. S. Beaton, of the same place, who absconded recently.

W. Hutchinson, Huron street and Grange road, Toronto, is offering his business for sale. He has found it necessary to do so on account of ill health, and contemplates taking a trip to Europe.

A. H. Scott, manager of the Montreal branch of the firm of Lockhart Watt & Scott, was in Toronto this week. He says that since the opening of navigation there has been a good deal of activity shipping back orders, while immediate business is quiet.

Wm. Atkinson, who has been in business since 1863 in Richmond Hill, has retired, and his place has been taken by his son, W. D. Atkinson. He has been one of the most successful merchants in the country, and has quite a fortune to his credit. He bought his first bill of groceries from Reford & Dillon, who were succeeded by Smith & Keighley. His son is about 28, and has had a lifelong experience under his father, which should be invaluable to him in the future.

A board of trade has been formed at Mission City. About thirty-one persons declared themselves members. H. B. French was elected president for first year; J. McLearn, vice president, R. Peake, secretary, M. DesBrisay, treasurer. The board will work in committees, one for manufactories, one for the streets and roads, and one in the interest of agriculture.

BURNHAM'S CLAM BOUILLON.

FLOUR AND FEED.

TORONTO.

There is a slightly better feeling in flour, but it has not yet led to any increase in business, buyers and sellers being apart. Oats are firm and wanted. Bran is quiet and irregular.

SALESMEN AS COLLECTORS.

Jacob Furth in the Inter-State Grocer writes as follows:

Why is it in business, and in the grocery business particularly, we should ask men to attend to more than one duty, to perfect themselves in more than one branch? We employ porters to pack, bill clerks to make out invoices, shipping clerks to get the goods off, bookkeepers to post, cashiers to handle money, credit men to take care of the credits, but we employ salesmen to sell, attend to reclamations, pass on credits, and do almost everything necessary to the successful run of the business. Can this be doing business in the spirit of the times? Must this not lead to a state of affairs that ultimately turns out to the discredit of both buyer and seller, employer and employee?

Why is it that some houses still continue to collect through salesmen, and why is it that some salesmen still insist on collecting for their houses? The fact is that cancerous growths have engrafted themselves on the body politic of our business, and sham, fraud and hypocrisy are being resorted to on all sides to do business and attract custom in order to avoid obligations and contracts entered into with manufacturers and neighbors. The contract system which when honestly and properly carried out furnishes a living profit to the jobber, and places all retailers on an equal footing, has brought in its wake a system of rebates and allowances which have been degrading and demoralizing.

To our sorrow we are obliged to confess that employers have been willing parties to practices by their salesmen which have made it necessary to cover up evasions that would, if detected, subject them to either penalty or public disgrace. The salesman, in course of time, comes to be at the mercy of the buyer, who refuses to buy anything of him unless a rebate is promised or a cut is made. The poor salesman finds himself in a dilemma.

The devil is on one side of him, the deep sea on the other. If he refuses to comply with the request of the buyer he may lose some trade; if he plunges indiscriminately into the evil of rebating, he loses his own money first, his employer's next, and then finds himself in the clutches of the law. Time and again we have had this trouble, and found that one reason why our men insisted on making collections was that they might hide from us their system and practices of rebating, and buy the favor of their customers by disgrace, attendant on dishonesty and evil practices. Another reason for some country dealers being anxious to settle with salesmen is the cupidity of those who place the knife to the throat of the salesmen, and compel them to make unnecessary, unjust, and dishonest allowances, or lose the order that is temptingly held out to them. On the one hand, the duplicity of the jobber, on the other, the cupidity of the retailer, what is the poor salesman to do? Where shall he find protection and strength against the onslaught made on his honor and on his manhood?

If the merchant objects and stamps his billheads "pay no money to salesmen," it reflects on the credibility and honesty of the salesman; if on the other hand he does not do so, the salesman in the majority of cases is morally too weak to decline receiving money, and the system continues as it has been to the discredit and unprofitableness of the business. There are some salesmen who can be trusted in this respect, but they are exceptions, and they become so after years of training, and after a long practice of the difficult task of saying "no."

Salesmen are subject to temptations which are hard to resist, and when they err and fall, the blame is not theirs alone but must, or should, be shared equally by the buyer who tempts, and by the employer who tempts, and by the employer who tolerates. It is so easy to shrug shoulders, and plead ignorance of practices that are going on in your own house, but is it manly, and is it honest? Let us begin our reformation at home, and if each of us has the moral courage to introduce, and maintain reforms in our own houses, it will not be long before others will follow, and the minority who stay out will do a business so unprofitable, and so unpleasant that the others need not envy them.

NEW PINES.

Three weeks ago the first of the new crop of pines were brought to this port from Havana. Since that time some 40,000 have been landed. Though this quantity may seem large to those not directly interested in the trade, yet it is a very small percentage of the quantity that will be brought forward from the various growing districts during the next sixty days. What are called Havana strawberries are usually first in the field, but Bahama or Nassau fruit is a close second, with Jamaica or Florida following. The crop of Havana this season promises large, in fact, the quantity expected will considerably exceed the average annual importations. The Jamaica crop is not a heavy one, yet an increase from this source is also anticipated. Florida is increasing her acreage annually, and promises to lay down a stock in this market that will top any previous year. The Bahama crop, it is said, will be about three-quarters that of last year, but the importations of the fruit in its natural state will show a heavy falling off for reasons hereinafter stated. The receipts to this time have been well taken care of, as with the opening of spring the heavy western demand sets in, and this, coupled with the requirements of local sections, absorbs the current arrivals. Pines are a fruit that may now be found in this market the whole year round. During the past winter there has been stock carried by those who make a specialty of the goods, with the range of prices standing $5 to $20 for strawberry. With the coming of new crop this range has got materially changed, the first arrivals being held at $10 to $20, the market subsequently easing off to $7 to $17, while at auction some stock has sold down to $5 for the more ordinary grades. The demand as at present experienced is wholly for store purposes, but by the middle of the coming month the canning industry is expected to start up, the packers usually awaiting the height of the season, and full receipts, when they consider it to their advantage to step in and cover wants. Baltimore is the chief centre of the canning industry, and to that market a considerable quantity of this luscious fruit will find its way direct. Those who pack the goods in this vicinity are credited with putting up a higher grade of stock, the leaders making a specialty of glass packing. It is claimed by those in interest that fruit packed at the point of growth is superior in every way to that put up at a distance, the stock not being selected until it has thoroughly ripened, at which point it is handled instantly, thus retaining its full flavor. The company will also have under its control a large percentage of the area planted to pines, and for this season the imports of the raw fruit from that section are expected to show a material falling off this season. The industry, however, appears to be steadily growing, and taking the cue from the Nassau packers, it will probably not be many years before the plantations of Florida will each have a canning annex, with an enterprising Northerner in full command. This has been the secret of the success in the packing of California fruit, and great stress is laid upon the fact that the goods are packed in the midst of the growing crops. If the method of packing peaches, pears, cherries and apricots works well in the orchards of the Pacific Coast, certainly similar good results should be obtained from pines in Nassau and Florida.—N. Y. Bulletin.

A certain grocer who lives within a thousand miles of Vernon had the misfortune the other day to lame his horse. The animal's leg was quite badly swelled, and the genial owner bathed it in liniment. Next morning the clerk was cleaning the horse and noticed a peculiar smell. On going into the store he asked his employer what he had been putting on the horse. "Liniment," laconically answered the boss. The liniment was produced, and proved to be a very fine article of rose water, which he had thoughtlessly abstracted from his wife's closet. He is a little absent-minded, and this accounts for his overlooking the odor of the stuff he was applying. He says he will be "Moore" careful next time.—Trade (Los Angeles, Cal).

TRADE CHAT.

North Bay has adopted the compulsory early closing by-law.

The Toronto Board of Trade has approved of the bill before the Ontario Legislature to tax all capital on the net income.

A. O. Cantin, grocer, Quebec, has assigned. His liabilities amount to about $2,500, and the assets are estimated at about $5,000, nearly the whole of which consists of book debts.

McDougald & Brandon and Arnold & Graham, general merchants of Fenelon Falls, have amalgamated. They intend carrying on a general business, and are putting in a large stock of dry goods.

The Court of Appeal has upheld the Toronto by-law which excludes pedlars from selling on the principal business streets. The matter has been in litigation for over a year, and the city by-law has been upheld all the way through.

As illustrating the close margin upon which wholesale grocery business has been carried on in this city of late, a well informed gentlemen in the trade stated that one concern last year realized but $100,000 net profit on a business of $10,000,000.—N. Y. Bulletin.

William Burley, grocer, Simcoe street, Toronto, has been committed for trial on a charge of fraud, preferred against him by Matilda Brown, a domestic servant. The girl entrusted $350 to the keeping of Burley on the strength of an understanding that they were to be married. Burley meantime, according to the evidence, appears to have had a wife and child living in Detroit.

The Court of Appeal has decided that section 9 of the Ontario act respecting assignments is ultra vires of the Ontario Government and invalid. It provided that assignments should take precedence of judgments and executions. Now, the creditors who can get an execution or judgment out on quick time will not be knocked out by a subsequent assignment.

The sugar Refining Bill which has caused so much discussion in the House of Assembly during the past few weeks was thrown out a few days since, and it now lies as dead as Julius Cæsar. The bill from the outset was a comparatively harmless one, but the dread of creating a monopoly whether real or imagined lurked in the minds of many legislators, and under those circumstances it was little wonder that it was finally tabled, to be heard of no more. The sugar refineries in the Maritime Provinces through their directors and stockholders have asked for legislation to enable them to compete successfully with bigger establishments in the upper provinces, but the Nova Scotian legislature assures them that it is a matter of indifference to the people's representatives whether the people's tea be sweetened by Montreal or Halifax sugar. The sugar stockholders will now have to put their heads together and decide upon the next best thing to be done. —Critic.

CANNED GOODS GOSSIP.

Some authorities reason out that the low price of sugar induced housekeepers to put up their own fruits last year much more largely than before, and that this accounts for the lack of demand for canned fruits the past six months. We doubt this, although these are some suggestive facts in connection with it. Statistics published recently show that with sugar at 7c. per lb. retail, the consumption was 25 lbs. per head per annum, but when the price fell to 5c. per lb. retail, the consumption rose to 60 lbs. per capita. It is difficult to believe that there could be an annual increase in consumption of 35 lbs. per capita, in the short space of two years, or 140 per cent. Yet such an increase would call for about $1.25 per head expense in sugar—or $5 per family, which is rather heavy. The probability is that the factory use of sugar greatly increased with the reduction in price. It will be well for fruit packers to keep well informed on this matter, for if cheaper sugar means an injury to the canning business, it will be the very reverse of what was anticipated. — The Trade.

"Carrying coals to Newcastle," or something akin to it, is the latest novelty in the market for canned tomatoes. The novelty is nothing less than the return of several thousand cases of fine Jersey tomatoes from England to new first class American tomatoes have gained a footing in the foreign market of late and, according to some accounts, are likely to meet larger sale there in the future, providing prices are kept within certain bounds. At present, however, $1.15 per dozen in New York pays the foreign holders a better profit than do current selling prices in their own market. Hence shipments thence to this side of the Atlantic. As far as could be learned, the shipments will not exceed a few thousand cases and it is not believed that the entire quantity is heavy enough to have much force as a factor in regulating prices for spot goods.—N. Y. Bulletin.

Anxiety as to what prices the Alaska packers combine will make for 1893 season pack salmon remains unsatisfied, says a contemporary. It is rather early for any anxiety on that point, however, since the season's expeditions to the packing points have been but partially sent out, while facts are not wanting to show that there is enough salmon on hand to supply a good average demand for several months ahead. Aside from this, the combine must necessarily keep a watchful eye upon the "outside" Alaska canners, upon the doings of their friends on the Columbia River, and last, but not least, gain a fair idea as to the probable pack in British Columbia. The latter is a very important matter in connection with export business, since nearly all the Fraser River fish is sold in foreign markets. The "outside" Alaska and the Columbia River goods have more or less bearing in both foreign and home markets, so that the pack of the two, along with the British Columbia pack, deserves serious attention, and the fact that the combine refrain from quoting prices indicates that they are alive to the situation.

HOW HE SHOWED HIS LOVE.

In these days of business women as well as of business men, it is becoming evident that a readjustment of certain social and economical questions is necessary. It has in fact taken place in at least one family, where each side of the house earns an income.

The husband was ill not long ago and his wife was his devoted and untiring nurse. On his first outing upon his convalescence he felt that he would like to testify to his gratitude and appreciation in some tangible way.

What did he do? Pick out a bunch of roses, a book, or a trinket for her adornment? Not at all. He bought a box of candy and paid the gas bill, which, in the division of the household expenses, fell to her share.—Boston Globe.

CRITIQUES ISSUE MAY 5.

The man who writes on marking down slow sellers, rather than goods in constant demand, may be all right theoretically, but, as a fact, do you not think that people recognize more readily a cut they know to be genuine, rather than a stranger's?

The fact of the matter is this: Your systematic and reckless cutter soon quits business; and the man who remains is he who does his cutting in a business like and discriminating way. Cutting is a fine art and worthy of all study. For instance, goods cut ~~one week~~ need not be kept down always. None surely will object if a leaf from bargain-day usages is taken in this matter.

I really think that a plentiful supply of butter is to be preferred by the grocer, as it is consequently low, a good seller, and a first-class drawer of trade.

I have again offended, apparently when before is not stated, but this time I have evidently wounded the feelings of the mixer who goes around making glad the hearts of the various grocers upon whom he calls. I apologize. If it is done, it can be done, and even if the whole twenty-four hours are taken up, I have no doubt but that everyone is satisfied. If I expressed a wish to have him call I recant, as his time must be all too short even now.

It is just such rot as is contained in a letter in this issue anent tea-testing that makes one weep, not only for the lamentable lack of common sense and courtesy, but also for the evident want of a common school education in some so-called grocers. A more miserable specimen of scribble does not exist. I have no desire to attack anyone except under my own name, but this is such a flagrant case of illiterate nonsense that I could not in justice pass it.

Indigo blue used to be all the go. Now how many sell it as it comes?

I am glad to see that our old friend Sontum of Norway is in this country again. He is a splendid fellow all round.

Curious errors in asking for goods continue to crop up. A person asked this week for "Canterbury" cocoa. "Exaggerated" sugar and "consecrated" lye are common requests. Once Early "ohoho" potatoes were wanted, as were also yellow "daniels" onions, and only once "Patagonian" rice was the article required. Biscuits with "bugs" in them and "lively" sugar are in constant demand. These may seem extreme cases, but nevertheless they are all true. Probably the woman who thought that a little box of boneless codfish would make nice wedding present takes the palm for comicality. Truly one's life is full of variety behind the counter!

STRAIGHT MOYUNE.

FIDELITY AN ELEMENT OF SUCCESS

"I have the entire political backing of the machine in this country," said a deputy to his chief because he had been upbraided for not attending to his work properly. "Machine or no machine, you will do your work satisfactorily; be here on time, and not leave before your desk is cleared of its daily work, else I will get someone else," was the chief's response.

It has always been supposed that a political office was a sinecure, which meant large pay and no work. The utterances of Secretary Carlisle not to have in his department any drones or those who did not earn their money has been found to be contagious, as the above conversation shows. A man holding a political position should be as faithful in the discharge of the duties connected with that position as any one holding a secular position.

One of the vital mistakes so many young men make, and that wrecks, so to speak, their whole future, is in just such cases as this. They see nothing wrong in pilfering a few minutes, morning, noon and evening, from their employer, and if asked to remain overtime do it with a grace which indicates they ought to be paid for it.

A prominent grocer was asked what had become of his errand boy, and the answer was: "Discharged. He spent too much time loitering when he was sent out with orders." Now, it will not be a difficult matter to follow that boy's course. When he grows older he gets a position as a clerk he will be of the kind we have already described. A clerk who is late in getting to his duties and forever watching the clock while discharging those duties, is not going to make a successful business man. We care not what his abilities may be, this one evil, figuratively speaking, will kill him.

Take the case of any one of the successful merchants in this country to-day and it will be found that as boys they were always promptly on hand and the last to leave at night. We know men to-day in this city who are now merchant princes. Time was when they were clerks, then salesmen, and in that position when evening came did not feel their work was ended, but late at night they could be found selling goods, filling up their order book. The employers of these men needed not to be told that these men were working late into the night. Was their work appreciated? The number of partners in business to-day proves that it was. Take the early life of any successful business man as a guide and one of the very first things that will be noticed will be punctuality in fulfilling all duties, and that was the chief corner stone upon which a successful business career was built.—American Grocer.

GENEROUS DEALING.

Be generous to customers in the matter of exchanging goods. They may be very mean, and unreasonable about it, but do not let them know you think so. If they are dissatisfied—often because of their own lack of taste and judgment—try to please them with something else. Talk generously—be anxious to do the fair thing—and they will in many cases be disarmed and get over their exacting mood. I know a lady who bought cloth for a dress; when she got it home and spread it out and studied its possibilities, she was disappointed. She was afraid it wasn't the latest style; that it would not be becoming to her, and a score of other vain worries. The more she thought of it, the more discontented she became. She resolved to take it back. She went over in her mind the conflict she would have with the salesman. It would be a row, and she would have a very unpleasant time, of course. But she would never, never wear the thing if she had it made. She screwed her courage up to the point of a scene, and in the most stubborn and defiant spirit took the bundle and went down town. She was met in a very affable way by the man who sold her the dress.

"Didn't like the gown?" he asked, "that is curious."

"No—not at all. I want you to take it back."

"Very well," opening the roll, "we shall have no trouble in selling the pattern. It is really one of the most desirable ones we have. Madam Y—" (naming a fashionable woman) "has just bought one—only of another color."

The critical and disgruntled woman began to feel she had made a mistake. Instead of a fight with the salesman, he was almost too willing to take the goods. She began to think she wanted that very pattern more than any other. It ended in her having the same goods sent again to her house. Now, if that merchant had been obstinate or reluctant, she would have moved heaven and earth to compel him to do as her changing whim dictated. He was obliging, generous, willing and anxious to please—the wisest way always to deal with a difficult customer.—American Storekeeper.

A COMMON FAULT.

When a person enters a store with the evident intention of "looking around" let him look around to his heart's content. Many clerks when they see a possible purchaser looking at books or at toys, novelties, etc., will step forward and ask in an almost impertinent manner:

"Anything wanted?"

The natural reply is, "I don't know whether there is or not; I'm trying to find out."

Instead of privileging the customer to examine the various articles at his leisure, merely remaining near enough to answer his questions promptly, these inexperienced salesmen stand over him and act as a sort of sentinel on all his actions. They manifest impatience, and almost say, by their look and attitude, "Well, hurry up! If you don't want anything, move along, and get out of my sight."

A customer does not always want to be haunted by a clerk at his elbow. There are times when he prefers to wait on himself, and there are times and places when the clerk should understand that it is best to let him wait on himself. Above all things the clerk should avoid giving offense. Don't do anything to irritate a customer. Simply try to please him. Study his present humor, and gratify it. Make him feel that he is welcome—that you are pleased to have him examine the stock in your department. Do this, and maybe you will win a steady patron and gain a friend.—Commercial Tribune.

A grocer tacked upon his door a bit of paper; this it bore, "Boy wanted! At the desk apply, pay sure—at first not very high" within two days at early morn a grocer baby boy was born. His little brother wild with joy, said to his father "Here's your boy! Take down the notice on the door, for you won't need it any more." Then added this: "We've got a prize! Now don't it pay to advertise?"
